

UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH

LIBRARY

HISTORY

OF THE PROVINCE

O.F

MASSACHUSETS-BAY,

FROM THE

Charter of King WILLIAM and Queen MARY,

IN 1691,

Until the Year 1750.

By MR. HUTCHINSON,

Lieutenant-Governor of the Proviace,

BOSTON, NEW-ENGLAND:

Printed by THOMAS & JOHN FLEET, in Cornhill, and Sold in Union-Street, opposite to the Cornfield, MDCCLXVII.

" LI 1" HISTOR EUT IN Dar FGT V. 2.) c.op.1 e The Provide Contraction Parts Parts 7) 27 BE # 5 and and the second of the alate, T MORNEDTUTE OF VE WINTE CHEN DIDNICO The share prove the second and the second ALCOLULA ..

CONTENTS.

THE PREFACE. Page i.

CHAP. I. From the Charter in 1691, until the arrival of Governor Dudley in 1702. Page 1.

CHAP. H. From the arrival of Governor Dudley, in 1702, to the arrival of Governor Shute, in 1716. P. 134.

CHAP. III. From the arrival of Governor Shute, in 1716, to the arrival of Governor Belcher, in 1730. p: 217.

CHAP. IV. From the arrival of Governor Belcher, in 1730, to the reimburfement of the Charge of the Expedition against Cape Breton, and the abolition of Paper Money, in 1749. P. 369.

APPENDIX.

NUMB. I. A Summary of the Affairs of the Colony of New-Plimouth, from the first Settlement until the Incorporation with Maffachusets Bay, Gc. in one Province. p. 449.

NUMB. II. The Examination of Mrs. Ann Hutchinfon at the Court at Newtown, November 1637. p. 482.

ERRATA.

Page 105, line 42, for or their read of envy, p. 147, l. 36, for children r. grand children, l. 37, for father's r. grand father's, p. 216, l. 21, for 87 r. 77, p. 400, l. 6, for line r. time.

The PREFACE.

(i)

THE conftitution and hiftorical occurrences of the colonies in America become, every day, more and more, fubjects of fpeculation in Great-Britain. To this I attribute the favorable reception given, there, to my hiftory of the colony of Maffachufets-bay, which I intended meerly for the benefit of my own countrymen, and to preferve, among them, the remembrance of facts but little interesting to the rest of the world.

THE perufal of the materials from which I composed my work, especially the letters and papers of our first planters, afforded me a very fensible pleasure. We are fond of prolonging our lives to the utmost length. Going back to so familiar an acquaintance with those who have lived before us, approaches the nearest to it of any thing we are capable of, and is, in some fort, living with them. I was so pleased with their company, that the further enjoyment of the same kind of pleasure was inducement enough to collect and peruse materials for the history of the Province of Massachusets from the year 1692, when we concluded the history of the Colony.

Colony. I found that a little more time, than the bare perusal required, would be sufficient to, arrange the materials and reduce them to order, and I fet about it with a view to render them of use to posterity. I had proceeded as far as the year 1730, when a misfortune befel me which had like to have rendered my past labour of no effect and to have prevented me from proceeding any farther. The stamp-act had disturbed the minds of the people of America. In fuch a state of affairs, the vicious, the abandoned have a peculiar opportunity of gratifying their corrupt affections of envy, malice and revenge. I had in public and private, in every way and manner which appeared to me the most prudent, endeavoured to shew the inexpediency of an act of parliament of this nature, but an unaccountable jealoufy of the contrary had been infused into the minds of the populace, and, being thus mifguided, they expressed their refentment and rage by breaking into my house, destroying and scattering all my furniture, books, papers, &c. The fober virtuous part of the province expreffed the greatest detestation of this act of violence, and few or none ventured to justify or approve of it. The lofs which I fustained, as far as it was reparable, by his Majesty's most gracious recommendation to the province and their generous grant in consequence of it, both which, in this public manner, I most gratefully acknowledge, has been repaired or compensated, but the lofs of many papers and books, in print as well as manuscript, besides my family memorials, never can be repaired. FOR

11 11

The PREFACE.

For feveral days, I had no hopes of recovering any confiderable part of my history, but, by the great care and pains of my good friend and neighbour the reverend Mr. Eliot, who received into his house all my books and papers which were faved, the whole manufcript, except 8 or 10 flieets, were collected together and, altho' it had lain in the street scattered abroad several hours in the rain, yet so much of it was legible as that I was able to fupply the reft and transcribe it. The most valuable materials were lost, some of which I defigned to have published in the appendix. I pray God to forgive the actors in and advifers to this most favage and inhuman injury, and I hope their posterity will read with pleafure and profit what has fo narrowly escaped the outrage of their ancestors.

THE hazard which attends fuch papers, together with the request of many of my friends, induced me to publish my manuscript sooner than I intended.

I have carried down the ftory to the year 1.750, but that part which relates to the last 20 years in a more general way, being deprived of fome papers which would have enabled me to render it more particular and circumstantial.

SOME of my friends of the colony of New-Plimouth took it unkindly, that I faid no more of their affairs in the first part of the history. My principal object was the Massachusets colony; besides, I never could meet with many papers relative relative to Plimouth. From fuch papers as I have been able to obtain I have prepared the best fummary I could, to which I shall give a place in the appendix.

The PREFACE.

I have endeavored to avoid offence to any perfons or families, as far as my obligations to truth would permit.

WE shall never be all of one mind in our political principles. I defire no more candout from those who differ from me, than I ever have been, and ever shall be ready to shew to them.

CHAP. I.

CHAP. I.

(1)

From the Charter in 1691, until the arrival of Governor Dudley in 1702.

BRIEF recapitulation of the rife and progress of the Maffachufets colony, may not be an improper introduction to this fecond part of our history.

THE first planters of the Maffachulets colony removed to America, expecting, there, to enjoy civil and religious liberty, in a greater degree than their fellowfubjects, at that time, enjoyed it in England. The country, to which they removed, was claimed by the crown of England, by right of discovery. The property of a very large tract, in which Maffachulets bay is contained, had been granted to a certain corporation called the council of Plimouth in Devon. This council made a grant of Massachusets bay to Sir Henry Roswell and others, who intended to fend out planters and fer= vants to be under the direction of the proprietors in England. An incorporation was thought neceffary, and a charter was obtained from King Charles, which, fome manufcripts fay, coft the company two thousand pounds sterling.* The principal undertakers were puritans: Planters and ministers, of the fame persuasion, together with fervants, cattle, and all neceffaries for beginning a Vol. II. B colony;

* "I paid 50!. and Mr. Eaton 100!. and fundry other merchants the fame fums respectively for the purchase of the charter, we being members of the corporation for N. E." John Dadosi port's lett. to John Cotton, N. Haven, 24. 4^m. 65. 2 colony, were fent over; the expence of which was very great. Subfcriptions were flowly paid, and a cloud arofe, very early, upon the affairs of the colony; but it was foon difpelled by a propolal from Johnson, Winthrop, and feveral other puritans of good families and estates, to remove to America; provided they might carry the charter with them, and manage the alfairs of the colony without any dependence upon fuch of the company as fhould remain in England. This, by fome, was thought irregular; but, after confultation, was agreed to. The removal of fo many perfons of character induced a great number of others, of the fame opinions, who were not of the company, to remove with or follow after them, and put themfelves under their protection and government. They complained of the then reigning Prince, that he deprived his subjects of their just rights, and had no regard to the great charter of the kingdom. What dependence then could, rationally, beplaced upon a special charter to a small part of his sub-jects in America? They were soon convinced that it was an infufficient fecurity. A circumstantial account of an attempt to vacate it the fecond year after their removal, we have in a letter to the governor from Emanuel Downing, father of Sir George Downing. +

IN 1638, a formal demand was made of the furrender of their charter, which was refused, and other proceedings followed, which would have iffued in a final decifive judgment carried into execution, and probably have proved fatal to the plantation, if the change of affairs in England had not prevented. Upon this change, the colony became a favorite. The principal men were the intimate friends of the leading members of parliament, Pym, Hambden, &c. who had been engaged with them, and from time to time were expected to join them. Whilft Cromwell ruled, he shewed them all the indulgence they defired.

FROM

† This was a very fenfible letter, and I intended to have printed it, but it was unfortunately defroyed.

FROM 1640 to 1660 they approached very near to an independent commonwealth; and, during this period, compleated a fystem of laws and government, the plan of which they had before laid and began to execute. In this they departed from their charter; and inftead of making the laws of England the ground work of their code, they preferred the laws of Moles; and, notwithftanding the charter knew no reprefentative body,* they established one; and, although it gave them no power to judge and determine capital offences, they gave this power to the judicatories they erected. This last provision became necessary, from their distance from the judicatories in England; but I know not how to excufe the perfecution of all who could not conform to their religious eftablishment, when their charter granted toleration to all christians, except papist.

For the first 30 years, although the governor and affistants were annually chosen by the body of the people, yet they confined themfelves to the principal gentlemen of family, estate, understanding and integrity; but, as one faid, who lived at that time when King Charles commanded them to fill up their numbers in government, which they had neglected, the new perfons impowered were Dii minorum gentium; and one of their divines told them in public they were in danger of being undone by creeping states.

UPON the reftoration, not only epifcopalians, but baptifts, quakers, Gortonifts, &c. + preferred complaints against the colony; and although, by the interest of the Earl of Manchester and Lord Say, their old friends, and of fecretary Morrice, all puritans, King Charles confirmed their charter, yet he required a toleration in religion and an alteration in civil matters, neither of which were fully B 2 complied complied with. The heirs of Ferdinando Gorges and of John Mafon alto complained, that, by a liberal conftruction, the Maffachufets had extended their bounds to comprehend the provinces of Main aud New-Hampfhire. Commiffioners were fent over in 1665, to fettle the bounds of the colonies and to make enquiry into their state in general. The Maffachufets denied their authority, and pronounced the commiffion a violation of their charter.

* Douglass in his Summary p. 409. 1st part, speaks of representatives of townships in the old charter. He is erroneous.

3

NOTWITHSTANDING the acts of parliament for regulating and reftraining the plantation trade, a constant trade was carried on with foreign countries for contraband and enumerated commodities. This gave great offence. There was no cultom-houfe. The governor was the naval officer, with whom or his deputy all veffels entered and cleared. The governor, being annually elected by the people, was the more eafily difpofed to comply with popular opinions. It feems to have been a general opinion that acts of parliament had no other force, than what they derived from acts made by the general court to effablish or confirm them. This could not confift with the charter. By this, they could make no laws repugnaut to the laws of England. ‡ Had the corporation continued within the realm, as was intended, the company and every member must undoubtedly have been subject to the law of the land. Upon complaint made by Edward Randolph, who first came over in 1676, and by repeated orders from the crown to conform to the acts of trade, they passed an act or law of the colony, declaring that those acts should be executed there. For feveral years, they were threatned with the loss of their charter. Randolph was unwearied in folliciting against them. § By repeated addreffes and agencies, they endeavoured

This claufe has been conftrued, by fome, in another colony (Rhode Ifland) to intend the common law only, and not flatutes, especially not such as were made after the date of their charter.
 Mr. Randolph had the principal share in bringing forward the quo warranto against the charter, which seems to have rendered deavoured to exculpate themfelves, but to no purpofe. In 1684, by a judgment or decree in chancery, their charter was declared forfeited, and their liberties were feized into the King's hands; and whatever opinion fome had formed, that their fubjection depended upon mutual compact between the crown and the colony, they were forced to fubmit to fuperior power and to fuch form of government as King Charles the fecond and his fucceffor . King James thought fit to establish. Upon the first advice of the landing of the Prince of Orange, they reaffumed their charter, and earneftly follicited a re-eftablithment of it, with fome neceffary additional powers : but the King could not be prevailed upon to confent to it. A new charter was obtained; from the arrival of which, this fecond part of their hiftory is to be carried on. But before we proceed it will be proper to observe the difference between the new and the old charter, with respect to the territory and to the powers of government. The new province contained the whole of the old colony, without any deduction or referve; and to this were added the old colony of New Plimouth, the province of Main, the province of Nova Scotia, and all the country between the province of Main and Nova Scotia, as far northward as the river St. Lawrence, alfo Elizabeth islands, and the islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard. A vaft exposed frontier must bring heavy burthens upon a government. In the courfe of fixty years, the province of Maffachusets-Bay hath been at greater expence and hath loft more of its inhabitants than all the other colonies upon the continent taken together.

THE two colonies of Maffachufets-Bay and New Plimouth were tolerably well peopled; but the province of

B dered him odious, more than the fhare he had in the fucceeding administration as one of Sir Edmund's council. When he was imprisoned and applied for bail, the house of representatives, June 25. 1689, voted " that Mr. Edward Randolph is not bailable, he having broke a capital law of this colony in endeavouring and accomplishing the fubversion of our govern-ment, and having been an evil councellor."

Main

Main had never been flocked with inhabitants; and, juft before the new incorporation, had been depopulated by the wars with French and Indians. The whole province of Nova Scotia was destitute of British inhabitants; and although there were feveral thousand French, who had been lately conquered, yet they were a burden, and there could be no dependence placed upon their fidelity. From the time of the conquest of Nova Scotia, the Massachufets colony had confidered the inhabitants as part of the colony, and had given commissions and instructions to perfons for the exercise of government there. All the lands, between the province of Main and Nova Scotia, were uninhabited, except at and near Pemaquid, where there were a few fcattering English; and upon the principal rivers, the Penobfcot, Machias and Norridgawock Indians had their wigwams. The bounds of this vaft territory were understood, to be the river Saint Lawrence on the north, the colonies of Rhode Island and Connecticut on the fouth, the atlantic on the east, and the fouth fea on the weft; but within these limits lay the provinces of New Hampshire * and New York. In the controverfies with feveral of the other governments, it has been urged against the Massachusets, that their western boundary could be extended no farther than where

* Whilft the event of the Maffachufets follicitations was uncertain, New Hampfhire lay still. Samuel Allen, who claimed the foil by purchase from John Mason's heirs, was in expectation of a commission for the government also, and opposed the motion of the Maffachufets agent for including New Hampfhire in the fame charter with the Maffachufets, &c. alledging that the inhabitants were averse to it. As soon as the tenor of the charter was known, addreffes were fent over to Sir Henry Ashurlt from the affembly of New Hampshire, and from the inliabitants in general, praying that his Majefty would annex them to Maffachulets government. Encouragement to hope for fuccefs was given by Lord Nottingham, but the King, however friendly to the liberties of the nation, was lefs difpoled to enlarge the privileges of the colonists than fome of his ministers. This plainly appeared to the Maffachufets agents. It was finally determined that New Hampfhire fhould be under the fame goveran with the Mallichulets, but not with the fame privileges.

7

of

the line met with Rhode Island or Connecticnt. The words in the charter are, " from the atlantic towards the " fouth fea or westward as far as the colonies of Rhode "Island, Connecticut and the Naraganfet country," The Maflachufets colony was the northern boundary of Rhode Island and Connecticut; it was impossible therefore, the new province which contained the whole of the old colony fhould, generally, be bounded weft upon either of those colonies; and it would be a strange construction, to fuppole a corner of Rhode Island colony, which is but a few miles from the atlantic, to be the utmost limits the province was to extend weftward; for it could then contain but a very fmall part of the old colony of Maffachufets, whereas the whole is expresly included. The only fenfe the words can bear, undoubtedly, is this, viz, that the province shall extend as far towards the fourth fea or westward as Rhode Island or Connecticut do extend. Naraganset country, although it lies between Rhode Island and Connecticut, is mentioned after Connecticut, becaufe it was then claimed by that colony, as within the bounds of their charter; and the Maffachufets agents favoured that claim, and confidered it as an appendage to Connecticut.

THE Governor, under the old charter, altho' he carried great porte (fodoes the Doge of Venice) yet his fhare in the administration was little more than that of any one of the affistants. He had the power of calling the general court upon urgent occasions, fo had the deputy governor or major part of the affistants, if the governor did not think fit to do it; but he could not adjourn, prorogue or diffolve the court; the vote of the major part of the whole court was necessary. He voted with the affistants, and if there was an equal vote, his vote was twice counted to make a casting vote. He gave commissions to civil and military officers, but this was meerly a ministerial $a \mathfrak{A}$, in which nothing was left to his difcretion, all officers being elected by the general court. Under the new charter, there must be an annual meeting of the general court, on the laft wednesday in May; but the governor calls an affembly at any other times he thinks proper, and adjourns, prorogues and diffolves at pleasure. He has no vote in the legislature, and does not, or regularly should not, interest himself in matters in debate, in council, or in the house; but no act of government is valid without his confent. He has the appointment of all military officers, solely, and of all officers belonging to the courts of justice, with the confent of the council; other civil officers are elected by the two houses, and he has his negative; no money can iffue out of the treasfury but by his warrant, with the advice and confent of the council.

B 4

THE affistants or councellors, under the old charter, were annually elected by the votes of all the freemen in the colony ; they were not only, with the governor, one of the two branches of legislature, but the supreme executive court in all civil and criminal caufes, except in fuch cafes where, by the laws, an appeal was allowed to the general court. The new charter provides, that upon the last wednesday in May annually, twenty eight councellors shall, by the general court or affembly, be newly chosen. At the first election, it was made a question, whether, by the general court or affembly, was intended the house of representatives only, or the whole three branches, and it is handed down to us, by tradition, that after fome time spent in meffages and replies, the council of the former year gave up the point, and fent Major Walley, one of their number, to acquaint the house with it; but when he came to the door he heard the Speaker putting the question to the house, and finding they had conceded to the council, he returned without delivering his meffage ; and a committee coming foon after from the house to bring up the vote, the council, by this accident, retained a privilege which they have been in the exercise of ever fince ; + and, no doubt, t It feems by the records that the governor voted this year with the council and house.

MASSACHUSETS-BAY.

doubt, it is in a great measure owing to this, that any great change in the council has been rarely effected, even when there have been very warm altercations between the two houses the preceding year. It is very difficult to form a second branch of legislature, analogous to the fecond branch in the British constitution. The colonies are not ripe for hereditary honours, otherwife there feems no more room for exception to them there, than in Ireland. In the charter governments, of Connecticut and Rhode Island, this branch is more dependent upon the people in general, than the house of representatives; the first being elected by the freemen in general, the last by the freemen of their feveral towns; and there have been inftances, in those colonies, where the reprefentatives have had virtue enough to withstand popular prejudices, when the council have not. In the royal governments, as they are called, the council can fcarcely be confidered as a diffinct branch; frequently they receive their appointment from the recommendation of the governor; they are always liable to be fuspend-ed by him, and if it be without fufficient cause, the remotenels of the colonies from the place where redrefs is to be obtained, and the expence of folliciting it, are, very often, fufficient to difcourage from applying for it. In the Maffachusetts, this branch is dependent both upon the governor and people, and we have feen, at different times, the influence of the one or the other over this branch, according to the degree of fpirit and refolution which has respectively prevailed. We have seen instances also of councellors, who have had fortitude enough to refift an undue influence from either, and who from year to year have had violent opposition to their election. We have feen fo many good men members, that I may not give the epithet to this branch which is fometimes ufed for the fmall boroughs in England. But we have often feen, that the most likely way to fecure a feat for many years is to be of no importance, and therefore it must be pronounced defective. Neither in the Massachufets chusets, nor in the royal governments, do we meet with that glorious independence, which makes the house of Lords, the bulwark of the British constitution, and which has fometimes faved the liberties of the people from threatned encroachments, and at other times put a stop to advances making upon the royal prerogative.

THE reprefentatives, under the old charter, were elected by freemen only; under the new, every freeholder of forty fhillings fterl. a year is a voter, and fo is every other inhabitant who has forty pounds fterling perfonal effate. The fpeaker of the houfe was at first elected and took his place without any notice to the governor; and for many years after the prefent charter, there was only the formality of notice, until difputes, upon other points with the governor, caufed him to infiss upon his right of negativing the fpeaker, which the houfe was obliged, after a long ftruggle, to fubmit to. WE find nothing, in the new charter, of an ecclefiafti-cal constitution. Liberty of confcience is granted to all, except Papists. The agent supposed, that the power, given to the general court to make laws, was fufficient for fupporting and encouraging fuch modes of worship and fuch form of church government as should be most agreeable to the inhabitants in general.1 At the first feffion of the general court, an act paffed, eftablishing all the local laws of the Maffachufets province, until other provision should be made. By this law, the platform of church discipline, among the other laws, was established, but the law was disapproved in England. At the next feffion, by another law, it was enacted, " that the refpec-" tive churches, in the feveral towns within this province, " fhall, at all times hereafter, ufe, exercife and enjoy all " their privileges and freedoms, respecting divine worship, " church [‡] Religion is fecured, for liberty is granted to all men to worfhip God after that manner, which, in their confeiences, they fhall be perfuaded is the most feriptural way. The general court may, by laws, encourage and protect that religion which is the general profession of the inhabitants there. Inc. Mather's account of his negociations. "church order and discipline, and shall be encouraged in "the peaceable and regular profession and practice "thereof." An attempt was soon made, to continue the practice of an appeal to the general court in controversies upon ecclessifical matters. A great part of the church and inhabitants of Salem village, petitioned the general court to appoint an ecclessifical council to fettle a controvers with Mr. Paris, the minister, but the court refused. There have been inflances of the general court's interposing, fo far as to recommend an ecclessifical council; and sometimes committees have been appointed by the court, for the sake of preferving or reftoring peace, professing, rather to advise than enjoin measures, but exceptions have generally been taken to such votes or orders of court, as irregular, and not consisting with the dignity of the supreme legislative authority of the province. Synods were occasionally called, under the old charter. Some sters were taken for calling a synod about thirty years after the new charter arrived, but a royal instruction prevented any further progress.

IF the first commissions from the crown, to the governor of any colony, and the form of government prefcribed by fuch commissions, are a precedent to be followed in all fucceeding commissions, and a fystem of laws once approved by the crown cannot be repealed (all which is contended for by the inhabitants of the royal governments) the charter to the Massachusets was not fo great a boon as our forefathers generally imagined, the material difference in the conflictutions, being in the fecond branch, only, of the legislature ;* but it is certain, that, at the time

* "The Maffachufets agents confidering that a naked reflitution of their charter, in which fo many of the neceffary powers of government were omitted, would not ferve their turn, put in their prayer for additional powers fpecially named, which being obferved by the Lords were fet down in their report, and upon the whole matter it was refolved, that their government fhould be in all points as in the other plantations, faving that once in a year they fhould have an election of their councellors, who fhould make the upper house in all general affemblies." M. S. letter 1694. time of granting the charter, it was deemed a muck greater fecurity to the people for the enjoyment of the privileges granted by it, than they could have had merely from a royal temporary commiflion to a governor.

THE diftress of the people, at the time of the arrival of the charter, is reprefented to have been peculiarly great. The fea coast was infested with privateers, fo that few veffels could escape them; the inland frontiers east and west were continually harraffed by French and Indian enemies ; a late expedition against Canada had exposed the province to the relentment of France, the effects of which were from time to time expected; the fame expedition brought fo heavy a debt upon the government, that it required all the skill of the administration to support the public credit, and to procure farther fupplies for carrying on the war; a ftrong party in the government had oppofed every other measure, except the adhering to the old charter, and was now diffatisfied with the acceptance of the new; but the greatest misfortune was, an apprehenfion that the devil was let loofe among them, that many had entred into a league with him, and others were afflicted, tormented and the fubjects of diabolical rage and fury. The minds of people in general were feized with gloom and horror. The greater part were credulous and believed all they heard, and expecred by and by their own turn; the few, who believed the whole to be an imposture or delusion, were afraid to. discover their sentiments, least some who pretended to be bewitched fhould accufe them; and in fuch cafe there was no room to hope for favour.

1692.

SIR William Phips arrived at Bofton with the charter Saturday the 14th of May, towards evening. On Monday he was conducted from his houfe to the town-houfe, by the regiment of Bofton, the military companies of Charlestown, the magistrates, ministers and principal gentlemen of Boston and the adjacent towns. The charter was first first published, then the governor's commission ;* and 1692. thereupon the venerable, old charter, governor Bradstreet refigned the chair; I dare to fay, not without a deep figh from many of the spectators. After publishing the lieutenant governor's commission, and administering the oaths, the governor was conducted, with the fame parade, to the place appointed for a publick dinner, and from thence to his house again. + By the first ships, letters from the governor and council were fent to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Earl of Nottingham, and the Countefs of Sutherland, Hugh Boscawen, John Hambden, and Francis Charlton Efgrs. thankfully acknowledging the favour Mr. Mather the agent had received from them and the affection which they had discovered to the interest of their Majesties subjects in the province. At the first general council for the appointment of sheriffs justices and other civil officers, the governor either milconceived, or was prevailed upon to give up, the powers which belonged to him by charter, the council nominating or chufing the officers, and the governor giving his confent. This practice would have leffened the weight and influence of the governor. It was not fuffered long to continue. After the vacating the colony laws under the old charter, by the publication of the new charter, there was room to question what was the rule of law in civil

* Sir William; by his commiffion, was appointed captain-general over the colonies of Connecticut and Rhode-Ifland, and it is faid went to the laft named government foon after his arrival at Bofton, in order to fettle the militia there. He divided the colony into regiments, and a great number of military commiffions were fent up to Col. Sanford, who was intended to be the chief military officer of the colony ; but there being no law of the colony to enjoin fubmiffion, no regard was paid to them by the people, and most of the officers refufed to take the commiffions. This probably was the reafon the government there gave themfelves but little concern. Mr Dudley afterwards attempted to exercise the fame authority with as little fuccels.

The ceremony was opened with prayer by Mr. Allen, a minifter of Bollon, and concluded in like manner by Mr. Morton, a minister of Charlestown. Some of the spirit of the old charter remained. 1692. civil and criminal matters, and how far the common law and what flatutes took place. The council, appointed by the charter, + were to continue until May 1693, and fo

* The council appointed by the new charter were-Simon Bradfreet, John Richards, Nathanael Saltonstall, Wait Winthrop, John Phillips, James Russell, Samuel Sewall, Samuel Appleton, Bartholomew Gedney, John Hawthorn, Elisha Hutchinson, Robert Pike, Jonathan Curwin, John Joyliffe, Adam Winthrop, Richard Middlecot. John Foster, Peter Serjeant, Joseph Lynd, Samuel Hayman, Stephen Mafon, Thomas Hinkley, William Bradford, John Walley, Barnabas Lothrop, Job Alcot, Samuel Daniel, and Silvanus Davis. Those in italick, had been affistants in Massachusets or Plimouth colonies. Bradstreet was an old fenator, having been in conftant fervice, except in Dudley's and Androfs's administration, for 62 years. Richards, although he came into the country in low circumstances (Randolph, in one of his letters, fays he was a fervant) yet became an opulent merchant in Bofton, had been employed as agent with Dudley, but remained fleady to what was called the country intereft. Saltonstall was the grandfon of Sir Richard, and the father of Gurdon Saltonstall, afterwards governor of Connecticut. He lived at Haverhill. Wait Winthrop was the fon of the first governor of Connecticut and New-Haven colonies united, and grandion of the first governor of Massachusets. He was originally of Connecticut, and not long before removed to Bolton, and was one of Androfs's council. Phillips and Ruffel were both of Charlestown ; the latter the fon of Richard Ruffel, chofen affiftant in 1659. Sewall was originally of Newbury, but had lived feveral years at Bolton. Appleton, of Ipfwich. Gedney and Hawthorn, of Salem ; the latter, fon of William Hawthorn, the first speaker upon record, and afterwards an affistant. Hutchinfon was a merchant in Bofton, fon of Edward Hutchinfon who was killed by the Indians in 1675, and grandfon to Mrs. Hutchinson who was banished for her religious opinions. Pike was of Salisbury, a principal military officer there. Curwin, of Salem, efteemed, and connected with the principal families Joyliffe, of Bolton, had been many years an active fethere. lectman and of primitive zeal. Adam Winthrop, (descended, by a younger fon, from the first governor) had been very active in the revolution : He was of Bolton, as was alfo Middlecot who had a good eftate in Warminster in England, where fome of his posterity are now living. Foster was a merchant in Bolton, of the first rank, who came not many years before from Ailfbury in England, but had a great fhare in the management to no special provision was made for a general affembly 1692. in May 1692, but writs isfued immediately upon the governor's arrival, and the court met the 8th of June and an act paffed, declaring that all the laws of the colony of Maffachufers bay and the colony of New-Plimouth, not being repugnant to the laws of England nor inconfiftent with the charter, fhould be in force, in the refpective colonies, to the 10th of November 1692, except where other provision should be made by act of affembly, and all juffices of the peace (affiftants, like aldermen of London, were, ex officio, justices under the old charter) had the fame powers given to them, in the execution of laws, which magistrates used to have. The confusion, the country was in, from the fuppoled witcherafts, feems to have occasioned an adjournment of the general court on the 2d of July, to the second Wednesday in October; very little public bufiness having been done during the feffion.

THE great noise which the New England witchcrafts made throughout the English dominions, proceeded more from the general panick with which all forts of perfons were ment of affairs from 1689 to 1692. Serjeant and Lynd were allo of Bollon. Hayman, of the province of Main. Mafon was a merchant in London, a zealous man in the caufe of New England, and I suppose his name was inferted in the charter from mere respect and gratitude, for he never came to New-England. Hinkley had been many years governor of New Plimouth, Bradford was fon toGovernor Bradford ; and Walley and Lothrop were of good families in that colony. Alcot and Daniel, or, Donnell, were of the province of Main. Davis, of the country farther east or Sagadehoc ; he had been commander of the fort at Cafco, where he was taken prisoner and carried to Canada. However dry this account may appear to fome readers, it may not be difagreeable to others, and perhaps may excite a laudable ambition in fome of the defcendants of the first magistrates to merit the honours of their ancestors, for altho' places and titles in the colonies are not hereditary, yet exteris paribus, the defcendants of fuch as have done worthily have fome claim to be diffinguished, " nam fi quis ab ineunte atate " habet caufam celebritatis et nominis, aut à patre acceptam. "____in hunc oculi omnium conjiciuntur." Cic. de Officiis.

1692. were feized, and an expectation that the contagion would fpread to all parts of the country, than from the number of perfons who were executed, more having been put to death in a fingle county in England, in a fhort space of time, than have fuffered in all New England from the first settlement until the present time. Fifteen years had paffed, before we find any mention of witchcraft among the English colonists. The Indians were supposed to be worshippers of the Devil, and their powows to be wizards. The first suspicion of witchcraft, among the English, was about the year 1645; at Springfield, upon Connecticut river, feveral perfons were fupposed to be under an evil hand, and among the reft two of the minifter's children. + Great pains were taken to prove the facts upon feveral perfons charged with the crime, but either the nature of the evidence was not fatisfactory, or the fraud was fulpected, and fo no perfon was convicted until the year 1650, when a poor wretch, Mary Oliver, probably weary of her life from the general reputation of being a witch, after long examination was brought to confession of her guilt, but I do not find that she was executed. Whilft this enquiry was making, Margaret Jones was executed at Charlestown ;* and Mr. Hale mentions a woman at Dorchefter, and another at Cambridge about the fame time, who all at their death afferted their innocence. Soon after, Hugh Parsons was tried at Springfield and escaped death. In 1655, Mrs. Hibbins, the affistants widow, was hanged at Boston.§ In 1662, at Hartford in Connecticut (about 30 miles from Springfield, upon the fame river) one Ann Cole, a young woman who lived next door to a Dutch family, and, no doubt, had learned fomething of the language, was fupposed to be possessed with doemons, who sometimes spake dutch and fometimes english, and sometimes a language which no body understood, and who held a conference with one another. Several ministers, who were prefent, took down the conference in writing, and the names names of feveral perfons, mentioned in the courfe of the 1692. conference, as actors or bearing parts in it; particularly a woman, then in prifon upon fuspicion of witchcraft, one Greensmith, who upon examination confessed and appeared to be furprized at the difcovery. She owned that fhe and the others named had been familiar with a dæmon, who had carnal knowledge of her,* and although the had not made a formal covenant, yet the had promifed to be ready at his call, and was to have had a high frolick at Christmas, when the agreement was to have been figned. Upon this confession she was executed, and two more of the company were condemned at the fame time. + In 1669, Sufanna Martin, of Salifbury, was bound over to the court, upon fuspicion of witchcraft, but escaped at that time.

+ Johnfon, * Vol. 1. p. 150. ‡ Id. p. 179. § Id. p. 187.

IN 1671, Elizabeth Knap, another ventriloqua, alarmed the people of Groton in much the fame manner as Ann Cole had done those of Hartford; but her dæmon was not so cunning, for instead of confining himself to old women, he rail'd at the good minister of the town and other persons of good character, and the people could not then be prevailed on to believe him, but believed the girl, when she confessed she had been deluded, and that the devil had tormented her in the shape of good persons; and so the escaped the punishment due to her fraud and impositure.

IN 1673, Eunice Cole of Hampton was tried, and the jury found her not, legally, guilty, but that there were ftrong grounds to fufpect her of familiarity with the devil. Vol. II. C IN

* The Egyptians fuppofe a divine fpirit may poffibly approach a woman and produce in her the principles of generation; but on the other fide, that it is impoffible for a man to have any fuch intercourfe with a goddefs. It is however altogether irrational, to believe that any god or dæmon is capable of a fenfual love for human bodily form or beauty. Plutarch's life of Numa.

† Jan. 20. 1662, three witches were condemned at Hartford.
 Feb. 24. After one of the witches was hanged, the maid was well.
 Goffe the regicide's diary.

1 She suffered death in 1692.

IN 1679, William Morfe's houfe, at Newbury, was troubled with the throwing of bricks, ftones, &c. and a boy, of the family, was fuppofed to be bewitched, who accufed one of the neighbours; and in 1682, the houfe of George Walton, a quaker, at Portfmouth, and another houfe at Salmon-falls (both in New-Hampfhire) were attacked after the fame manner.

IN 1683, the dæmons removed to Connecticut river again, where one Defborough's houfe was molefted by an invifible hand, and a fire kindled, no body knew how, which burnt up great part of his effate; and in 1 684, Philip Smith, a judge of the court, a military officer and a reprefentative of the town of Hadley, upon the fame river, (an hypocondriack perfon) fancied himfelf under an evil hand, and fufpected a woman, one of his neighbours, and languifhed and pined away, and was generally fuppofed to be bewitched to death. While he lay ill, a number of brifk lads tried an experiment upon the old woman. Having dragged her out of her houfe, they hung her up until fhe was near dead, let her down, rowled her fome time in the fnow, and at laft buried her in it and there left her, but it happened that fhe furvived and the melancholly man died.

NOTWITHSTANDING these frequent instances of fupposed witchcrafts, none had fuffered for near thirty years, in the Maffachulets colony. The execution of the affistant or councellor's widow in 1655, was difapproved of by many principal perfons, and it is not unlikely that her death faved the lives of many other inferior perfons. But in 1685, a very circumstancial account of all or most of the cases I have mentioned, was published, and many arguments were brought to convince the country that they were no delusions nor impostures, but the effects of a familiarity between the devil and fuch as he found fit for his inftruments ; and in 1687 or 1688, began a more alarming inftance than any which had preceded it. Four of the children of John Goodwin, a grave man and a good liver at the north part of Bofton 1692.

Boston were generally believed to be bewitched. I have 1692. often heard perfons, who were of the neighbourhood, speak of the great confternation it occasioned. The children were all remarkable for ingenuity of temper, had been religiously educated and were thought to be without guile. The eldest was a girl of thirteen or fourteen years. She had charged a laundrefs with taking away fome of the family linnen. The mother of the laundrefs was one of the wild Irifh, of bad character, and gave the girl harfh language; foon after which the fell into fits, which were faid to have fomething diabolical in them. One of her fifters and two brothers followed her example and, it is faid, were tormented in the fame part of their bodies at the fame time, although kept in separate apartments, and ignorant of one another's complaints. One or two things were faid to be very remarkable; all their complaints were in the day time, and they flept comfortably all night; they were struck dead at the light of the affembly's catechilm, Cotton's milk for babes, and some other good books, but could read in Oxford jefts, popilh and quaker books, and the common prayer, without any difficulty. Is it possible the mind of man should be capable of fuch strong prejudices as that a fuspicion of fraud should not immediately arise? But attachments to modes and forms in religion had fuch force that fome of these circumstances feem rather to have confirmed the credit of the children. Sometimes they would be deaf; then dumb, then blind ; and fometimes all thefe diforders together would come upon them. Their tongues would be drawn down their throats, then pulled out upon their chins. Their jaws, necks, shoulders, elbows and all their joints would appear to be diflocated, and they would make most piteous outcries of burnings, of being cut with knives, beat, &c. and the marks of wounds were afterwards to be feen. The ministers of Bofton aud Charlestown kept a day of fasting and prayer at the troubled house; after which, the youngest child made no more complaints. The others perfevered, and C_{2} the 1602. the magistrates then interposed, and the old woman was apprehended, but upon examination would neither confels nor deny, and appeared to be difordered in her fenfes. Upon the report of phyficians that the was compos mentis, fhe was executed, declaring at her death the children should not be relieved. The eldest, after this, was taken into a minister's family, where, at first, she behaved orderly, but, after fome time, fuddenly fell into her fits. The account of her affliction is in print; fome things are mentioned as extraordinary, which tumblers are every day taught to perform; others feem more than natural, but it was a time of great credulity. The children returned to their ordinary behaviour, lived to adult age, made profession of religion, and the affliction they had been under they publickly declared to be one motive to it. One of them I knew many years after. She had the character of a very fober virtuous woman, and never made any acknowledgment of fraud in this transaction. The printed account was published with a preface by Mr. Baxter, who fays, 'the evidence is fo convincing, that he must be a very obdurate fadducee who will not believe.'* It obtained credit sufficient, together

> * In the year 1720, at Littleton in the county of Middlefex, a family was supposed to be bewitched. One J. B. had three daughters, of 11, 9, and 5 years of age. The eldeit was a forward girl, and having read and heard many ftrange ftories, would furprize the company where fhe happened to be, with her manner of relating them. Pleafed with the applaufe, fhe went from ftories the had heard, to fome of her own framing, and to on to dreams and visions, and attained the art of fwoon. ing and of being to all appearance for fometime breathlefs. Upon her revival, the would tell of ftrange things the had met with in this and other worlds. When the met with the words, God, Christ, the Holy Ghost, in the bible, she would drop down with scarce any figns of life in her. Strange noifes were often heard in and upon the house; stones came down the chimney and did great milchief. She complained of the fpecire of Mrs. D-y, a woman living in the town; and, once, the mother of the girkftruck at the place where the faid D-y was, and the girl faid, you have struck her on the belly, and upon enquiry it together with other preparatives, to difpofe the whole 1692. country to be eafily impofed upon by the more extensive and more tragical fcene, which was prefently after acted at Salem and other parts of the county of Effex. Not many years before, Glanvil published his witch stories in England; Perkins and other nonconformists were earlier; C 2 but it was found, that D——y complained of a hurt in her belly about that time. Another time, the mother flruck at a place, where the girl faid there was a yellow bird, and fhe told her mother fhe had hit the fide of it's head; and it again appeared that D——y's head was hurt about the fame time. It was common to find her in ponds of water, crying out fhe fhould be drowned; fometimes upon the top of the houfe, and fometimes upon the tops of trees, where fhe pretended fhe had flown; and fome fancied they had feen her in the air. There were often the marks of blows and pinches upon her, which were fuppofed to come from an invifible hand.

The fecond daughter, after her fifter had fucceeded fo well, imitated her in complaints of D-y, and out did her in feats of running upon the barn, climbing trees, &c. and, what was moft furprizing, the youngest attempted the fame feats, and in fome inftances went beyond her fifters. The neighbours agreed they were under an evil hand, and it was pronounced a piece of witchcraft, as certain as that there ever had been any at Salem; and no great pains were taken to detect the imposture. Phylicians had been at first employed, but to no purpose ; and afterwards miniflers were called to pray over them, but without fuccefs. At length D-y, not long after the fuppofed blows, took to her bed, and after fometime died, and the two eldelt girls ceafed complaining ; the youngest held out longer. but all perfilted in it, that there had been no fraud. The eldeft, not having been baptized, and being come to adult age. defired and obtained baptifm, and the minister then examined her upon her conduct in the affair, and the perfitted in her declarations of innocency. In 1728, having removed to Medford, the offered to join the church there, and gave a Tatisfactory account of herfelf to the minister of the town; but he knew nothing of the fhare fhe had in this transaction. The Lords day before the was to be admitted, he happened to preach frem. this text, "He that speaketh lies shall not escape." The wo man fuppofed the fermon to be intended for her, and went to the minister, who told her no body had made any objection against her; but being determined to confess her guilt, the difclofed the fraud of herfelf and her fifters, and defired to nake 1692. but the great authority was that of Sir Matthew Hale, revered in New-England, not only for his knowledge in the law, but for his gravity and piety. The trial of the witches in Suffolk was published in 1684. All these books were in New-England, and the conformity between the behavior of Goodwin's children and most of the fuppofed bewitched at Salem, and the behavior of those in England, is so exact, as to leave no room to doubt the ftories had been read Ly the New-England perfons themfelves, or had been told to them by others who had read them. Indeed, this conformity, instead of giving fuspicion, was urged in confirmation of the truth of both; the old England dæmons and the new being fo much alike. The court justified themselves from books of law, and the authorities of Keble, Dalton and other lawyers, then of the first character, who lay down rules of conviction, as abfurd and dangerous as any which were practifed in New-England. 'The trial of Richard Hatheway, the impostor, before Lord Chief Justice Holt, was ten or twelve years after. This was a great difcouragement to profecutions in England for witchcraft, but an effectual stop was not put to them. until the act of parliament in the reign of his late Majesty. + Even this > make a publick acknowledgment, in the face of the church ; and accordingly did fo. The two filters, feeing her pitied, had become actors alfo with her, without being moved to it by her, but when fhe faw them follow her, they all joined in the fecret and acted in concert. They had no particular fpite againft D—y; but it was neceffary to accufe fomebody, and the eldeft having pitched upon her, the reft followed. The woman's complaints, about the fame time the girl pretended the was flruck, proceeded from other caufes, which were not then properly enquired into. Once, at leaft, they were in great danger of being detected in their tricks; but the grounds of fufpicion were overlooked, through the indulgence and credulity of their parents. M. S. of the Rev. Mr. Tunelt, minifler of Medford.

I remember to have heard a gentleman, who in other respects was very fensible, express his surprize upon the first news of this act. The parliament, he faid, had in effect declared that there were no evil spirits, he was afraid they would declare by another act that there are no good ones. From this has not wholly cured the common people, and we hear of old women ducked and cruelly murdered within thefe laft twenty years. Reproach, then, for hanging witches, although it has been often caft upon the people of New-England, by those of Old, yet it must have been done with an ill grace. The people of New-England were of a grave cast, and had long been disposed to give a ferious solemn construction even to common events in providence; but in Old England, the reign of Charles the second was as remarkable for gaiety as any whatsoever, and for scepticis and infidelity, as any which preceded it.

SIR William Phips, the governor, upon his arrival, fell in with the opinion prevailing. Mr. Stoughton, the lieutenant-governor, upon whofe judgment great ftrefs was laid, had taken up this notion, that although the devil might appear in the fhape of a guilty perfon, yet he would never be permitted to affume the fhape of an innocent perfor. \ddagger This opinion, at first, was generally C 4 received.

- From 1694 to 1701, there were 11 perfons tried for witches before Lord chief jultice Holt, all of whom were acquitted. In Scotland feven were executed for witches in 1697, upon the testimony of one girl about 11 years old.
- t 'A gentleman of more than ordinary understanding, learning and experience, defired me to write to N. England about your trials and convictions of witches, not being fatisfied with the evidence upon which fome who have been executed were found guilty; he told me that in the time of the great reformation parliament, a certain perfon or perfons had a commission to difcover and profecute witches. Upon thefe profecutions many were executed, in at least one county in England, until, at length, a gentleman of estate and of great character for piety was accused, which put an end to the commission, and the judges, upon a re-hearing, reversed many of the judgments ; but many lives had been taken away. All that I speak with, much wonder that any man, much lefs a man of fuch abilities, learning and experience as Mr. Stoughton, should take up a perfuation, that the devil cannot affume the likenefs of an innocent, to afflict another perfon. In my opinion, it is a perfuation utterly deftitute of any folid realon to render it fo much as

1692. received. Some of the most religious women who were accused, when they faw the appearance of distress and torture in their accusers, and heard their solemn declarations, that they faw the shapes or spectres of the accused afflicting them, perfuaded themselves they were witches, and that the devil, some how or other, although they could not remember how or when, had taken posfession of their evil hearts and obtained some fort of affent to his afflicting in their shapes; and thereupon they thought they might be justified in confession themselves guilty.

> IT feems, at this day, with fome people, perhaps but few, to be the queftion whether the accufed or the afflicted were under a preternatural or diabolical poffeffion, rather than whether the afflicted were under bodily diftempers, or altogether guilty of fraud and impofture. As many of the original examinations have fallen into my hands, it may be of fervice to reprefent this affair in a more full and impartial light than it has yet appeared to the world.

as probable, and befides, contradictory to many inflances of facts in hiftory. If you think good, you may acquaint Mr. Stoughton and the other judges with what I write.' Letter from London to Inc. Mather, Jan. 9. 1692-3.

IN

I fuppofe the long parliament must be intended by the great reformation parliament, for in 1644, 1645 and 1646, one Matthew Hopkins went from place to place to find out witches. Mr. Baxter fays a great number were hanged by his difcovery, and that Mr. Calamy went along with the judges to hear the confessions, and to fee that there was no fraud or wrong done. Hopkins fearched for teats, fet some upon ftools or tables crofs-legged, and kept them 24 hours without meat or drink, within which time it was faid their imps would come and fuck; others he tried by fwimming them, and at length raifed the indignation of certain gentlemen, who caufed him to be feized, and his hands and feet being tied, to be thrown into the water, where fortunately for him he was proved to be a witch or wizard himfelf, by his fwimming or floating upon the water. The country was cleared of him, and fome lamented that the experiment had not been made fooner.

IN February 1691-2, a daughter and a neice of Mr. 1692. Parris, the minister of Salem* village, girls of ten or eleven years of age, and two other girls in the neighbourhood, made the fame fort of complaints as Goodwin's children had made, two or three years before. The phyficians, having no other way of accounting for the diforder, pronounced them bewitched. An Indian woman, who was brought into the country from New Spain, and then lived with Mr. Parris, tried fome experiments which she pretended to be used to, in her own country, in order to find out the witch. This coming to the children's knowledge, they cried out upon the poor Indian, as appearing to them, pinching, pricking and tormenting them; and fell into fits. Tituba, the Indian, acknowledged that fhe had learned how to find out a witch, but denied that fhe was one herfelf. Several private fasts were kept at the minister's house, and several, more public, by the whole village, and then a general fast through the colony, to feek to God to rebuke Satan &c. So much notice taken of the children, together with the pity and compaffion, expressed by those who vifited them, not only tended to confirm them in their defign but to draw others into the like. Accordingly, the number of the complainants foon increased, and among them there were two or three women, and fome girls old enough for witneffes. These had their fits too, and, when in them. cried out, not only against Tituba, but against Sarah Ofburn, a melancholly distracted old woman, and Douglafs in his fummary fays, " In Salem and its neighbourhood, enthuliafm and other nervous diforders feem to be endemial; it was the feat of the New-England witchcraft anno 1692." I queffion whether he had any other foundation for this remark than meerly this fcene of witchcraft, which muft be confidered as the diftemper of the country in general, rather than of any particular town or county, and had Mr. Parris's family lived in any other part of the province, perhaps the neighbourhood would have been as much infected; and no impreflion ought to be made to the difadvantage of a town the moft ancient, and at this day the fecond in rank within the province, and upon other accounts juftly refpectable. 1692. and Sarah Good, another old woman who was bedy rid. Tituba, at length, confessed herself a witch, and that the two old women were her confederates; and they were all committed to prifon; and Tituba, upon fearch, was found to have fcars upon her back which were called the devil's mark, but might as well have been fuppofed those of her Spanish master. This commitment was on the 1st of March. About three weeks after, two other women, of good characters and church members, Corey and Nurfe, were complained of and brought upon their examination ; when these children fell into fits, and the mother of one of them, and wife of Thomas Putman, joined with the children and complained of Nurse as tormenting her; and made most terrible fhrieks, to the amazement of all the neighbourhood, The old women denied every thing; but were fent to prison; and such was the infatuation, that a child of Sarah Good, about four or five years old, was committed alfo, being charged with biting fome of the afflicted who fhewed the print of small teeth on their arms. On April 3d Mr. Parris took for his text, "Have not I chosen you twelve and one of you is a devil." Sarah Cloyfe, suppoling it to be occalioned by Nurle's cale, who was herfifter, went out of meeting. She was, prefently after, complained of for a witch, examined and committed. Elizabeth Procter was charged about the fame time: Her husband, as every good husband would have done, accompanied her to her examination, but it cost the poor man his life. Some of the afflicted cried out upon him alfo, and they were both committed to prifon.

INSTEAD of fulpecting and fifting the witneffes, and fuffering them to be crofs examined, the authority, to fay no more, were imprudent in making ufe of leading queftions, and thereby putting words into their mouths or fuffering others to do it. Mr. Parris was over officious; molt of the examinations, although in the prefence of one or more of the magistrates, were taken by him. The following examinations, of feveral of the accufed, may ferve as specimens they being generally made in the fame manner. "AT

"AT a court held at Salem 11th April 1692, by 1692. the honoured Thomas Danforth, Deputy Governor. Q. John ; † who hurt you ? A. Goody Procter first, and then Goody Cloyfe. Q. What did she do to you ? A. She brought the book to me. Q. John! tell the truth, who hurts you? Have you been hurt? A. The first, was a gentlewoman I faw. Q. Who next? A. Goody Cloyfe. Q. But who hurt you next? A. Goody Procter. Q. What did fhe do to you? A. She choaked me, and brought the book. Q. How oft did fhe come to torment you? A. A good many times, fhe and Goody Cloyfe. Q. Do they come to you in the night as well as the day ? A. They come most in the day. Q. Who ? A. Goody Cloyfe and GoodyProcter. Q. Where did she take hold of you ? A. Upon my throat, to stop my breath. Q. Do you know Goody Cloyfe and Goody Procter ? A. Yes, here is Goody Cloyfe and Goody Froder : A. Yes, here is Goody Cloyfe. (Cloyfe) when did I hurt thee? A. A great many times. (Cloyfe) Oh ! you are a grievous liar. Q. What did this Goody Cloyfe do to you? A. She pinched and bit me till the blood came. Q. How long fince this woman came and hurt you ? A. Yefterday, at meeting. Q. At any time before ? A. Yes a great many times. Q. Mary Wal-cot ! who hurts you ? A. Goody Cloyfe. Q. What did fhe do to you ? A. She hurt me. Q. Did fhe bring the book? A. Yes. Q. What was you to do with it? A. To touch it, and be well.—Then fhe fell into a fit. Q. Doth she come alone ? A. Sometimes alone, and fometimes in company with Goody Nurfe and Goody Corey, and a great many I do not know.— Then the fell into a fit again.—Q. Abigail Williams! did you fee a company at Mr. Parris's houfe eat and drink? A. Yes Sir, that was their facrament. Q. How many were there? A. About forty, and Goody Cloyfe and Goody Good were their deacons. Q. What was it? A. They faid it was our blood, and they had it twice that day. Q. Mary Walcot !

+ This was Tituba's hufband, who feems to have been a cunning fellow, and to avoid being accufed joined with the afflicted.

Walcot! have you feen a white man? Yes Sir, a great 1692. many times. Q. What fort of man was he? A. A fine grave man, and when he came, he made all the witches to tremble.——Abigail Williams confirmed the fame, and that they had fuch a fight at Deacon Ingerfoll's. Q. Who was at Deacon Ingerfoll's then? A. Goody Cloyfe, Goody Nurfe, Goody Corey, and Goody Good. ---- Then Sarah Cloyfe afked for water, and fat down as one feized with a dying fainting fit; and feveral of the afflicted fell into fits, and fome of them cried out, Oh! her spirit is gone to prifon to her fifter Nurfe. Q. Elizabeth Procter ! you understand whereof you are charged, viz. to be guilty of fundry acts of witchcraft; what fay you to it ? Speak the truth, and fo you that are afflicted, you must speak the truth, as you will answer it before God another day. Mary Walcot ! doth this woman hurt you? A. I never faw her fo as to be hurt by her. Q. Mary Lewis ! does the hurt you ?-Her mouth was stopped.-Q. Ann Putman! does she hurt you ?-She could not fpeak.-Q. Abigail Williams! does she hurt you ?-Her hand was thrust in her own mouth.-Q. John ! does the hurt you ? A. This is the woman that came in her shift and choaked me. Q. Did fhe ever bring the book? A. Yes Sir. Q. What to do? A. To write. Q. What, this woman? A. Yes Sir. Q. Are you fure of it? A. Yes Sir. --- Again, Abigail Williams and Ann Putman were fpoke to by the court, but neither of them could make any answer, by reason of dumbness or other fits. Q. What do you fay Goody Proctor to these things? A. I take God in heaven to be my witnefs, that I know nothing of it, no more than the child unborn. Q. Ann Putman! doth this woman hurt you. A. Yes Sir, a great many times, -Then the accufed looked upon them and they fell into fits. Q. She does not bring the book to you, does the? A. Yes Sir, often, and faith the hath made her maid fet her hand to it. Q. Abigail Williams ! does this woman hurt you? A. Yes Sir, often. Q. Does she bring bring the book to you? A. Yes. Q. What would fhe 1692. have you do with it? A. To write in it and I fhall be well. — Did not you, faid Abigail, tell me, that your maid had written ? (Procter) Dear Child, it is not fo. There is another judgment, dear child.—Then Abigail and Ann had fits.—By and by they cried out, look you there is Goody Procter upon the beam .- By and by, both of them cried out of Goodman Procter himfelf, and faid he was a wizard.-Immediately, many, if not all of the bewitched, had grievous fits .-- Q. Ann Putman ! who hurt you? A. Goodman Procter and his wife too .--Afterwards, some of the afflicted cried, there is Procter going to take up Mrs. Pope's feet .- And her feet were immediately taken up. Q. What do you fay Goodman Profer to these things ? A. I know not. I am innocent.----Abigail Williams cried out, there is Goodman Procter going to Mrs. Pope, and immediately, faid Pope fell into a fit .---- You fee the Devil will deceive you ; the children could fee what you was going to do before the woman was hurt. I would advise you to repentance, for the devil is bringing you out.—Abigail Williams cried out again, there is Goodman Procter going to hurt Goody Bibber; and immediately Goody Bibber fell into a fit. There was the like of Mary Walcot, and divers others .--- Benjamin Gould gave in his testimony, that he had feen Goodman Corey and his wife, Procter and his wife, Goody Cloyfe, Goody Nurfe, and Goody Griggs in his chamber last thursday night .--- Elizabeth Hubbard was in a trance during the whole examination. -During the examination of Elizabeth Procter, Abigail Williams and Ann Putman, both, made offer to ftrike at faid Procter; but when Abigail's hand came near, it opened, whereas it was made up into a fift before, and came down exceeding lightly, as it drew near to faid Procter, and at length with open and extended fingers, touched Procter's hood very lightly. Immediately Abigail cried out, her fingers, her fingers, her fingers burned, and Ann Putman took on most grievously, of her head, and funk down." SALEM.

" SALEM, April 11th, 1692. Mr. Samuel Parris was defired by the honorable Thomas Danforth, deputy-governor, and the council, to take in writing the aforefaid examinations, and accordingly took and delivered them in; and upon hearing the fame, and feeing what was then feen, together with the charge of the afflicted perfons, were by the advice of the council all committed by us, John Hawthorne, Afliftants."

" THE

No wonder the whole country was in a confernation; when perfons, of fober lives and unblemished characters, were committed to prifon upon fuch fort of evidence. No body was fafe. The most effectual way to prevent an acculation, was to become an acculer; and accordingly the number of the afflicted increased every day, and the number of the accused in proportion, who in general perfifted in their innocency; but, being ftrongly urged to give glory to God by their confession, and intimation being given that this was the only way to fave their lives, and their friends urging them to it, fome were brought to own their guilt. The first confession upon the files, is of Deliverance Hobbs, May 11th, 1692, being in prifon. She owned every thing fhe was required to do. The confessions multiplied the witches; new companions were always mentioned, who were immediately fent for and examined. Thus more than an hundred women, many of them of fair characters and of the most reputable families, in the towns of Salem, Beverly, Andover, Billerica, &c. were apprehended, ex. amined and, generally, committed to prifon. The confeffions being much of the fame tenor, one or two may ferve for specimens.

30

1692.

"THE examination and confession (8. Sept. 92.) of 1692. Mary Ofgood, wife of Captain Ofgood of Andover, taken before John Hawthorne and other their Majesties justices.

CHE confesse, that about 11 years ago, when she was) in a melancholly state and condition, she used to walk abroad in her orchard; and upon a certain time, fhe faw the appearance of a cat, at the end of the houfe, which yet the thought was a real cat. However, at that time, it diverted her from praying to God, and inftead thereof she prayed to the devil; about which time she made a covenant with the devil, who, as a black man, came to her and prefented her a book, upon which she laid her finger and that left a red fpot : And that upon her figning, the devil told her he was her God, and that he should ferve and worship him, and, she believes, she confented to it. She fays further, that about two years agone, fhe was carried through the air, in company with deacon Frye's wife, Ebenezer Baker's wife and Goody Tyler, to five mile pond, where she was baptized by the devil, who dipped her face in the water and made her renounce her former baptifm, and told her she must be his, foul and body, forever, and that fhe must ferve him, which the promifed to do. She fays, the renouncing her first baptism was after her dipping, and that she was transported back again through the air, in company with the forenamed perfons, in the fame manner as fhe went, and believes they were carried upon a pole. Q. How many perfons were upon the pole : A. As I faid before, viz. four perfons and no more but whom fhe had named above .- She confess fhe has afflicted three perfons, John Sawdy, Martha Sprague and Rofe Foster, and that she did it by pinching her bed cloaths, and giving confent the devil should do it in her shape, and that the devil could not do it without her confent.-She confess the afflicting perfons in the court, by the glance of her eye. She fays, as fhe was coming down to Salem to be examined, fhe and the reft of the company with her stopped at Mr. Phillips's to refresh themselves, and the afflicted perfons 1092. perfons, being behind them upon the road, came up just as the was mounting again and were then afflicted, and cried out upon her, fo that fhe was forced to ftay until they were all past, and faid she only looked that way towards them. Q. Do you know the devil can take the shape of an innocent perfon and afflict? A. I believe he cannot. Q. Who taught you this way of witchcraft? A. Satan, and that he promifed her abundance of fatisfaction and quietness in her future state, but never performed any thing; and that she has lived more miserably and more discontented since, than ever before. She confesses further, that she herself, in company with Goody Parker, Goody Tyler and Goody Dean, had a meeting at Mofes Tyler's houfe, last monday night, to afflict, and that fhe and Goody Dean carried the shape of Mr. Dean, the minister, between them, to make perfons believe that Mr. Dean afflicted. Q. What hindered you from accomplifying what you intended? A. The Lord would not fuffer it fo to be, that the devil should afflict in an innocent perfon's shape. Q. Have you been at any other witch meetings? A. 1 know nothing thereof, as I shall answer in the prefence of God and his people; but faid, that the black man flood before her, and told her, that what she had confessed was a lie; notwithstanding, the faid that what the had confetted was true, and thereto put her hand. Her hufband being prefent was asked, if he judged his wife to be any way discomposed. He answered, that having lived with her fo long, he doth not judge her to be any ways difcomposed, but has cause to believe what she has faid is true.---- When Mistres Ofgood was first called, she afflicted Martha Sprague and Rofe Foster, by the glance of her eyes, and recovered them out of their fits by the touch of her hand. Mary Lacey and Betty Johnson and Hannah Post faw Mistress Ofgood afflicting Sprague and Foster.——The faid Hannah Post and Mary Lacey and Betty Johnson, jun. and Rofe Foiter and Mary Richardson were afflicted by Mistrefs Ofgood, in the time of their examination, and recovered by her touching of their hands, T

I underwitten, being appointed by authority, to take 1692. this examination, do testify upon oath, taken in court, that this is a true copy of the substance of it, to the best of my knowledge, 5 Jan. 1692-3. The within Mary. Ofgood was examined before their Majesties justices of the peace in Salem.

Atteft. John Higginson, Just. Pac." A miserable negro woman, charged by some of the girls with afflicting them, confessed, but was cunning enough to bring the greatest share of the guilt upon her mistres.

"SALEM, Monday July 4. 1692. The examination of Candy, a negro woman, before Bartholomew Gedney and John Hawthorne Efq'rs. Mr. Nicholas Noyes alfo prefent.

Q. Candy ! are you a witch ? A. Candy no witch in her country. Candy's mother no witch. Candy no witch, Barbados. This country, mistres give Candy witch. Q. Did your mistress make you a witch in this country? A. Yes, in this country mistress give Candy witch. Q. What did your miftrefs do to make you a witch? A. Miftrefs bring book and pen and ink, make Candy write in it. Q. What did you write in it? ——She took a pen and ink and upon a book or paper-made a mark. Q. How did you afflict or hurt these folks, where are the puppets you did it with ?---She asked to go out of the room and she would shew or tell; upon which fhe had liberty, one going with her, and fhe prefently brought in two clouts, one with two knots tied in it, the other one; which being feen by Mary Warren, Deliverance Hobbs and Abigail Hobbs, they were greatly affrighted and fell into violent fits, and all of them faid that the black man and Mrs. Hawkes and the negro flood by the puppets or rags and pinched them, and then they were afflicted, and when the knots. were untied yet they continued as aforefaid. A bit of . VOL. II. bra 1692. one of the rags being fet on fire, the afflicted all faid they were burned, and cried out dreadfully. The rags being put into water, two of the forenamed perfons were in dreadful fits almost choaked, and the other was violently running down to the river, but was stopped.

Atteft. John Hawthorne, Juft. Peace."

MRS. Hawkes, the mistrefs, had no other way to fave her life but to confess also.

MR. Hale, the minister of Beverly, who has the character of an impartial relator, acknowledges that the confessors, generally, went off from their confessions; fome faying they remembered nothing of what they had faid, others that they had belied themfelves, &c. but he thinks, if the times had been calm, the condition of the confessors might have called for a melius inquirendum; and thinks it remarkable that children and grandchildren should confirm their parents and grand-parents confession, instancing in the case of Goody Foster, her daughter Mary Lacey, and grand-daughter Mary Lacey, jun. and that other children should accuse their own parents, as in the cafe of Richard Carrier, a lad of 18 years of age. These confessions are preferved, and a few extracts from them will shew they were forced from them, through fear of loing their lives if they refufed, and their fear, in fome, was fo great as to diforder their brains, and they fcarce knew what they faid.

" 21st July 1692. Before Major Gidney, Mr. Hawthorne, Mr. Corwin and Capt. Higginson.

"O. Goody Foster! you remember we have three times spoken with you, and do you now remember what you then confessed to us?—You have been engaged in very great wickedness, and some have been left to hardness of heart to deny; but it seems that God will give you more favour than others, inasmuch as you relent, relent. But your daughter here hath confessed fome 1692. things that you did not tell us of. Your daughter was with you and Goody Carrier, when you did ride upon the flick. A. I did not know it. Q. How long have you known your daughter to be engaged? A. I cannot tell, nor have I any knowledge of it at all. Q. Did you fee your daughter at the meeting? A. No. Q. Your daughter faid the was at the witches meeting, and that you yourfelf stood at a distance off and did not partake at that meeting; and you faid fo alfo; give us a relation from the beginning until now. A. I know none of their names that were there, but only Goody Carrier. Q. Would you know their faces if you faw them? A. I cannot tell. Q. Were there not two companies in the field at the fame time? A. I remem-ber no more:—Mary Warren, one of the afflicted, faid that Goody Carrier's fhape told her, that Goody Fofter had made her daughter a witch. — Q. Do not you acknowledge that you did fo about 13 years ago? A. No, and I know no more of my daughter's being a witch than what day I shall die upon. Q. Are you willing your daughter should make a full and free con-fession? A. Yes. Q. Are you willing to do so too? A. Yes. Q. You cannot expect peace of confcience without a free confellion. A. If I knew any thing more, I would fpeak it to the utmost. — Goody Lacey, the daughter, called in, began thus; Oh! mother! how do you do? We have left Chrift, and the devil hath gat hold of us. How fhall I get rid of this evil one? I defire God to break my rocky heart that I may get the victory this time. Q. Goody Foster! you cannot get rid of this snare, your heart and mouth is not open. A. I did not fee the devil, I was praying to the Lord. Q. What Lord? A. To God. Q. What God do witches pray to? A. I cannot tell, the Lord help me! Q. Goody Lacey! had you no difcourfe with your mo-ther when riding? A. No, I think I had not a word. D 2 Q. Who 1692. Who rid foremost on that flick to the village? A. L fuppose my mother. — Goody Foster said, that Goody Carrier was foremost — Q. Goody Lacey ! how many years ago fince they were baptized ? A. Three or four years ago, I fuppofe. Q. Who baptized them ? A. The old ferpent. Q. How did he do it ? A. He dipped their heads in the water, faying, they were his and that he had power over them. Q. Where was this? A. At Fall's river. Q. How many were baptized that day? A. Some of the chief; I think there were fix baptized. Q. Name them. A. I think they were of the higher powers. + ----- Mary Lacey, the grand-daughter, was brought in, and Mary Warren fell into a violent fit. Q. How dare you come in here, and bring the devil with you, to afflict these poor creatures ?--- Lacey laid her hand on Warren's arm, and the recovered from her fit. -Q. You are here accufed of practiling witchcraft upon Goody Ballard, which way do you do it? A. I cannot tell. Where is my mother that made me a witch, and I knew it not? Q. Can you look upon that maid Mary Warren, and not hurt her? Look upon her in a friendly way .- She, trying fo to do, ftruck her down with her eyes. Q. Do you acknowledge now you are a witch ? A. Yes. Q. How long have you been a witch ? A. Not above a week. Q. Did the devil appear to you? A. Yes. Q. In what ihape? A. In the ihape of a horfe. Q. What did he fay to you? A. He bid me not to be afraid of any thing, and he would not bring me out, but he has proved a liar from the beginning. Q. When was this? A. I know not; above a week. Q. Did you fet your hand to the book ? A. No. Q. Did he bid you worfhip him? A. Yes, he bid me alfo afflict perfons. You are now in the way to obtain mercy if you will confess and repent. She faid, the Lord help me. this

† It was time to ftop.

this matter. She then proceeded.——I was in bed and 1692. the devil came to me and bid me obey him and I fhould want for nothing, and he would not bring me out. Q. But how long ago? A. A little more than a year. Q. Was that the first time ? A. Yes. Q. How long was you gone from your father, when you ran away? A. Two days. Q. Where had you your food? A. At John Stone's. Q. Did the devil appear to you then, when you was abroad? A. No, but he put fuch thoughts in my mind as not to obey my parents. Q. Who did the devil bid you afflict? A. Timothy Swan. Richard Carrier comes often a nights and has me to afflict perfons. Q. Where do ye go? A. To Goody Ballard's fometimes. Q. How many of you were there at a time? A. Richard Carrier and his mother, and my mother and grandmother.——Upon reading over the confession fo far, Goody Lacey, the mother, owned this last particular. Q. How many more witches are there in Andover? A. I know no more, but Richard Carrier,"

CARRIER, at first, denied all, but was followed until he was brought to accuse his mother, much in the same manner with Foster's daughter and grand-daughter.

It is urged by the writers of that day, as a principal part of the evidence against Mr. Burroughs, the minister, that feven or eight of the confessions witness against him. It will appear from the examinations, that the confession was drawn from the examinants by the court.

"Q. Mary Lacey! was there not a man alfo among you at your meeting? A. None but the devil, Q. What thape was the devil in then? A. He was a black man, and had a high crowned hat. Q. Your mother and your grandmother fay, there was a minister there. How many men did you fee there? A. I faw none but Richard Carrier. Q. Did you fee none elfe? A. There was a minister there, and I think he is now in prifon. D 3. Q. Were 1692. Q. Were there not two * ministers there? A. Cannot tell. Q. Was there not one Mr. Burroughs there? A. Yes."

> CARRIER's examination is in this manner; the queflions are omitted. "We met in a green which was the minister's pasture—We were in two companies at last —I think there was a few men with them—I heard Sarah Good talk of a minister or two—One of them was he that has been at the eastward, his name is Burroughs, and is a little man.—I remember not the other's name."

> MARGARET JACOBS had been brought to accufe herfelf, and then to charge Burroughs, the minister, and her own grandfather; but, struck with horror, chose to lose her own life, rather than persist in her confession; and begged forgiveness of Burroughs before his execution, who is faid to have freely forgiven her; and recanted all she had faid against her grandfather, but in vain as to his life. Her own life was faved by a diforder in her head, which prevented her trial at the first court; but before the next court, she made a formal recantation of all she had confessed, and delivered it to the judges.

> "THE humble declaration of Margaret Jacobs unto the honoured court now fitting at Salem, fleweth, "THAT whereas your poor and humble declarant being clofely confined here in Salem goal for the crime of witchcraft, which crime thanks be to the Lord I am

> * Mr. Deane, one of the miniflers of Andover, then near four core, feems to have been in danger. He is tended you to a fair character, and he may be one of the perfons accufed, who caufed a difcouragement to further profecutions. "Deliverance Deane being afked why fhe and the reft brought in Mr. Deane as afflicting perfons, fhe anfwered, it was Satan's fubtilty, for he told her he would put a fham upon all these things, and make people believe that he did afflict. She faid Mrs. Ofgood and the gave their confent the devil fhould bring Mr. Deane's fhape to afflict. Being afked again if Mrs. Ofgood and the acted this bufinefs, the faid yes." Mr. Deane was much beholden to this woman.

I am altogether ignorant of, as will appear at the great 1692. day of judgment : May it pleafe the honoured court, I was cried out upon by fome of the posselfed perfons, as afflicting them; whereupon I was brought to my examination, which perfons at the fight of me fell down, which did very much startle and affright me. The Lord above knows I knew nothing, in the leaft measure, how or who afflicted them; they told me, without doubt I did, or elfe they would not fall down at me; they told me, if I would not confess I should be put down into the dungeon and would be hanged, but if I would confefs I should have my life; the which did fo affright me, with my own vile wicked heart, to fave my life; made me make the like confession I did, which confession, may it pleafe the honoured court, is altogether falfe and untrue. The very first night after I had made confesfion, I was in fuch horror of confcience that I could not fleep for fear the devil fhould carry me away for telling fuch horrid lies. I was, may it pleafe the honoured court, fworn to my confession, as I understand fince, but then, at that time, was ignorant of it, not knowing what an oath did mean. The Lord, I hope, in whom I truft, out of the abundance of his mercy, will forgive me my falfe forfwearing myfelf. What I faid, was altogether falfe against my grandfather, and Mr. Burroughs, which I did to fave my life and to have my liberty; but the Lord, charging it to my confcience, made me in fo. much horror, that I could not contain my felf before I had denied my confession, which I did though I faw nothing but death before me, chusing rather death with a quiet confcience, than to live in fuch horror, which I could not fuffer. Where, upon my denying my confeffion, I was committed to close prifon, where I have enjoyed more felicity in spirit, a thousand times, than I did before in my enlargement.

"AND now, may it please your honours, your declarant, having, in part, given your honours a description of my condition, do leave it to your honours pious and

D 4

judicious

1692. judicious diferetions, to take pity and compafilon on my young and tender years, to act and do with me, as the Lord above and your honours fhall fee good, having no friend, but the Lord, to plead my caufe for me; not being guilty in the leaft measure of the crime of witchcraft, nor any other fin that deferves death from man; and your poor and humble declarant fhall for ever pray, as fhe is bound in duty, for your honours happinefs in this life and eternal felicity in the world to come, So prays your honours declarant.

Margaret Jacobs."

THE recantation of feveral perfons in Andover will fhew in what manner they were brought to their confessions.

TATE whole names are under-written, inhabitants of Andover; whenas that horrible and tremendous judgment beginning at Salem village in the year 1692, by fome called whichcraft, first breaking forth at Mr. Parris's houfe, feveral young perfons, being feemingly afflicted, did accufe feveral perfons for afflicting them, and many there believing it fo to be, we being informed, that, if a perfon was fick, the afflicted perfon could tell what or who was the caufe of that ficknefs : Jofeph Ballard, of Andover, his wife being fick at the fame time, he, either from himfelf or by the advice of others, fetched two of the perions, called the afflicted perions, from Salem village to Andover, which was the beginning of that dreadful calamity that befek us in Andover, believing the faid acculations to be true, fent for the faid perfons to come together to the meeting house in Andover, the afflicted perfons being there. After Mr. Barnard had been at prayer, we were blindfolded, and our hands were laid upon the afflicted perfons they being in their fits and falling into their fits at our coming into their prefence, as they faid; and fome led us and laid our hands supon them, and then they faid they were well, and that we

we were guilty of afflicting them : Whereupon, we were 1692. all feized, as prifoners, by a warrant from the justice of the peace and forthwith carried to Salem. And, by reafon of that fudden furprizal, we knowing ourfelves altogether innocent of that crime, we were all exceedingly aftonished and amazed, and consternated and affrighted even out of our reason; and our nearest and dearest relations, feeing us in that dreadful condition, and knowing our great danger, apprehended there was no other way to fave our lives, as the cafe was then circumstanced, but by our confessing ourfelves to be fuch and fuch perfons as the afflicted reprefented us to be, they, out of tenderness and pity, perfuaded us to confess what we did confess. And indeed that confession, that it is faid we made, was no other than what was fuggefted to us by fome gentlemen, they telling us that we were witches, and they knew it, and we knew it, which made us think that it was fo; and our understandings, our reason, our faculties, almost gone, we were not capable of judging of our condition; as also the hard measures they used with us rendered us incapable of making our defence, but faid any thing and every thing which they defired, and most of what we faid was but, in effect, a confenting to what they faid. Some time after, when we were better composed, they telling us what we had confessed, we did profess that we were innocent and ignorant of fuch things; and we hearing that Samuel Wardwell had renounced his confession, and quickly after condemned and executed, fome of us were told we were going after Wardwell.

" Mary Ofgood, Deliverance Dane, Sarah Wilfon, Mary Tiler, Abigail Barker, Hannah Tiler."

THE testimonial to these perfons characters by the principal inhabitants of Andover will outweigh the credulity of the justices who committed them, or of the grand jury which found bills against them.

" To

1692. "To the honoured court of Affize held at Salem. THE humble address of feveral of the inhabitants of Andover.

" May it pleafe this honoured court,

" VA7E being very fensible of the great fufferings our VV neighbours have been long under in prifon, and charitably judging that many of them are clear of that great trangression which hath been laid to their charge, have thought it our duty to endeavour their vindication, fo far as our testimony for them will avail. The perfons in whole behalf we are defired and concerned to. fpeak fomething at prefent are Mrs. Mary Ofgood, Eunice Frye, Deliverance Dane, Sarah Wilton and Abigail Barker who are women of whom we can truly give this character and commendation, that they have not only lived among us fo inoffenfively as not to give the least occasion to any that know them to suspect them, of witchcraft, but by their fober godly and exemplary conversation have obtained a good report in the place, where they have been well efteemed and approved in the church of which they are members,

"" WE were furprized to hear that perfons of known integrity and piety were accused of fo horrid a crime, not confidering, then, that the most innocent were liable to be fo misrepresented and abused. When these women were accused by some afflicted persons of the neighbourhood, their relations and others, tho' they had fo good grounds of charity that they should not have thought any evil of them yet, through a milrepresentation of the truth of that evidence that was fo much credited and improved against people, took great pains to perfuade them to own what they were, by the afflicted, charged with, and, indeed, did unreafonably urge them to confels themfelves guilty, as fome of us who were then present can testify. But these good women did very much affert their innocency, yet fome of them faid they were were not without fear least Satan had some way ensnar- 1692. ed them, becaufe there was that evidence against them which then was by many thought to be a certain indication and discovery of witchcraft, yet they feriously profeffed they knew nothing by themfelves of that nature. Neverthelefs, by the unwearied follicitations of those that privately difcourfed them both at home and at Salem, they were at length perfuaded publickly to own what they were charged with and fo fubmit to that guilt which we still hope and believe they are clear of. And, it is probable, the fear of what the event might be and the encouragement that, it is faid, was fuggested to them, that confessing was the only way to obtain favour, might be too powerful a temptation for timorous women to withstand, in the hurry and distraction that we have heard they were then in. Had what they faid against themfelves proceeded from conviction of the fact, we should have had nothing to have faid for them, but we are induced to think that it did not, because they did foon privately retract what they had faid, as we are informed, and, while they were in prifon, they declared to fuch as they had confidence to fpeak freely and plainly to, that they were not guilty of what they had owned, and that what they had faid against themselves was the greatest grief and burden they laboured under : Now, though we cannot but judge it a thing very finful for innocent perfors to own a crime they are not gulity of, yet, confidering the well ordered conversation of those women while they lived among us, and what they now ferioufly and constantly affirm in a more composed frame, we cannot but in charity judge them innocent of the great transgression that hath been imputed to them. As for the rest of our neighbours, who are under the like circumstances with thefe that have been named, we can truly fay of them that, while they lived among us, we have had no caufe to judge them fuch perfons as, of late, they have been represented and reported to be, nor do we know that that any of their neighbours had any just grounds to fuf-1692 pect them of that evil that they are now charged with.

THE HISTORY OF

> Dudley Bradstreet John Abbot, sen. Francis Dane, sen. SamuelBlanchard Thomas Barnard Tho.Chandler, fen. John Barker HenryIngolls, fen. Wm. Chandler, fen. Samuel Martin. Stephen Parker Samuel Ingolls Ephraim Stevens. Daniel Poore John Ingolts HenryIngolls, jun. John Frie, fen. James Frie John Aflebee Samuel Holt

Wm. Ballard Thomas Hooper John Hooper Wm. Abbor James Ruffell Oliver Holt John Preffon Francis Dane, jun. Eliza. Barnard George Abbot Wm.Chandler, jun. Hannah Chandler John Chandler Joseph Robinson Thomas Johnson Tho. Johnson, jun. Robert Russel Andrew Peters Mary Peters

Elizabeth Rite Wm. Peters Sam. Peters Walter Wright Hooker Ofgood Benja. Stevens Ann Bradstreet Ioanna Dane Eliza. Stevens Phebe Robinson Hannah Dane Bridget Chandler Mary Johnson Mary Ruffel."

AMONG the confessing witches I find Dorothy Falkener, a child of 10 years, Abigail Falkener of 8, and Sarah Carrier between 7 and 8.

"SARAH CARRIER's confession Aug. the 11th, 1696.

"IT was asked Sarah Carrier by the Magistrates or Justices John Hawthorne Esq; and others : How long haft thou been a witch ? A. Ever fince I was fix years old. Q. How old are you now ? A. Near eight years old, brother Richard fays I shall be eight years old in November next. Q. Who made you a witch ? A. My mother, fhe made me fet my hand to a book. Q. How did you fet your hand to it ? A. I touched it with my fingers and the book was red, the paper of it was white. She faid she never had seen the black man; the place where she did it was in Andrew Foster's pafture and Elizabeth Johnson junr. was there. Being asked who was there befide, fhe answered her Aunt Toothaker aker and her coufin. Being asked when it was, the faid, 1692. when fhe was baptized. Q. What did they promife to give you? A. A black dog. Q. Did the dog ever come to you? A. No. Q. But you faid you faw a cat once. What did that fay to you ? A. It faid it would tear me in pieces if I would not fet my hand to the book. She faid her mother baptized her and the devil or black man was not there, as fhe faw, and her mother faid when the baptized her, thou art mine for ever and ever and amen. Q. How did you afflict folks? A: I pinched, them, and the faid the had no puppets, but the went to them that the afflicted. Being asked whether the went in her body or her spirit, she faid in her spirit. She faid her mother carried her thither to afflict. Q. How did your mother carry you when the was in prifon ? A. She came like a black cat. Q. How did you know that it was your mother? A. The cat told me fo that fhe was my mother. She faid the afflicted Phelps's child laft faturday, and Elizabeth Johnson joined with her to do it. She had a wooden spear, about as long as her finger, of Elizabeth Johnson, and she had it of the devil. She would not own that fhe had ever been at the witch meeting at the village. This is the fubstance.

Atteft. Simon Willard." This poor child's mother then lay under fentence of death, the mother of the other two children was in prifon, and foon after tried and condemned, but upon her confeffion reprieved, and finally pardoned.

I meet with but one perfon in near an hundred whofe examinations are upon file, that was difmiffed after having been once charged, for which he might thank one of the girls who would not agree with the reft in the accufation.

"THE examination of Nehemiah Abbot, at a court at Salem village, by John Hawthorne and Jonathan Corwin Efg'rs. 22d April 1692.

WHAT fay you, are you guilty of witchcraft, of which you are inspected, or not? No Sir, 1 fay before God, before whom I stand, that I know nothing

45

Ot

THE HISTORY OF

1092. of witchcraft. Who is this man? Ann Putman named him .- Mary Walcot faid the had feen his thape. What do you fay to this? I never did hurt them. Who hurt you Ann Putman? That man. I never hurt her. Ann Putman faid, he is upon the beam. Just fuch a discovery of the person carried out, and she confessed ; and if you would find mercy of God, you must confels. -If I should confess this, I must confess what is false, Tell how far you have gone, who hurts you? I do not know, I am absolutely free. As you fay, God knows. If you will confess the truth, we defire nothing elfe that you may not hide your guilt, if you are guilty, and therefore confess if fo. I speak before God that I am clear from this acculation. What, in all respects? Yes in all respects. Doth this man hurt you? Their mouths were flopped. 'You hear feveral accuse you, though one cannot open her mouth: I am altogether free. Charge him not unlefs it be he. This is the man fay fome, and fome fay he is very like him. How did you know his name? He did not tell me himself, but other witches told me. Ann Putman faid, it is the fame man; and then the was taken with a fit. Mary Walcot, is this the man? He is like him, I cannot fay it is he. Mercy Lewis faid it is not the man. They all agreed, the man had a bunch on his eyes. Ann Putman, in a fit, faid, be you the man? ay, do you fay you be the man? did you put a mist before my eyes? Then he was fent forth till feveral others were examined. When he was brought in again, by reafon of much people and many in the windows fo that the accufers could not have a clear view of him, he was ordered to be abroad, and the accufers to go forth to him and view him in the light, which they did, and in the prefence of the magistrates and many others difcourfed quietly with him, one and all acquitting him, but yet faid he was like that man, but he had not the wen they faw in his apparition. Note, he was a hilly faced man and flood fhaded by reafon of his own hair, fo that for a time he feemed to fome fome by-standers and observers, to be considerably like 1692. the perfon the afflicted did describe.

"Mr. Samuel Parris, being defired to take in writing the examination of Nehemiah Abbot, hath delivered it as aforefaid, and upon hearing the fame did fee caufe to difmifs him. John Hawthorne, Affiftants."

Jona. Corwin, S

WE fee, from the preceding examinations and confeffions, the method of proceeding preparatory to the trial of the accufed perfons.

FOR three or four months, the afflicted, generally, confined themfelves to their own neighbourhood, in their acculations. In the examinations there is, fometimes, mention made of strangers, whose shapes or spectres were unknown to the afflicted. The first accused, in any other county, was Mrs. Cary, wife of Mr. Nathaniel Cary, a principal inhabitant of the town of Charlestown: He, as foon as he heard of it, carried his wife to Salem village, fupposing the would not be known to the afflicted. They happened to arrive, just as the justices were going into the meeting houfe, where they held their court, to examine prifoners. All the prifoners, which were brought in, were accufed, and the girls fell into fits as usual; but Mrs. Cary came in and fat without any notice, except that one or two of the afflicted came to her and afked her name. After the examination, her husband went to the tavern, intending there to difcourfe with one of the girls, who he heard had accused his wife. John, the Indian who pretended to be one of the afflicted, was a fervant in the houfe. Two of the girls were foon brought in, and inftead of giving any opportunity of difcourfing with them, they tumbled about the floor, crying out Cary, Cary, and a warrant came to apprehend her; the Indian joining with the two girls in the charge. No bail could be admitted, nor was it to any purpofe to make any defence, and she was ordered to the prison in Bofton; but, upon the request of her husband, was removed 1692. removed to Cambridge goal, where the was kept in irons. Afterwards when the trials came on at Salem, her hufband went there to fee how they were managed, and he thought the only chance his wife had for her life, was by an efcape, which; by fome means or other, he effected, and fled with her to New York, where Governor Fletcher entertained them very courteoufly.— They petitioned, I fuppofe before the efcape, that the might be tried in the county where the lived. If the court thought they were held to try the fact in the county where it was committed, there feems to have been room for an argument, her body being in Middlefex at the fame time that her fpectre and the body of the afflicted perfons were in Effex.

48

Mrs. Cary was committed about the middle of May. Towards the end of the month, Capt. John Alden of Boston was accused, who was thereupon fent down to Salem. He had been many years commander of a floop in the colony fervice, employed for fupplying the forts east with provisions and stores ; and although, upon his first appearing, the justices allowed that he always had the character of an honest man, yet one of them, Gidney, foon after, let him know he then faw reafon to think of therwife of him. Alden, in his account, fays, that the accufer first pointed to another man and faid nothing; but that the man who held her flooped down to her ear and then she cried out Alden, Alden. All were ordered into the streets and a ring made, and then she cried out, there stands Alden a bold fellow with his hat on; fells powder and shot to the Indians, lies with the squaws and has papoofes &c. He was immediately taken into cuftody of the Marshall and required to deliver up his fword. A further examination was had in the meeting house, and his hands were held open by the officer, that he might not pinch the afflicted, who were ftruck down at the fight of him, and made their usual cries; all which, the justices deem'd fufficient grounds for committing him to goal, where he lay 15 weeks, and then he was prevailed prevailed on by his friends to make his efcape, and to 1692. abfent himfelf until the confternation should abate, and the people recover the use of their reason.

ALTHOUGH the number of prifoners had been in-creafing, from February until the beginning of June, yet there had been no trials. The charter was expected from day to day, and the new conflictution of government to take place. Soon after it's arrival, commissioners of over and terminer were appointed for the trial of witchcrafts. By the charter, the general affembly are to constitute courts of justice, and the governor with the advice of council is to nominate and appoint judges, commissioners of over and terminer, &c. but whether the governor, with advice of council, can constitute a court of over and terminer, without authority for that purpole derived from the general affembly, has been made a question; however, this, the most important court to the life of the fubject which ever was held in the province, was conftituted in no other manner. It was opened at Salem, the first week in June. Only one of the accufed, Bridget Bilhop, alias Oliver, was then brought to trial. She had been charged with witchcraft twenty years before. The accuser, upon his death bed, confessed his own guilt in the accusation; but an old woman, once charged with being a witch, is never afterwards wholly free from the accufation, and the being, befides, of a fractious temper, all the loffes the neighbours met with in their cattle and poultry, and accidents in oversetting their carts, &c. were attributed to her spite against them, and now suffered to be testified against her. This evidence, together with the testimony of the afflicted, and of the confessors, what they had heard from the fpectres and feen of her fpectre, and an excrefcence, called a teat; found upon her body, were deemed by court and jury plenary proof, and the was convicted, and on the 10th of June executed. The further trials were put off to the adjournment, the 30th of June. The governor and council thought proper, in the mean time, VOL. II. E id 1692. to take the opiniou of feveral of the principal ministers upon the state of things as they then stood. This was an old charter practice. They gave their opinion as follows. *

> " THE return of feveral ministers, confulted by his Excellency and the honorable council upon the prefent witchcraft in Salem village.

Boston, June 15th, 1692.

"I. THE afflicted state of our poor neighbours, that are now fuffering by molestations from the invisible world, we apprehend fo deplorable, that we think their condition calls for the utmost help of all perfons in their feveral capacities.

"2. WE cannot but, with all thankfulnefs, acknowledge the fuccefs which the merciful God has given to the fedulous and affiduous endeavours of our honorable rulers, to defeat the abominable witchcrafts which have been committed in the country, humbly praying, that the difcovery of those mysterious and mischievous wickedneffes may be perfected.

"3. WE judge that in the profecution of thefe and all fuch witchcrafts, there is need of a very critical and exquifite caution, left by too much credulity for things received only upon the devil's authority, there be a door opened for a long train of miferable confequences, and Satan get an advantage over us; for we fhould not be ignorant of his devices.

"4. As, in complaints upon witchcrafts, there may be matters of enquiry which do not amount unto matters of prefumption, and there may be matters of prefumption which yet may not be matters of conviction, fo it is neceffary, that all proceedings, thereabout, be managed with an exceeding tendernefs towards those that may be complained

I fancy this must be what Douglass had heard fomething of and calls by mislake "the address of many of the very popular but very weak ministers or clergy to Sir W. P. a very weak governor, with thanks for what was already done, and exhorting him to proceed." complained of, especially if they have been perfons 1692. formerly of an unblemished reputation.

"5. WHEN the first enquiry is made into the circumftances of fuch as may lye under the just fuspicion of witchcrafts, we could with that there may be admitted as little as possible of fuch noife, company and openness as may too hastily expose them that are examined, and that there may be nothing used as a test for the trial of the fuspected, the lawfulness whereof may be doubted by the people of God; but that the directions given by fuch judicious writers, as Perkins and Bernard, may be observed.

"6. PRESUMPTIONS whereupon perfons may be committed and, much more, convictions whereupon perfons may be condemned, as guilty of witchcrafts, ought certainly to be more confiderable than barely the accufed perfon's being reprefented by a fpectre unto the afflicted; inafmuch as it is an undoubted and a notorious thing, that a dæmon may, by God's permiffion, appear, even to ill purpofes, in the fhape of an innocent, yea and a virtuous man. Nor can we effeem alterations made in the fufferers, by a look or touch of the accufed, to be an infallible evidence of guilt, but frequently liable to be abufed by the devil's leger-demain.

"7. WE know not whether fome remarkable affronts given the devils, by our diffelieving those testimonies whose whole force and strength is from them alone, may not put a period unto the progress of the dreadful calamity begun upon us, in the accusation of so many persons, whereof some, we hope, are yet clear from the great transgression laid to their charge.

"8. NEVERTHELESS, we cannot but humbly recommend, unto the government, the fpeedy and vigorous profecutions, of fuch as have rendered themfelves obnoxious, according to the directions given in the laws of God and the wholfome flatutes of the English nation; for the detection of witchcrafts."

E 2

THE

THE judges feem to have paid more regard to the last article of this return, than to feveral which precede it; for the profecutions were carried on with all poffible vigor and without that exquisite caution which is proposed.

AT the first trial, there was no colony or provincial law against witchcraft in force. The statute of James the first must therefore have been confidered as in force in the province, witchcraft not being an offence at common law. Before the adjournment, the: old colony law, which makes witchcraft a capital offence, was revived, with the other local laws, as they were called, and made a law of the province.

AT the adjournment, June 30. five women were brought upon trial, Sarah Good, Rebekah Nurfe, Sufannah Martin, Elizabeth How, and Sarah Wilder.

THERE was no difficulty with any but Nurfe. She was a member of the church and of a good character, and, as to her, the jury brought in their verdict not guilty; upon which the accufers made a great clamour, and the court expressed their diffatisfaction with the verdift, which caufed fome of the jury to defire to go out again; and then they brought her in guilty. This was a hard cafe, and can fcarcely be faid to be the execution of law and justice in mercy. † In a capital cafe, the court often refuses a verdict of, guilty, but, rarely, if ever, fends a jury out again, upon one of, not guilty. It does not indeed appear, that in this cafe the jury was ordered out again; but the diffatisfaction expressed by the court feems to have been in fuch a manner as to have the fame effect. The certificate given by the foreman of the jury, to fatisfy the relations of the woman, fhews how the fact was.

"July 4th, 1692. "Thomas Fisk the subscriber hereof, being one of them that were of the jury last week at Salem court, upon the trial of Rebekah Nurfe, &c. being defired defired, by fome of the relations, to give a reason why 1692. the jury brought her in guilty, after the verdict not guilty; I do hereby give my reasons to be as follows.

* A part of the oath the King takes at his coronation, " which Judges should have written on their hearts." Foster's crown law.

1692.

"WHEN the verdict not guilty was given, the honored court was pleafed to object against it, faying to them, that they think they let flip the words which the prisoner at the bar spake against herself, which were fpoken in reply to Goodwife Hobbs and her daughter, who had been faulty in fetting their hands to the devil's book, as they had confeffed, formerly; the words were "What ! do these persons give in evidence against me now? they used to come among us.' After the honored court had manifested their diffatisfaction of the verdict, several of the jury declared themfelves defirous to go out again, and thereupon the honored court gave leave; but when we came to confider the cafe, I could not tell how to take her words as an evidence against her, till she had a further opportunity to put her fense upon them, if she would take it; and then going into court, I mentioned the words aforefaid, which by one of the court were affirmed to have been fpoken by her, fhe being then at the bar but made no reply nor interpretation of them; whereupon, these words were to me a principal evidence against her. Thomas Fisk."

NURSE, being informed of the ufe which had been made of her words, gave in a declaration to the court, that "when fhe faid Hobbs and her daughter were of her company, fhe meant no more than that they were prifoners as well as herfelf; and that, being hard of hearing, fhe did not know what the foreman of the jury faid;" but her declaration had no effect.

MR. Noyes, the minister of Salem, a zealous profecutor, excommunicated the poor old woman and delivered her to Satan, to whom he supposed the had formally given herfelf up many years before; but her life and conversation had been such, that the remembrance thereof, in a short time after, wiped off all the reproach occafioned by the civil or ecclessifical featence against her.

E 3

IT is faid, that at the trial of Sarah Good, one of the 1692. afflicted perfons fell into a fit, and, after recovery, cried out, " that the prifoner had stabbed her and broke her knife in doing it;" and a piece of the knife was found upon the afflicted perfon; but a young man declared, that, the day before, he broke that very knife and threw away the piece, this afflicted perfon being then prefent. The court took fo much notice as to bid her tell no more lies, but went on to improve her as a witnefs against other prifoners.* Something happened, not unlike to this, in a trial before Sir Matthew Hale. The afflicted children, in their fits, would shriek out upon the least touch from Rofe Cullender, one of the witches, but remained quite infenfible when any body elfe touched them. Left there flould be any fraud, Lord Cornwallis, Sir Edmund Bacon, Serjeant Keeling and other gentlemen attended one of the girls, whilf the was in her fits, at another part of the hall, and one of the witches was brought, and an apron was put before the girl's eyes; but instead of the witches hand, another person's hand was taken to touch the girl, who thereupon fhrieked out as the ufed to do. The gentlemen returned and declared to the court they believed the whole was an imposture. Notwithstanding this, the witch was found guilty, and the judge and all the court were fully fatilfied with the verdict, and awarded fentence accordingly.

SUSANNAH MARTIN had been fuspected ever fince 1669, fo that many witch flories were reported of her and given in evidence against her. One of these women, being told at her execution by the minister Mr. Noyes, that he knew she was a witch, and therefore advised her to confess, she replied, that he lied, and that she was no

* This flory is related by Calef, who, by his narrative, gave great offence, having cenfured the proceedings, at a time when in general the country did not fee the error they had been in ; but in his account of facts which can be evidenced by records, and other original writings, he appears to have been a fair selator.

no more a witch than he was a wizard; and if he took 1692. away her life God would give him blood to drink. †

AT the trial of another of them, it is faid, that, one of the afflicted cried out in court upon Mr. Willard, a minister of Boston, and that she was immediately sent out of court; and it was given out that she was miltaken in the person. There was one Willard then in prison for witchcrast.

AT the next adjournment, Aug. 5th, George Burroughs, John Procter and Elizabeth his wife, John Willard, George Jacobs and Martha Carrier were all brought upon trial and condemned, and all executed upon the 19th of August, except Elizabeth Procter, who escaped by pleading her belly.

BURROUGHS had been a preacher, § feveral years before this, at Salem village, where there had been fome mifunderstanding between him and the people. Afterwards he became a preacher at Wells in the province of Main. We will be a little more particular in our account of his trial. || The indictment was as follows.

E 4

" Antio

- Calef.—They have a tradition among the people of Salem that a peculiar circumftance attended the death of this gentleman, he having been choaked with blood, which makes them fuppofe her, if not a witch, a Pythoniffa, at leaft, in this inftance.
- Calef.
 The confeffing witches were examined concerning him.—
 "Richard Carrier affirmed to the jury that he faw Mr. George Burroughs at the witch meeting at the village and faw him adminifter the facrament. Mary Lacey, fent and her daughter Mary affirmed that Mr. George Burroughs was at the witch meetings and witch facraments, and that the knows Mr. Burroughs to be of the company of witches. Aug. 3: 1692."
- Among the fufferers difcovered in England by MatthewHopkins in 1645, there was one Mr.Lewis, whom Mr.Baxter calls an old reading parfon, and fays that he confeffed he had two imps, and that he fent one to fink a fhip which he faw on the coaft, and that afterwards he faw the fhip fink. Doctor Hutchinfon, in his obfervations upon the Suffolk witches, fays, Mr. Lewis was an ancient clergyman, near fourfcore, who read Q. Elizabeth's homilies

1692.

56

" Anno Regis et Reginæ, &c. quarto.

Effex ff. THE Jurors for our fovereign Lord and Lady the King and Queen, prefent, that George Burroughs, late of Falmouth in the Province of Maffachufets bay, clerk, the ninth day of May, in the fourth year of the reign of our fovereign Lord and Lady William and Mary, by the grace of God of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, King and Queen, defenders of the faith, &c. and divers other days and times, as well before as after, certain, detestable arts called witchcrafts and forceries, wickedly and felonioufly hath ufed, practifed and exercifed, at and within the town of Salem, in the county of Effex aforefaid, in, upon and against one Mary Walcot of Salem village, in the county of Effex, fingle woman; by which faid wicked arts, the faid Mary Walcot, the ninth day of May, in the fourth year above faid, and divers other days and times as well before as after, was and is tortured, afflicted, pined, confumed, wasted and tormented, against the peace of our fovereign Lord and Lady the King and Queen, and against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. Endorsed Billa vera." Three other bills were found against him for witchcrafts upon other perfons, to all which he pleaded not guilty, and put himfelf upon trial, &c.

THE afflicted perfons, and the confeffing witches were first examined; for although, by the advice of the elders, their evidence was not conclusive, yet fome prefumption arofe from it, and with other circumstances to corroborate it, the proof might be fufficient to convict. One circumstance was, that, being a little man, he had performed feats beyond the strength of a giant, viz. had held homilies inflead of fermons, but being what was then called a malignant parfon, he was more eafily convicted; that upon his trial he afferted his innocency, and at his execution read the fervice for burial himfelf; that the confeffion Mr. Baxter mentions was from the evidence of perfons at his trial, and as Hopkins had fwam him feveral times till he was near drowning, fuch confeffion, or any others was not matter of great wender. held out a gun of feven feet barrel with one hand, and 1692. had carried a barrel full of cyder from a canoe to the shore. Upon his urging, that an Indian, who was prefent, held out the gun alfo, and the witneffes not remembring that any Indian was there, it was faid the Indian must have been the black man or the devil, who the witness fwore looks like an Indian. Other evidence was given of his harsh treatment of his wives, having been twice married, and of his pretending to them that he knew what had been faid to them in his absence, and his perfuading them to give it under their hands in writing, and to fwear to it, that they would not reveal his fecrets; and it was further faid they had privately complained to the neighbours that their house was haunted with spirits : And a brother of one of his wives fwore, that going out after strawberries, upon their return, he went into the bushes on foot, and though they rode a quick pace, yet when they came near home, to their aftonishment, they found him with them, and that he fell to chiding his wife for talking to her brother about him, and faid he knew their thoughts, which, the brother faid was more than the devil knew; to which Burroughs replied, that his god told him. Against this evidence he urged, that a man was with him, to fhew that another walked as fast as he did; and this was immediately determined to be the black man alfo. And, upon the whole, he was confounded and used many. twiftings and turnings, which I think we cannot wonder at. At his execution, he concluded his dying prayer with the Lord's prayer; probably to convince fome of the spectators of his innocence, for it was the received opinion, that a true witch could not fay the Lord's prayer without blundering,* and in many of the examinations it was used as a test, and several of the old women not faying it right, this was improved against them. SEPTEMBER

* "She was bid to fay the Lord's prayer. When the came to forgive us our trefpasses as we forgive them that trefpass against us, the faid, to do 1. No other miltake, in faying the prayer, semarkable." A woman's examination, Sept. 21, 1692-

SEPTEMBER the 9th, Martha Cory, Mary Efty, Alice Parker, Ann Pudeater, Dorcas Hoar, and Mary Bradbury were tried, and September 17th, Margaret Scott, Wilmot Read, Samuel Wardwell, Mary Parker, Abigail Falkner, Rebekah Eames, Mary Lacey, Ann Foster and Abigail Hobbs, and all received fentence of death. Those in italick were executed the 22d following.

MARY ESTY, who was fifter to Nurfe, gave in to the court a petition; in which fhe fays, fhe does not afk her own life, although fhe is confcious of her innocence, but prays them, before they condemn any more, to examine the confeffing witches more ftrictly; for fhe is fure they have belied themfelves and others, which will appear in the world to which fhe is going, if it fhould not in this world.

THOSE who were condemned and not executed, I suppose, all confessed their guilt. I have seen the confeffions of feveral of them. Wardwell also confessed, but he recanted and fuffered. His own wife, as well as his daughter,* accufed him and faved themfelves. There are many inftances, among the examinations, of children accusing their parents, and fome of parents ac-cusing their children. This is the only inftance of a wife or hufband, accufing one the other, and furely this inftance ought not to have been fuffered: I fhudder while I am relating it. Befides this irregularity, there were others in the course of these trials. The facts laid in the indictments were, witchcrafts upon particular perfons, there was no evidence of these facts, but what was called fpectral evidence, which, in the opinion of the minifters, was infufficient; fome of the other evidence was of facts ten or twenty years before, which had no relation to those with which they were charged; and some of them no relation to the crime of witchcraft. Evidence is not admitted, even against the general character of perfons upon upon trial, unlefs to encounter other evidence brought 1692. in favour of it; much lefs ought their whole lives to be arraigned, without giving time fufficient for defence.

* The daughter upon a fecond enquiry denied that fhe knew her father and mother to be witches; the wife was not afked a fecond time.

1692.

GILES CORY was the only perfon, befides those already named, who fuffered. He, feeing the fate of all who had put themfelves upon trial, refufed to plead; but the judges, who had not been careful enough in obferving the law in favour of the prifoners, determined to do it against this unhappy man, and he had judgment of peine fort et dure for standing mute, and was pressed to death; the only instance which ever was, either before this time or fince, in New-England. In all ages of the world superfitious credulity has produced greater cruelty than is practifed among the Hottentots, or other nations, whose belief of a deity is called in question.

THIS court of over and terminer, happy for the country, fat no more. Nineteen persons had been executed, all afferting their innocence; but this was not enough to open the eyes of the people in general. The goal at Salem was filled with prifoners, and many had been removed to other goals; fome were admitted to bail, all referved for trial, a law having paffed conflituting a supreme standing court, with jurisdiction in capital, as well as all other criminal cafes. The general court also shewed their zeal against witchcraft, by a law. paffed in the words of the statute of James the first, but this law was difallowed by the King. If the court was of opinion that the statute extended here, I fee no neceffity of a provincial act exactly in the fame words; if the statute did not extend here, I know not by what law the first that was tried could be fentenced to death. THE † Against many of the women there was likewife given in evidence the return of a jury of one man, a doctor, and eight women appointed to examine their bodies for texts and other devil's marks. The fearch was curious enough, but the return is too indelicate to appear in this relation. Some faid the credulity was fuch that a flea bite would pass well enough for a text or the devil's mark. 1692. THE time, by law, for holding the court at Salem, was not until January. This gave opportunity for confideration; and this alone might have been fufficient for a change of opinions and measures, but another reason has been given for it. Ordinarily, persons of the lowest rank in life have had the misfortune to be charged with witchcrafts; and although many fuch had fuffered, yet there remained in prifon a number of women, of as reputable families as any in the towns where they lived, and feveral perfons, of still superior rank, were hinted at by the pretended bewitched, or by the confessing witches. Some had been publickly named. Dudley Bradstreet, a justice of peace, who had been appointed one of prefident Dudley's council, and who was fon to the worthy old governor, then living, found it neceffary to abfcond. Having been remifs in profecuting, he had been charged by fome of the afflicted as a confederate. His brother, John Bradstreet, was forced to fly alfo. Calef fays it was intimated that Sir William Phips's lady was among the accused. It is certain, that one who pretended to be bewitched at Boston, where the infection was beginning to fpread, charged the fecretary of the colony of Connecticut.* Mrs. Hale, wife to the minister of Beverly, was accused also; which caused her husband to alter his judgment and to be lefs active in profecutions than he had been.

AT the court in January, the grand jury found bills against about 50 for witchcraft, one or two men, the rest women; but, upon trial, they were all acquitted, except three of the worst characters, and those the governor

* "As to what you mention, concerning that poor creature in your town that is afflicted, and mentioned my name to yourfelf and fon, I return you hearty thanks for your intimation about it, and for your charity therein mentioned; and I have great caufe to blefs God, who, of his mercy hitherto, hath not left me to fall into fuch an horrid evil." Extract of a letter from Secry Allen to Inc. Mather, Hartford, 18 March, 92-3. governor reprieved for the King's mercy. All that 1692. were not brought upon trial he ordered to be difcharged. Such a goal delivery was made this court, as has never been known at any other time in New-England.

SEVERAL perfons had been charged and imprifoned in the county of Middlefex alfo, and at the first court at Charlestown they were brought to trial, but the jury acquitted them all. Some of the court were diffatisfied. The juries changed fooner than the judges. However, it was not long before one, at leaft, of the judges of the first court of over and terminer was fensible of his error. Mr. Sewall, at a public fast, gave in to the minister a bill, acknowledging his error in the late proceedings, and defiring to humble himfelf in the fight of God and his people. It is faid, that, the chief justice, Mr. Stoughton, being informed of this action of one of his brethren, observed for himself that, when he fat in judgment, he had the fear of God before his eyes and gave his opinion according to the best of his understanding; and although it might appear afterwards, that he had been in an error, yet he faw no necessity of a public acknowledgment of it.

ONE of the ministers, who, in the time of it, was fully convinced that the complaining perfons were no impostures, and who vindicated his own conduct and that

† It is faid, the governor's lady, when Sir William was abfent, faved one poor woman from trial. "In Sir William's abfence, his-lady, I fuppofe upon account of her name's being Mary, (William and Mary) was follicited for a favour in behalf of a woman committed by one of the judges, on accufation of witchcraft, by a formal warrant under his hand and feal, and in clofe prifon for trial the next affizes, then not far off. The good lady, propria virtute, granted and figned a warrant for the faid woman's difcharge, which was obeyed by the keeper, and the woman lives ftill for aught I know. Truly, I did not believe this flory till I faw a copy of the mittimus and difcharge under the keeper's hand, attefled a true copy, for which difcovery the keeper was difcharged from his truft and put out of his employment, as he himfelf told me. M.S. letter.

1092. that of the court, in a narrative he published, remarks, not long after, in his diary, that many were of opinion that innocent blood had been shed. None of the pretended afflicted were ever brought upon trial for their fraud, some of them proved profligate persons, abandoned to all vice, others passed their days in obscurity or contempt.

> THE opinion which prevailed in New-England, for many years after this tragedy, that there was fomething præternatural in it, and that it was not all the effect of fraud and imposture, proceeded from the reluctance in human nature to reject errors once imbibed. As the principal actors went off the stage, this opinion has gradually leffened, and perhaps it is owing to a respect to the memory of their immediate anceftors; that many do not yet feem to be fully convinced. There are a great number of perfons who are willing to suppose the accusers to have been under bodily diforders which affected their imaginations. This is kind and charitable, but feems to be winking the truth out of fight. A little attention muft force conviction that the whole was a scene of fraud and imposture, began by young girls, who at first perhaps thought of nothing more than being pitied and indulged, and continued by adult perfons, who were afraid of being accused themselves. The one and the other, rather than confess their fraud, suffered the lives of fo many innocents to be taken away, through the credulity of judges and juries.#

> > IT

* The general court, about 20 years after, upon the petitions of the relations of those who had been executed, and of several perfors who had been charged and fled, and whose goods had been seized, made grants for and in confideration of the loss fusition of the petitioners alledged, that they bore no proportion to the real damage. Philip English, a merchant in Salem, received £. 300.—He computed his damages at £.1500.—Enquiry was made by a committee, and they professed to report such such search petitioner had suffered;

62

It was proposed that the members of the general 1692 court should, during the recess, confider of such laws as were necessary to be established; for the act reviving the colony laws was to continue in force no longer than until November 1692.

THIS was a work of great importance, and required the wifest heads, and ought to have been committed to felect perfons upon a preconcerted plan, the whole of which each perfon should have kept in view; for want thereof the people of the province have been fufferers ever fince; the construction of many laws has been doubtful and varying, it being impoffible to reconcile the feveral parts to any general principle of law whatfoever. Besides, being passed one after another, as they happened to be brought in, and fent to England for allowance, fome were disapproved; others, which depended upon or had fome connection with those which were difapproved, were allowed; whereas, if one complete code or fystem had been prepared and fent to England, fuch alterations would have been proposed, as might finally have iffued in a well digested confistent body of laws; and a temporary provision might have been made, until this perpetual rule fhould be fettled. Seven years had passed, and four different acts had been sent, one after another, to England, for establishing courts of justice, before the royal approbation could be obtained. It was the practice of the administration then, and, it feems, at that time to have been well enough received in the province, + to point out, either in the order difallowing laws; or to the agent who prefented them, the particular exceptions, and to propose fuch alterations as might render them

[†] "I am alfo obliged to acknowledge your Lordfhips favour in making known the reafons of the repeal of divers acts and laws made within this province, which is of good information and direction unto the general affembly in their new making of others to those purposes." Extr. from Lt.Gov. Stoughton's letter to lords of trade, Sept. 30. 1697. 1692. them acceptable, except in fuch cafes where the law in all it's parts was difapproved. ||

THE legiflature confifting of many of the fame perfons who had composed the legiflature under the old charter, we find the fame spirit, in most of the laws which were first passed as had been in the colony laws: The first act was a fort of Magna charta, afferting and fetting forth their general privileges, and this clause was among the rest, "No aid, tax, tallage, affessment, " custom, loan, benevolence or imposition whatsoever, " shall be laid, affessed, imposed, or levied on any of their " Majesties subjects or their estates, on any pretence " whatsoever, but by the act and confent of the gover-" nor, council and representatives of the people affembled " in general court." The other parts of the act were copied from Magna charta. This was foon difallowed. So was an act for punishing capital offenders; amongs whom are ranked idolaters, blasphemers and incessuo perfons.

|| By Poyning's act, fo called, it is provided, " that no parliament be hereafter holden in the faid land of Ireland but at fuch feafon as the King's lieutenant and council there first do certifie the King, under the great feal of that land, the caufes and confiderations, and all fuch acts as them feemeth should pass in the fame parliament, and fuch caufes, confiderations and acts affirmed by the King and his council to be good and expedient for that land." By an act of the parliament of England ad and 4th Phil. & Mar. it was determined, that the meaning of the words " good and expedient for that land" was that the acts fent to England might be passed in fuch form and tenor as fent over, or that any part of them might be changed and altered before they were fent back to Ireland to be paffed by the parliament there. A question, however, was started in the 12th of K. James I. and it was referred to the chief justice, &c. to confider both the Irifh and English act, and although it may feem difficult to include correction and alteration in affirmation, yet, it was certain, the act of Phil. & Mar. had fo explained it ; and thus, although the acts themfelves are to be originally drawn or proposed in Ireland; yet the amendments or alterations, which may be as material as the acts themfelves, originate in England. This feems unconstitutional in an English government. It is not certain, however, that there may not be conveniencies arifing hereby to the people of Ireland fufficient to balance all inconveniencies.

65

perfons, and, what the benignity of the common law 1692. makes manflaughter, was by this act expressly declared to be wilful murder. This law was framed from the judicial laws of Mofes. Divers other acts, which difcovered the fame spirit, met with the same fate. The danger they had been in from Sir Edmund Andros's calling their titles in question, I imagine, must have occafioned an act for quieting poffessions; declaring that three years quiet poffession should give a title, with the usual favings of infants, &c. This, probably, was thought too short a term, and therefore difallowed; as was also an act for the equal distribution of infolvents estates; the rule of law for paying debts according to their nature and degree was thought preferable; but the people having never been ufed to this, it would have been very inconvenient, and, upon further trial, the act, or one to the fame purpofe, was allowed. It is indeed difficult to affign a fufficient reason, why not only one set of creditors of a deceased infolvent shall be paid their full debts to the exclusion of all others; but even an executor or administrator shall have it in his power to pay himfelf, to the exclusion of others whole debts were of the fame nature.

OTHER acts, which were paffed, were approved, viz. one for prevention of frauds and perjuries, conformable to the ftatute of Charles the 2d; others for punifhing criminal offences, in many parts mitigating the penalties at common law; for the obfervation of the Lord's day; folemnizing marriages by a minifter or a juffice of peace; fettlement and fupport of minifters and fchoolmafters; regulating towns and counties; requiring the oaths appointed inftead of the oaths of allegiance and fupremacy, as alfo the oaths of officers; eftablifhing fees; afcertaining the number and regulating the houfe of reprefentatives, and divers other acts of immediate neceflity and general utility, which have been in force ever fince; but none of more univerfal influence than the act for fettlement of the eftates of perform Vol. II, dying intestate. In a new country the length of time an 1692. eftate has been in a family can't be urged for the further continuance of it; * where improvements are continually making, the perfonal eftate is continually changing into real, which increases the natural injustice of one child's taking the real eftate of the parent, to the exclusion of the other children; it was therefore thought reafonable, that the real as well as perfonal eftate of a parent should be equally distributed among his or her children, faving to the eldest fon, either from the rule in the law of Moses, or a supposed just claim from primogeniture, a double share. The act therefore, in general, was planned upon the flatute of distributions, but gave two shares to the eldest fon, and, undoubtedly, in the distribution among the children of an inteftate, respected real estates in like manner with perfonal; the widow had her thirds in the real for life only.

It is evident, that the principal point in view was to make real effates partible among the children of an inteffate, and that they never confidered the full operation of the claufe in the ftatute, and which is alfo brought into the act, providing, that where there are no children the whole effate fhall go to the next of kin to the inteffate. THE

- * In Ruffia, it is faid, they diftinguish between lands that have been a long time in a family and those of late original. "Lands, that have not been above twenty years in a family, fall to the younger children proportionably with the eldest." Voyage to the northern coasts of Europe.
- † Accordingly, for more than thirty years after the paffing this law, it was the prevailing practice, I am not fure it was fo in every inftance. for real effates to defeend and be diffributed by the courts of probate as at common law, the inftance of children of an inteffate only excepted. At length, by judgments at common law. first the half blood, then the father and the mother have been determined to be intitled to the real in like manner with the perfonal effate. General entails have been adjudged, notwithstanding, not to be partible. I suppose, upon this principle, that by this act the common law is altered only with respect to inteffate estates, and takes place in devites as if it had not been made. It had been expressly declared, in the laws of Plimouth colony, that lands in fee fimple should go to all the fons, the eldest a double share, but entails should go according to the laws of England.

THE new government, as we have observed, found 1692. themselves in a state of war. The authority of the colony had appointed Elisha Hutchinson; who was one of the affiftants and chief officer of the regiment of Bolton, to be commander of the forces. He was at Portsmouth, in New-Hampshire, when the charter arrived, and had disposed his men upon the eastern frontiers, fo as to cover the few inhabitants which remained there after the destruction of York. Captain Convers, with 15 men, was posted in a garrison house at Wells, called Storer's garrifon;* and about as many more were on board two floops, which went from Bofton with provisions. About the 10th of June, the inhabi-tants were alarmed, by their cattle running home from the woods in a fright, and fome wounded. This notice caufed the feveral families to betake themfelves immediately to this one houfe, where they were fcarce lodg-. ed, when an army of French and Indians, of three or four hundred, surrounded the house. A French officer, Labrocree, was commander, and Madockewando, Moxus, Egeremet and other noted Indian chiefs were under him. They first attempted the garrifon house; but having no cannon, they were repulsed and went to the floops. The river, where they lay, is not above 18 or 20 feet broad, but the banks flielve away to that they F 2 could

* Col. Storer, the prefent possefilor, kept up the ftockadoes, and one or more of the flankarts until fince the year 1760, rather as a memorial than neceffary defence.

We may observe here, that, in every frontier settlement there were more or lefs garrifon houfes, fome with a flankart at two oppofite angles, others at each corner of the houfe; fome houfes furrounded with pallifadoes, others, which were smaller, built with square timber, one piece laid horizontally upon another, and loop holes in every fide of the house; and, befides these, generally in any more confiderable plantation, there was one principal garrifon houfe, capable of containing foldiers fent for the defence of the plantation and the families near, whofe houfes were not fortified. It was thought justifiable and necessary; whatever the general rule of law might be, to erect fuch forts, caftles, or bulwarks as these upon a man's own ground, without commiffion or fpecial licence therefor.

1692. could not leap aboard. They fet the floops on fire feveral times, with fire arrows, but the fire was as often extinguished, and, after a variety of contrivances to shelter themselves from the English shot, they gave over and returned to the garrifon, where they had no better fuccefs. The women not only tended the men with ammunition and other necessaries, but many of them took their mulkets and fired upon the enemy. Very good terms were offered the garrifon, if they would furrender, but no regard was paid to them; an army of French and Indians were not to be trufted. Being drove again from the garrifon, they made a fecond attempt upon the floops by a fire raft, which fortunately drove ashore and broke, without any damage to the veffels. Having spent eight and forty hours in this way, they withdrew, with the lofs of Labrocree, their commander, and fome few of themen. In their retreat, they wreaked their malice, in torturing a poor Englishman, John Diamond, who was taken prifoner in paffing from the floops to the fort, and in killing all the cattle they could find.

SIR William Phips was charged by his inftructions to build a strong fort at Pemaquid. ' This he performed the first summer, going down in person. The country in general difliked it. They have been reproached for grudging at fo fmall an expence for their own fafety;+ but this was not the principal caufe of their averfion to a fort here. It answered no other purpose than to keep' poffeffion of that particular harbour, and was not convenient for a post for any marching parties, who from time to time were fent out for difcovery of the enemy, nor for the fettlers of the frontiers to retreat to. The ministry, I think, had a view in it, which the people of the pro-. vince feem not to have confidered, viz. preventing the French from claiming Acadie as a derelict country, and perhaps taking poffession of it as such. However, the fort was built and a very refpectable one; and a garrifon maintained maintained there at the charge of the province. The 1692. French immediately formed a defign, or profecuted what was before defigned, to posses themselves of the place. Two ships of war, le Poli and l'Envieux, under Iberville, were to attempt the place by fea, whilft Villebone, with a body of Indians, did the fame by land. The ships came late in the fall, and finding an English veffel at anchor under the guns of the fort, and having no pilots, nor any body acquainted with the coaft, they thought it prudent to retreat. The Indians had affembled in great numbers, and were very much diffatisfied, depending upon driving away their troublefome neighbours the English. The French, at Quebec, supposed these extraordinary preparations, which frustrated their attempt, were caufed by the intelligence which two deferters, who had been spirited away by Mr. Nelson, gave to the authority in the Maffachufets, but this was a miltake.*

[†] Difcovery and fettlement of the English in America in Harris'scollection.

WHILST the governor was at Pemaquid, building the fort, he fent Major Church, the celebrated commander in Philip's war, with part of the forces to Penobfcot, and upon his return he ordered him' to Kenebeck. Church took three or four prifoners and fome plunder at Penobfcot, and difcovered a great number of Indians; but for want of whaleboats could not purfue them. At Kenebeck, he burned a fort which the Indians had at Taconnick, and deftroyed their corn, but neither killed nor took prifoners any of the enemy.

WE meet with nothing elfe memorable this year relative to the frontiers. The Indians had not been very active; they were fenfible of their ill treatment from the French, who had often abandoned them, and it was the influence of the priefts and the bigotry of the Indians to the romifh religion, which prevented their forfaking the French intereft and adhering to the Englifh; befides, the Englifh had feveral of their principal people prifoners at Bofton, of whofe redemption they were very defirous, and had no hopes of accomplifhing it, except by a treaty of peace.

F 3 Charlevoix, and Vol. I. Hift. Maff. p. 378. ТПЕ

THE appointment of councellors, in the charter, was 1693. in confequence of the nomination made by Mr. Mather, the agent. Perhaps he was well enough pleafed, in the time of it, with having it in his power to diftinguish his friends, fome of whom he afterwards thought ungrateful to him; and those who had formerly been in, and now thought themfelves injured, as foon as they were restored shewed their resentment; and he used to fay he had been more unkindly treated, from time to time, by the council than any other men in the province. The election, in May 1692, was the first opportunity the country had of fhewing their own fense of Mr. Mather's nomination. William Stoughton, Thomas Danforth, John Pynchon, Elisha Cooke, Isaac Addington, William Browne, Nathaniel Thomas, John Saffin, Francis Hooke and Charles Frost, were elected councellors, (the fix first named had been affistants, but were left out of the charter) and Simon Bradftreet, Samuel Appleton, John Joyliffe, Adam Winthrop, Richard Middlecot, Joseph Lynde, Samuel Hayman, Stephen Mason, Thomas Hinckley and Tob Alcot, were left out of the council. Stoughton, the lieutenant governor, had acted as a councellor all the year 1692, altho' there were twenty eight without him ; the deputy governor used to be confidered as an affiftant under the old charter ;* but it was now thought proper to chufe him one of the twenty eight. They were not fure of always having a lieutenant governor fo agreable to the people as he was. The governor refused his confent to Mr. Cooke. He had opposed, when he was in England, the appointment of the governor. He was however in real effeem with the people, and the negative was impolitic.

REPEATED applications had been made for a naval force to be fent from England, fufficient in conjunction with

* The agents thought the cafe to be the fame under the new charter. This was the reafon why in the first draught the deputy governor as well as the council was to be annually cleffed by the affembly, when the governor was appointed by the crowa.

70

with land forces to be raifed in New England and New 1693. York, for the reduction of Canada, but without fucces; other affairs of the war not permitting this, though deemed important, to be engaged in. In 1692, it was refolved there should be an expedition the next year.* A fleet was to be employed in the winter, in reducing Martineco, and, having performed that fervice, was to go to Boston, there to take on board a body of land forces under Sir William Phips, and fo proceed to Quebec. Had Quebec been the only object, and reasonable notice given to the colonies, there was reafon to expect fuccefs. By the fleet's going to the West Indies, the whole defign was blasted. If fickness had not weakned them, the force would still have been infufficient for the reduction of Martineco; but the mortality was fo great, that before Sir Francis Wheeler, the commander in chief, came to Boston with the fleet, June 11th, he had buried 1300 out of 2100 failors, and 1800 of 2400 foldiers. It may well be fuppofed the admiral had done with the thoughts F A of

* " It has pleafed the King, out of his great goodnefs and difpofition for the welfare of all his fubjects, to fend a confiderable ftrength of fhips and men into the West-Indies, and to dire& Sir Francis Wheeler, the admiral, to fail to New-England from the Caribbee iflands, fo as to be there by the last of May, or middle of June at farthest, with a strength fufficient to overcome the enemy, if joined and feconded by the forces of New-England. I mean fuch a fupply of fhips, men and provision as may fecure a conquest of Nova-Scotia and Canada, the only means to make New-England happy and fecure hereafter. There never can be fuch an occasion for you to affift with your best perfwations, or for the people of New-England to shew their zeal for their religion and love to their king and country. His Majefty has taken care, befides the fhips of war, to fend you a thousand experienced foldiers, if their number be not diminished by their fervice in the West-Indies, under a commander who has looked the fame enemy in the face, and will fhew an example worthy to be followed. Sir William Phips, I fuppofe, will be at the head of the New-England volunteers, and will eafily acquiesce, according to the rules of war, in leaving the chief command as his Majesty has determined it."

Extr. from Blaythwait's letter to J. Mather, 20 Feb. 92:3.

of the Canada expedition. The land army, perhaps. 1693. might have been recruited, but a fupply of feamen could not be obtained. Besides, not the least preparation had been made, he brought the news himself of his proposed attempt. The letters, dated in February, the vefiel being by fome means or other delayed or beat off, the coaft. did not arrive until July. In an affair of fuch importance and in a time of war, notice might well have been expected by many different conveyances. Sir Francis fettled, with the government, a plan for another year, viz. 2000 land forces to be fent from England, and 2000 more to be raifed in the colonies, the ships and forces from England to be at Canfo by the first of June, where the forces from the colonies were to be ready for them; the whole force to go up the river, there to divide, and attack Montreal and Quebec at the fame time. Confidering the state Canada was then in, this feems to have been no injudicious plan. A rendezvous at Boston would have been known at Quebec, by perfons from the frontiers, before a fleet could have gone up the river. With Canfo (Cape Breton not being then fettled) the French in Canada had lefs communication : The whole force going up the river was not lefs judicious. Former and later attempts have flewn, how uncertain the mutual aid would have been, of an army up the river and another marching within land.

THE distemper, which had been in the fleet, spread in Boston and was more malignant than ever the small pox had been, or any other epidemical sickness which had been in the country before; and many families left the town & resided in the country, until the infection ceased.

THE moleftations upon the frontiers, this year, were not very great. Preparations were made for carrying on the war. Captain Convers, who had behaved well, was appointed with a Major's commission, to the command of the forces eastward. With a small army, of thought the frength he then had was fufficient, and they gave their opinion that it was not.

4 or

4 or 500 men, he marched to Taconick, on Kenebeck, 1693. but met with none of the enemy, except one party which he furprized, not far from Wells. On his return, he made fome ftay at Saco river; and about two leagues up the river, on the western fide, near the falls, a very proper station, he built a stone fort, an irregular penta-gon with a tower. This was in the heart of the Indians hunting ground, at that time, and was thought to have accelerated a treaty of peace. An apprehension prevailed among them, at the fame time, that the Iro-quois, inftigated by the English, would fall upon them. THURRY, a French missionary at Penobscot, spared no pains to prevent it, but they were ineffectual. The Indians fued for peace, and the English were glad of a respite from war. Pemaquid being appointed for the place of treaty, on the 1 th of August the articles were signed, and hostages delivered by the Indians, as a fecuri-ty for their fidelity. This fecurity could not be obtained from them in later treaties. It was ineffectual at this time.

CHARLEVOIX has not truly reprefented this tranf-action. He may have been mininformed, by the Indians who have always kept from the French, as far as they could, the fubmiffions made to the English. He fays, Sir William Phips had engaged a few of the Abenakis to a fort of an accommodation, and that two of their chiefs, in the month of May, had promifed that they would conclude upon articles of peace, and gave two holtages for the performance of their promife, and that Phips came in perfon to Pemaquid to have finished the affair, if de Villieu, a French officer, had not, by his diligence, prevented; for being feconded by the priest Thurry, he found out the fecret of recovering Madockewando, who had declared in favour of the English, and prevailed upon him to raife 250 men and make a defcent upon Pifcataqua river 36 miles from Bofton, Charlevoix has brought the treaty, made in 1693, into 1694, and by calling it only a proposal for a treaty, has given 1593. given a gloss to the whole affair, and extenuated the perfidy of the Indians in their hostilities, soon after, and the guilt of the priest in exciting them.

UPON the western frontiers, in the summer of this year, the Indians, led on by the French, made what the latter call la petite guerre upon our new settlements, but forces constantly kept up, prevented any remarkable destruction.

WHILST the government had their hands and hearts full, in providing for their own defence, they were called upon to provide their quota of men for the defence of New-York. Mr. Stoughton, in Sir William's absence eastward, excused the province from concerning itself therewith, in a letter to Lord Nottingham, Oct. 20.1693. "T Crave leave further to acquaint your Lordship, that " I the governor of New-York having written unto "his Excellency the governor here, fignifying his ap-" pointment of a meeting at New-York, upon the first " wednesday of this month, of commissioners from the " feveral governments of New-England, Virginia, &c. to " concert and agree upon a certain quota of men and " money for the defence of Albany, &c. in observance " of their Majesties commands; it hap'ned to be at such " a time and under fuch a conjuncture of affairs bere, " that no meet perfons could be procured to attend that " congress. Much may be faid to excuse this province " from contributing towards the charge of maintaining " and defending the frontiers belonging to New-York, " being at fuch a confiderable diftance from the fron-" tiers of this province far more large and exposed, " which have been defended and maintained at their own " charge, and many thousand pounds more spent in the " fupport and defence of New-Hampshire. Were the " whole account of the charge of the war to be pro-" portioned among the feveral colonies, it would plainly " appear, upon a right computation, that we have not " been fo forward to complain of the burden as fome of. S. OUT

" our neighbours; but it is hoped a true and impartial 1694; " reprefentation of this matter will apologize for us unto " their Majesties, that we be not included in the charge " at New-York." *

Sir WILLIAM PHIPS's rule was short. His conduct. when captain of a ship of war, is represented very much to his advantage; but further talents were neceffary for the good government of a province. He was of a benevolent, friendly difpolition; at the fame time quick and paffionate. A clofe attachment to his friends engaged him in a difpute with the collector of the cuftoms; and provocation, both from the collector and the captain of a man of war, caufed him to break out into fome indecent fallies of paffion and rage, and to treat both of them in fuch a manner as was difhonorable to him. Mr. Brenton, a young gentleman of a principal family in Rhode-Island government, had been appointed collector for the port of Boston. This was before the establishment of custom-houses in the plantations by act of parliament, The people thought it enough to enter and clear at the naval office, and queftioned the authority of the collector. The

- * A new apportionment was made in 1700, in which Maffachufets and New-Hampfhire were left out. Neither of them had the intended effect. New-York had fuffered greatly by the deftruction of Schenectady, and Albany was thought to be in danger. Thefe apportionments were, principally, for the fake of that province. The pext war, they provided for their own fecurity, by a neutrality which carried the whole force of the enemy upon their neighbours.
- Under the first charter the acts of trade had not been duly regarded. In 1681 Edward Randolph came over with a commission as collector. Soon after the general court passed a law for erecting a naval office, which Randolph represented as done in opposition to him. After the charter was vacated, divers vessels from Malaga, &c. were feized and condemned for illicittrade, and Randolph makes no complaint of being impeded in the execution of his office during that time ; but upon his return to England after the revolution he gave in a list of near a vessels which had been guilty of breaches of the acts of trade, and 1694. The governor being the naval officer, and acting by his deputy, did not discountenance this opinion of the people. A veffel arrived from the Bahama-iflands, with a load of fuftick, for which no bond had been given. Col. Foster, a merchant of Boston, a member of the council, and fast friend to the governor, bought the fustick, at fuch price that he was loth to give up the bargain. The collector feized the veffel and goods; and upon Foster's reprefentation to the governor, he interpofed. There was at that time no court of admiralty. By the charter, the King referved admiralty jurifdiction, but no court had been constituted. I have a manuscript, sent at that time to England, which says, the governor imagined, that, by virtue of his commission for vice-admiral, he had a right to fit as judge, and that he condemned feveral prizes, and, among the reft, the St. Joseph, brought in by a privateer of the Leeward-islands, which the captain would have carried thither for condemnation, but was not permitted. Be this as it may, it is certain that Sir William took a more fummary way of deciding this cafe, > and prayed that he might be reflored to the office of collector; and the agents were required by the Lords of the council to make anfwer. They denied the fact as to many of the veffels, and exculpated the government as to the reft, alledging that the general court had declared that they would firitly obferve the acts of trade, and, that none might plead ignorance, had ordered them all to be publifhed. Sir William Phips appointed one Benja. Jackfon naval officer. The tenfe of the people upon the office of collector will appear from the following extract of a letter to the agents.

76

⁶⁴ Mr. Brenton, their Majefties collector, has been endeavouring to impofe upon the government, by obliging all mafters of thips and other veffels to enter and clear with him, thereby burthening the people with unneceffary and unreafonable fees, of which complaints have been frequently made. We do not find any act of parliament requiring the fame, there being nothing of the growth or produce of this province from whence any cuftoms arife, and the governors of the feveral plantations are efpecially injoined by law to take care that the acts of trade and navigation be duly observed, under a fevere penalty for their neglect." Letter to H. Alburft and C. Phips, Feb. 21. 1692-3. cafe, and fent an order to the collector to forbear med- 1694. dling with the goods; and, upon his refufal to obferve orders, the governor went to the wharf, and after warm words, on both fides, laid hands upon the collector, but with what degree of violence was controverted by them. The governor prevailed, and the veffel and goods were taken out of the hands of the collector.

THERE had been a mifunderstanding also between the governor and captain Short, of the Nonefuch frigate. In their paffage from England, a prize was taken; and Short complained that the governor had deprived him of part of his fhare or legal intereft in her. Whether there were grounds for it, does not now appear. The captains of men of war, stationed in the colonies, were in those days required to follow fuch instructions as the governors gave them, relative to their cruizes and the protection of the trade of the colonies, and the governor, by his commillion, had power, in cafe of any great crime committed by any of the captains of men of war, to sufpend them, and the next officer was to fucceed. The governor required captain Short to order part of the men belonging to the Nonefuch upon fome fervice, which I do not find mentioned, probably to man fome cruizer, there being many pickeroons about the eaftern coafts, but he refufed to do it. This was ill taken by the governor; and meeting captain Short in the ftreet, warm words paffed, and at length the governor made use of his cane and broke Short's head. Not content with this, he committed him to prifon. The right of a governor, to commit by his own warrant, had not then been questioned. From the prifon he removed him to the caftle, and from thence on board a merchant veffel bound to London, to be delivered to the order of one of their Majesties principal fecretaries of state; giving the master a warrant or authority fo to do. The veffel, by fome accident, put into Portfmouth in New-Hampthire. Sir William, who feems to have been made fenfible of fome irregularity in: shelf proceedings, went to Portfmouth, required the mater 1694. master of the merchantman to return him the warrant; which he tore to pieces, and then ordered the cabin of the thip to be opened, fecured Short's chefts, and examined the contents. Short was prevented going home in this veffel, and went to New-York, to take paffage from thence for England; but Sir F. Wheeler arriving foon after at Boston, sent for him and carried him home with him. The next officer succeeded in the command of the ship, until a new captain arrived from England: Short was reftored to the command of as good a fhip. Brenton's complaint was made to the Lords of the treafury. about the fame time, and referred to the board of trade, and both came before the King, who was follicited immediately to difplace the governor. This the King refufed to do, without hearing what he had to fay in his defence ; and he was ordered to leave his government and make anfwer in England. The governor's friends in New England, excused him by the great provocation he received, both from the captain of the man of war and the collector. This would ferve better to excufe a private perfon, than the governor of a province. The prejudices were great against him in England. Mr. Dudley, who was upon the fpot and defired to fucceed him, heightened them. There was a strong party against him also within, the province. By negativing Mr. Cooke, he had made many of those who had opposed all measures, except the restoration of the old charter, to be his enemies. Dudley had been trying to reconcile himfelf to his countrymen ever fince the revolution : He had great family interest. Stoughton, the lieutenant governor, retained his friendfhip, and fecretly corresponded with him, and was very cold in Sir Williams's intereft.* They who had been in

* "In my laft I inclofed the copies of feveral complaints againft your governor, Sir William Phips. I am forry to fee you weakned by your own hands, and those friends among yourselves that defign the interest of the country so little agree in the means and manner of doing it. You are reproached here, that your governor is of one opinion, your deputy governor of in favor of the charter were for him. They were 1694. the most numerous, but not most active and zealous. The private letters, fent to England, were generally against him. He had a hard task to keep a majo-rity of the general court in his favor. An address was proposed and carried in the house of represen-tatives, humbly praying his majesty, that the governor might not be removed; but of 50 members present, 24 voted against it.+ The non resident act was not then in force; and it appeared, that most of the inhabitants of Boston, who represented towns in the country, were against the address. The party in favor of the address, to prevent further trouble if there should be further occasion for any thing to be done in favor of the governor, brought into a bill, which was then before the house, a clause restraining towns from chusing any person to represent them in the general court, other than freeholders and refidents within such towns. This provision is generally looked upon as a privilege, and a point gained by the people; but it certainly was occafioned by what is commonly called the prerogative party in government, and however falutary, was defigned as an abridgment of liberty. 1 Sir William left Bofton the 17th of November.

of another, and that the negative voice is used to keep out a third perfon from your council; and yet you all feem to defign the fame end. By these measures, your enemies get ground of you, and laugh and fcoff at you." Letter from Sir H. Afhurst, Jan. 30. 1693-4. M S.

* " It was very furprizing to me to fee the laborious methods taken to obtain an address from the general affembly here, for the continuance of 3ir William in the government. The oppofers were gentlemen, principally of Bofton, who were too near Sir William to think well of him, but served in the house for feveral towns and villages, at fome diffance, where fome of them were born, and others had their effates and improvements above any dwellers in the place for which they ferved. To be rid of them all at once, a bill was brought in, or rather a clause brought into a bill, that no man whatfoever should , ferve i694. An injudicious use of power produced, what were judged by the crown neceffary regulations, somer than perhaps they would otherwise have been made, viz. the establishment of a judge of admiralty, powers to the officers of the customs, and the oath to the governors by the 7th and 8th of William; and the remembrance of this, together with other acts of plantation governors, might also cause the power over the softwar to be taken from them, although it was suffered to continue fome years after this time.

79

AN

THE HISYORY OF

> ferve in the houfe of commons for any town, unless where he did at that time live and dwell, which paffed with the diffent of 24, the whole houfe confisting of 50, and with fome heat in the upper houfe. Sir William hereupon rushes into the houfe of commons and drives out the non refidents, and I am mistaken if either for estates or loyalty they left any of their equals in that house." Letter to London, Nov. 1. 1694.

THE

Douglafs whole foible it was to fpeak well or ill of men very much as he had a perfonal friendship for them, or had a perfonal difference with them, of which I may instance more especially in his most elaborate endeavors to fet Mr. Shirley in a difadvantageous light, his labored encomiums of feveral I chufe to avoid mentioning, because for some of them he had other foundation, had taken up a prejudice against the two Mathers, father and son, and remarks upon the occasion of this act, "It is faid that anno 1693, there were some Boston gentlemen representatives for some of the out towns, but not agreable to the reverend I. Mather. Mr. Bysteld for Bristol is mentioned. Mr. Mather of great interest with the weak governor Phips and with the devotionally bigotted house procured this act."

[†] "I find great offence taken at your governor Phips, for beating the captain of the man of war there for not yielding his fhipmen to the governor's command elfewhere. My fon feems to apprehend him a perfon not competent to be a governor, for fo doing; and, as a commiffioner of the admiralty, feems to indulge the captain's complaint, and reflect upon the governor as an act mifbecoming his poft. I fear the confequence of this prejudice against the governor by our admiralty commiffioners espousing the captain's interest against him, which I doubt will be; and my fon feems to reflect upon the whole plantation, for chusing a governor of no better principles or practices than to forget himsfelf for far as to cane or firike a commission officer, none of bis.

80

THE government falling into Mr. Stoughton's hands, 1694; upon Sir William's leaving the province, feems to have been administred by him to good acceptance in England, and to the general satisfaction of the people of the province. The rule of a Lieutenant Governor it is expected will be fhort; it is fcarce worth while to form parties against him within the government; and if there should be any misrule, which requires check or censure from England, it is of lefs confequence, his authority being fo foon to be fuperfeded. This is not the only reafon why the administration of Mr. Stoughton and one of his fucceffors, Mr. Dummer, have been generally well spoken of. They had each of them spent some time in England, and better knew what conduct would be approved of there; they were well acquainted with the tempers of their own countrymen; each of them, very prudently, rather aimed at an eafy quiet administration, than at any thing great and striking; confidering themfelves as at helm, to keep the ship in its steady course; they feldom relied wholly upon their own judgments, acting in the most common affairs by advice of council, which served as a justification of any measures which might be unpopular, or in which there might be any mistake, and yet took not away the credit of fuch as proved to be well judged, and were generally applauded. At the first election, Mr. Cooke being chose of the council, although he had ever been of the party opposite to the lieutenant governor, yet he approved of the choice.

THE treaty, last year, at Pemaquid, had produced near a twelvemonth's quiet to the frontiers. The French did not intend it should last so long. They kept the Indians from restoring the prisoners according to their engage-Vol. II. G ments.

his, which will much provoke the admiralty to fend a judge thither, of and for the admiralty, not the governor to take his post." Sir Nath. Rich to I. Mather, London, Jan, 25. 93-4. Sir. N. Rich probably mifunderstood his fon; the immediate motive to the appointment of a judge of admiralty was not the caning of the captain, but the governor's improper use of admiralty power. 1694. ments. The holtages were no fecurity whilst the Indians had a much greater number of the English in their power. New hostilities therefore were every day expected. At length, the 18th of July, they fell with fury upon a village at Oyster river, in New-Hampshire province, killed and carried away 94, fome accounts fay about 100 men, women and children. This was a heavy blow. The English represent the enemy as a very great army. Charlevoix fays there were 250 of Penobscot and St. John's Indians, besides some of father Bigot's mission,* and only one Frenchman. He adds, that 230 English perished. His account, of the number of the enemy, is most to be depended upon; and our account, of the loss we fustained. Madockewando, a Penobscot, who was the head of the party, went with the body of his countrymen to Quebec, and prefented the fcalps to Frontenac, the governor of Canada.⁺ We hear nothing of prifoners. Toxus, the Norridgewock chief, with about 40 of that tribe, marched along towards Merrimack river. In their way, after an unfuccessful attempt upon the house of one Blackford, they murdered Mrs. Cutt, the widow of prefident Cutt, and three of her people, at her farm house. Having croffed Merrimack, on the 27th of July they fell upon Groton, about 40 miles from Boston. They were repulfed at Lakin's garrifon houfe, but fell upon other houses, where the people were off their guard, and killed and carried away from the vicinity about forty perfons. Toxus's two nephews were killed by his fide, and he had a dozen bullets through his blanket, according to Charlevoix, who adds, that he carried the fort or garrifon and then went to make spoil at the gates of Bofton; in both which facts the French account is erroneous.

IN August, some stragglers killed ten or eleven perfons at Spruce creek and other parts of Kittery, and knocked in the head, scalped and left for dead a little girl named Downing, about 7 years old, who was found alive the next morning, and lived many years afterwards; and and September the 4th, Joseph Pike, a deputy sheriff, 1694. and another person with him, were shot down between Almsbury and Haverhill.

^{*} Norridgewocks. + Charlevoix, lib. 15.

AFTER all these outrages, Bomažeen, a noted Norridgewock chief, one who had figned the treaty at Pemaquid, and yet was afterwards a principal actor in the carnage upon the English, came strait to Pemaquid with a flag of truce, pretending he came fromCanada with several more who were in company with him, and that he was very forry for what had happened.* The commanding officer at the fort confidered them as rebels, and fent them to Boston, after a promise or encouragement given them of fasty. The French called this English G 2

* " November 19. Bomazeen, with ten or a dozen Indians, called over the barbican, defiring to fpeak with Capt. March, and fet up a flag, by which they did implicitly own themselves enemies and breakers of the peace. We did not put out our's until an hour or two after their's; would have perfuaded them there was no reafon for it, that flags were used between enemies in time of war, not friends in time of peace; minding them of the late agreement at Pemaquid ; but they called earneilly for it. We refolved to feize Bomazeen at any rate, except politive violation of promife. We made no other promife, before he came over, but that he fhould be welcome, we fhould be glad of his company; would treat him kindly, and do him no hurt. After he was feized, we told him the fame, and observed it punctually, fo long as he staid here ; but withal told him we must know who did the mischief at Oyster river and Groton, &c. of which they made themfelves ignorant; why the peace was to foon broken and by whom ; that they must go to Boston and abide there till Sheepscore John was fent to fetch in the other Sagamores, and then they flould come again with fome of the English to treat, &c. We thought it not unlawful, nor culpable to apprehend fuch perfidious villains and traitors (though under a white rag) that have fo often falfified their promife to the English, viz. at Cocheco, at Casco fort, at Oyster river and other places; that make no confcience of breaking the peace whenever it ferves their turn, although never fo folemnly confirmed with fubscriptions and oaths. They have no regard to the law of nations, and therefore deferve no human respect. Befides, we are credibly informed, they came with a certain defign to betray their Majesties fort here, under pretence of trade, - 1694. treachery. † The government of the Maffachufets fup-pofed, that for their perfidy they were to be treated as land pirates and murderers. Be it fo, yet the public faith given to them is not to be violated. This is one of those actions which have caused the English to be charged with injuring the Indians and provoking them to all the cruelties which have been committed, as a just return. I do not undertake to justify it ; but think, that instead of imprisoning Bomazeen and the rest for several months at Bofton, they ought to have been fet at liberty, whether we confider the affair in a moral or political view. I know of no other action of this fort which can be justly charged upon the government. ‡ We shall be obliged to relate more vajustifiable actions of some particular inhabitants.

SIR William Phips, upon his arrival in London, was fued, by Dudley and Brenton, in actions of twenty thoufand pounds damage. Sir Henry Ashurst bailed him. What were the grounds of Dudley's action does not appear. Sir William urged in his defence against Brenton, that there was no custom-house established in the plantations by act of parliament, and that Brenton had no authority to compel masters to enter and clear with him; the naval officer, then known and established by act of parliament, being the only proper officer for that purpose.

CAPTAIN

trade, friendship, &c. and so they are fallen into a pit of their own digging. Neither did we aim at any thing more than their detainment as prisoners, supposing some advantage might accrue to the poor captives, if not the country thereby. If your honours judge it not fairly done, they are now in your hands to dispose of and deal with them as may be for their Majesties honour, and as the circumstances of the cafe require." Letter from John Pike to Gov. & Council, Pemag. 7 Jan. 1694. + Charlevoix.

1 Mention is made of a descendant of D'Aulney, governor of Acady, who fcattered a mungrel breed in that part of the country, and feveral others coming in to Saco, at the fame time Bomazeen came to Pemaquid, and, Charlevoix fays, they were all killed ; but I can find nothing of it in any English accounts or papers.

CAPTAIN Short exhibited no articles in form. Sir 1694. William's friends in New-England fuppoled his affairs in England would have been all accommodated, and that he would have returned in a fhort time to his government, if death had not prevented. He laid his arreft fo much to heart, that it was fuppoled to have brought upon him or increased the fickness of which he died the 18th of February, 1594-5.

AFTER Mr. Mather and the other agents, who follicited the fettlement of the government, left England, Sir Henry Ashurst, alone, appeared as agent. In 1693, Constantine Phips (afterwards Lord Chancellor of Ireland) was joined with Ashurst, and both instructed by the general court. They were both of them friendly to Sir William.

MR. Dudley had been making friends, with a view to fupplant the governor while he was living; and, upon his death, follicited for the government with fresh vigor and application.* Without losing his old friends, he fuccessfully applied himself to bring over some who had been his violent enemies. He recovered the favor of many of the ministers in New England, and recommended himself, by a grave serious deportment, to the differences in England; whils, at the fame time, by his good fense and polite behaviour, he acquired the notice and esteem

of

66 F.

* "Mr. D — thought himfelf as fure of being governor, as you are of my friendthip. He had laid it with the D. of Leeds, Sidney, Blathwait and my Lord Cutts, who hath made Portland entirely for him, and the matter fettled, and poor Sir William Phips arrefted in an action of £.20,000, by Mr. D.'s and Mr. B.'s affidavits, for which I was bail. I have been oppofing your grand enemies, who have got all those letters to recommend him from your ministers. I hope he will trouble you no more. The reversing of Leisler's attainder hath I hope a traiu of good confequences. I shall never do N.'England fo much good, as by getting this bill passed. I hope the door is nailed against him, and you will have the Earl of Bellamont governor. I could not believe what Sir William Phips told me of Mr. Stoughton and Mr. Addington. I perceive I had wrong notions of things." Sir H. Ashurft's lett. to Mather, 5 May, 95. 1694. of many confiderable perfons at court. His income was very moderate; and yet, with œconomy, he made a decent appearance in England, and gave feveral of his children education there, whilst the rest of his family was supported by him in New-England. A vacant government had divers candidates, but it looks as if he would have carried it from the reft, if it had not been for the opposition made by the two agents for the province, Ashurst and Phips, who were obliged to urge against him the share he bore in the trial and condemnation of Leisler at New-York; and, for the fake of laying open that affair to the prejudice of Dudley, they both of them promoted a bill in the house of commons. of which Ashurst was a member, for reversing Leisler's attainder. Mr. Dudley could stand it no longer, and withdrew his follicitations for that time; and foon after, by the interest of Lord Cutts, obtained the place of lieutenant governor of the Isle of Wight, of which his Lordship was then governor. From that time, Lord Bellamont was looked upon as the governor of Maffachufets-Bay, although he was not actually appointed until the next year.

THE acts of trade had been very little regarded in any of the colonies. Bucaniers or pirates, who in times of peace made their depredations upon Spanish ships and fettlements in America, were very numerous. They brought their plunder chiefly to New-York, and some to other colonies. With a view to put a stop to these mischiefs.

⁴⁴ I drew a bill for reverfing the attainder of Capt. Leifler, Mr. Milburn and Mr. Governeur, which paffed the Lords without oppofition; but when it came to the Commons, Dudley, having notice of it, made all the oppofition to it imaginable, which was the thing we defired; for by that means, we had feveral hearings before a full committee of the Commons, and had the opportunity of giving a full account of those proceedings, and letting the world see how great a part he acted in that tragedy. Since that, he is not fo much as talked of to be governor, but the three competitors are, the E. of Bellamont, Major Bremin and Col. Layton, and I believe my Lord Beilamont is the most likely to have it." Conft. Phips to I. M. May 5, 95. mischiefs, the Earl of Bellamont was pitched upon as 1694 the most proper person for the government of New-York, † and, probably, to make the appointment worth accepting, as well as to render the other purposes more effectual, Massachusets-Bay and New-Hampshire were put under the same person.

THE year 1695 paffed away, with lefs molestation 1695. from the enemy, than any year fince 1688. In the fpring, they killed one of the foldiers belonging to Saco fort and carried another away captive. A mortal ficknefs prevailed among the Indians, and the French found it impracticable to fend them out in parties upon our frontiers. Their attachment, one to another, equals that of more civilized nations. Befides the hoftages they had given in 1693, the Indians, feized at Pemaquid, were in the prifon at Boston; Bomazeen, in particular, they greatly valued, and they were ready to fubmit to almost any terms, to obtain their relief. The French reprefent the English as treating the hostages and prisoners with cruelty; but there was no other cruelty than a confinement in a prifon in Bolton, which it must be acknowledged was a very bad one. The English were G 4 not

* " It is well known, that, for feveral years, two very pernicious things have been growing in our American colonies; an unlawful trade, in fraud of the acts of navigation, infinitely prejudicial to England, and the curfed practice of piracy utterly deftructive of all commerce. In the beginning of the year 1695, his Majefty thought fit to name the Earl of Bellamont to be governor of New-York, a place remarkably infected with those two dangerous difeases. The Earl has often told me, that what the King faid to him, when he first let him know his pleasure, was that, which principally induced him to accept of the employment. His Majefty did him the honour to fay, he thought him a man of refolution and integrity, and, with those qualifications, more likely than any other he could think of to put a ftop to that illegal trade, and to the growth of piracy; for which reason he made choice of him for that government, and for the fame reason intended to put the government of New-England into his hands."

Account of proceedings in relation to Capt. Kidd, Lond. 1701.

1595, not less desirous of peace than the Indians, if they could have had any fecurity for the continuance of it. One of the holtages, Sheepfcote John, undertook to go from Bolton as a mediator, and, by his influence, fifty canoes of Indians came within "about a league of the fort at Pemaquid, the 20th of May, and fent in eight captives; acknowledged their fault in violating the laft treaty, and proposed the release of captives on both fides, and the establishment of a durable peace. A truce of 30" days was agreed upon; and commissioners were to come from Boston, to settle the terms of the peace. The commiffioners, Col. Phillips, Lt. Col. Hawthorn and Major Convers, foon after, met delegates from the Indians at Pemaquid, but 'refused' to enter upon any treaty with them until all the English, in their hands, should be delivered up. Bomazeen, their great warrior, and fome others, were left in prifon at Boston. The Indians looked upon themfelves not well ufed; fenfible, that when they had parted with all their prifoners, they fhould have no way of obtaining the release of their own people, except by a new fet of captives. They therefore refused to treat any further, and left the place abruptly. The government, I imagine, expected that, by retaining fome of the Indians as hoftages, fome reftraint would be laid upon the reft, from exercifing cruelty towards English prifoners, feeing we fhould have it in our power to retaliate it upon their own people; and chose rather to risk the continuance of the war than part with this fecurity.

CHARLEVOIX, who fuppofes the lieut governor, Stoughton, to have been there in perfon, fays, " the "Abenaquis infifted upon the releafe of their brethren, " who were detained in violation of the flag of truce " and the laws of nations, and Stoughton only returned " bloody reproaches for their late hoftilities, and terri-" ble threats if they did not deliver up the 'authors of " them. The Indians were as flout as he was. At " length, both fides began to fosten. Stoughton was " not IMMEDIATE notice was given to the frontiers to be upon their guard, but this did not prevent spoils upon divers places. In July, Major Hammond of Kittery was taken prisoner and carried to Canada, but, being above the ordinary rank of the Indian captives; he was very kindly used by Count Frontenac, the governor ; and foon returned in a veffel which went from Boston for exchange of priloners. In August, they killed and took fifteen at Billerica, and plundered the house of ---- Rogers, and foon after furprized and killed the ferjeant of Saco fort. In September, they killed four, and wounded fix, belonging to Pemaquid fort. In October, they came upon "the house of John Brown of Newbury, and carried away nine perfons; but being purfued and overtaken, in the night, by a party under Capt. Greenleaf, they first tomahawked all their prifoners, which effectually prevented them from joining the purfuers, and then took to their heels and elcaped. Some of these unhappy prifoners lived feveral months, and fome, more than a year ; "but all, finally, died of their wounds, except a lad who happened to be wounded in the fhoulder, and not in the head, as the reft were.

THE winter of 1695 proved a time of reft to the frontiers. Their only fears, in winter, were from an army or large body of the enemy, fufficient to refift any force, which could be collected before they had done their mifchief, and had time for a retreat. Small parties would be in hazard, 1696. hazard, when they could be tracked upon the fnow. The fpring of 1696 opened as usual. In May, a poor fellow, who had been a captive before, and made his escape, was killed at Cocheco. In June, three women, fifters, going with their husbands from York to Wells; one of them, wife of Thomas Cole, with her husband were shot down, the others escaped. In the same month. feveral houfes were burnt by the enemy, within the limits of Portfmouth; twelve or fourteen of the inhabitants were flain, and four taken prisoners. One woman was supposed to be left dead, and her scalp was carried to Canada, as the evidence of it; but those, who went out to bury the dead, finding her alive, carried her home, and the recovered. The Indians, generally, are content with a piece, not larger than the palm of the hand, from the top of the crown; and, if it was not for the blows of the tomahawk, many might have furvived the operation of the knife. Some who have loft the skin, from the whole crown, have recovered and lived many years.

IN July, they attacked Cocheco again, a plantation which often fuffered; killed three of the inhabitants, as they were going home from publick worfhip, wounded three more, and carried other three away prifoners to Penobfcot.

We have taken no notice of Nova-Scotia, although included in the bounds of the Maffachufets charter; the inhabitants in general, for feveral years having been under the power and command of the authority fent from France: But, this year, the affairs of that and of the other parts of the government are more interwoven.

AFTER the conquest of that province, by the Massachusets colony in 1690, the French in Europe gave themfelves but little concern about the recovery of it, and the English as little about its prefervation or fecurity. The Massachusets were unable to bear the charge of a fufficient military force, to keep the inhabitants in subjection : They gave commissions to judges, justices and other officers, and required oaths of fidelity; and, in 1691, gave gave power and authority to Mr. Nelfon, who was bound 1696. there from Boston upon a trading voyage, to be commander in chief in Acadie; but when he came near the river St. John's, he was taken by Monf. Villebon, who, having a commission from the French king, had been in to Portroyal and ordered the English flag to be struck and the French flag to be hoifted there, but intended to make St. John's the place of his refidence, and took posseffion of it, where he carried on great trade with the Indians, fupplying them with warlike ftores, provisions, &c. without which they could not have carried on the war. In 1692, foon after Sir William Phips's arrival, an attempt was made by the province, with a fmall naval force, to remove Villebon; but it proved unfucceisful. In 1695, Capt. Eams, in his Majesty's ship Sorlings, was sent from Bofton to intercept the flores with which Villebon, every fpring, had been furnished from France; but the French ship happened to be of greater force than usual, and, after an engagement at the mouth of the river, Eams was glad to retreat. It feems that, until now, the Maffachusets looked upon themselves as in some fort of posfeffion, and that there had not been an entire revolt of the whole province; for, this year, the general court, from a fense of their inability to protect it, petitioned the crown that the province might be freed from any further expence in the defence of Portroyal or St. John's, and that garrifons might be kept in both those places, at the charge of the nation. This, perhaps, might be deemed a refusal to exercise jurisdiction over that part of the province, and a renunciation of their right; and, accordingly, after the treaty of Utrecht, when poffession was returned to the crown, it was fettled a diffinct province; otherwife, jus postiminii might have taken place, as well with respect to the rights of a body corporate, as those of particular perfons.

THE difappointment, last year, which the Sorlings, a fingle ship, met with, occasioned the force to be doubled this year, to effect the like purpose. Capt. Paxton, in the 1096. the Newport, came to New-England in company with the Sorlings,* and both thips were ordered, together with a yacht or tender in the province fervice, to lay off the river St. John's, to wait the arrival of the floreship. It happened, unfortunately, that the French at Quebec were, at the fame time, fitting out two men of war, with the addition of two companies of foldiers and fifty Michmack Indians, in order to reduce the New-England fort at Pemaquid. These ships were of superior force to the English ships, and Iberville, + an experienced officer, commanded. When they had put into a port upon their paffage, Villebon, from St. John's, informed them of the fituation and circumstances of the small English fleet. They went, immediately in queft of them, and came upon them when they were not expected. The Newport, after the loss of one of her topmasts, furrendered. A fog arole, which gave the Sorlings, and the tender an opportunity for their escape, and they returned to Boston, , with the news of this fecond difappointment. The French commander, being ftrengthened with the Newport, went in to St. John's and there refitted. From thence, he proceeded to Penobscot, where the Baron St. Caftine was waiting for him, with two huncred Indians. The whole force arrived before the fort at Pemaquid, the 14th of July. Capt. March, who was a good officer, had refigned the command of the fort a few months before, and was fucceeded by a very different man, Capt. Chubb. Iberville, upon his arrival, fent a fummons to furrender. Chubb returned a vain foolish answer, " that "if the fea, was covered with French veffels, and the "land with Indians, yet he would not give up the fort." The Indians, thereupon, began their fire, and return was made by the musketry and with a few cannon from the fort. This brought the first day to a close. In the night, Iberville landed his cannon and mortars; and the

* In 1694.

This was not the Iberville who laid the foundation of the French colony at Miffifippi in 1690. He died in a year or two after that. the next day, before three in the afternoon, had raifed 1696. his batteries and thrown five bombs into the fort, to the great terror of Chubb and the garrifon. Caffine, about this time, found fome way of conveying a letter into the fort, and let them know that, if they delayed furrendering until an affault was made, they would have to do with favages, and muft expect no quarter, for he had feen the King's order to Iberville to give none.* This did the bulinefs, the chamade was beat immediately, and the fort was furrendered, upon the terms offered by the French, that the garrifon fhould be fent to Bofton and exchanged for the like number of French and Indian prifoners; only, a fpecial fecurity or engagement was infifted upon from the French commander, that their perfons fhould be protected against the rage of the Indians.

CHUBB's conduct was univerfally cenfured, and at first he was put under arreft, but came off without any other punishment than being laid aside. The fort had 15 cannon mounted, and ninety able men to manage them, and no want of ammunition or stores. The French suppose, that if there had been a brave defence, the event would have been doubtful; at least, that the fort could not have been carried without a great loss of men; and attribute the furrender to the cowardice of the garrifon, who compelled the commander to act contrary to his own inclination. † This makes the acquistion to appear of more importance.

AFTER all, there is room to doubt whether a better garrifon could have withstood that force, until relief might have been afforded from Boston. The French were provided with cannon and mortars, were numerous enough to relist any fallies from the garrifon, without interrupting the fiege; there were no cafemates not other shelter for the men, and the magazine itself was bomb proof in one part of it only, which was under a rock.

* Original letter in Castine's hand writing, † Charlevoix. 1696. THE reason of the garrison's requiring an extraordinary caution against the rage of the Indians, was this. They were confcious of their own cruelty and barbarity, and feared revenge; and a fecurity from it might pro-bably haften the furrender, left it should afterwards not be in their power to obtain it. In the month of February before, Egeremet, a chief of the Machias Indians ; Toxus, chief of the Norridgewocks; Abenquid, a fagamore of the fame tribe; and feveral other Indians came to the fort, to treat upon exchange of prifoners. Chubb, with fome of his garrifon, fell upon the Indians in the midft of the treaty, when they thought themfelves most fecure, murdered Egeremet and Abenquid with two others. Toxus, and fome others, escaped, and fome remained prisoners; one Indian was found in the fort, in irons, when the French took pofferfion of it. Such was the fury of Castine's Indians, that there was no way of fecuring the garrifon but by removing them to an island, under a constant guard of French troops, until provision was made for transporting them to Boston. Some writers palliate and feem inclined to justify this action of Chubb. Surely, the cruelty fhewn by the Indians to the English must have biassed and blinded them. Private letters, which passed at this time, between some of the best men in the province, condemned it as an horrid piece of villainy.

THE French remained at Pemaquid until the 18th of July, demolifhing the fort, their plunder was fmall, and then went to Penobscot, where they tarried until the 3d of September.

WHEN the news of the loss of the man of war and of the fort came to Bolton, it was expected the enemy would proceed weltward as far as Portfmouth. Five hundred men were raifed without delay, and marched thither, to be ready for the defence of New-Hampshire. Two men of war, the Arundel and Orford, arriving at the fame time at Bolton, a detachment from the militia Was fent on board them, to ferve as marines; and thefe ships.

fhips, together with the Sorlings, and a merchant ship 1696. of 20 guns, and a fireship taken up by the province, were fent in quest of the enemy, and came in fight of them just as they failed from Penobscot. The French, who were well acquainted with the coaft, kept their fhips close in shore. Whether the English were afraid of the coast, or were too far astern, or did not make fail enough, does not appear; it is certain, they did not come up with them the first day, and the next day being foggy they reached St. John's river, and the English veffels returned to Boston. The French account* takes no notice of the fog, makes the five English veffels feven, and fays, they fteered for St. John's river, whilft the French fleet went to Cape-Breton and from thence to Newfoundland. The French writers fuppofed two expeditions to have been but one, and imagined a number of fmall veffels, under Col. Church, were the fame which purfued Iberville. As the Orford was returning, fhe met with a French fhallop belonging to St. John's, with 23 foldiers under Vil-leau, their captain, and brought them prifoners to Boston. Charlevoix feems to miftake Villebon for Villeau, and, finding him foon after at St. John's, defending his fort, he takes it for granted he must have been released, as having a paffport and not liable to be retained.

WHEN Mr. Stoughton found the enemy was gone back to the eaftward, he ordered Col. Church, who had the command of the 500 men at Portfmouth, to embark them on board brigantines and other fmall veffels, and to range along the eaftern fhore. Church faw none of the enemy, except now and then an indian canoe, until he came to Penobfcot, where he did not arrive until after the French fleet had failed, and the coaft clear. Not being willing to return without doing fome fervice, he refolved to know the condition of the province of Nova Scotia, and failed directly up to Chignecto or Beaubaffin. Upon the difcovery of the Englifh forces, moft of the French inhabitants left their houfes and fled into the woods.

* Charlevoix.

1696. woods. The English purfued, and foon met Bourgeois. (Church calls him Bridgman) a principal inhabitant, coming to ask quarter for himself and family; which was readily granted. Upon his examination, it appeared that there were Indians mixed with the French in the woods, and orders were thereupon given to renew the purfuit, and to offer quarter to all the French, but to give none to the Indians. Bourgeois was ordered, alfo, to give notice to all his countrymen, who would come in, that they should be well received. Many of the inhabitants came in, and it was proposed to them to join with the English, in purfuing the Indians, and upon their complying, their houses should be spared, what of their goods had been taken should be restored, and the rest of their fubstance preferved. This was a hard condition and, in effect, obliging them to quit their country, for otherwife, as foon as the English had left them without sufficient protection, the incenfed Indians would have fell upon them without mercy. They therefore refused to comply, and their houses were thereupon burnt, and their cattle, sheep, &c. destroyed, and their goods became plunder for the army.

CHARLEVOIX fays, that Bourgeois produced a writing, by which Sir William Phips had given affurances of protection to the inhabitants of Chignecto, whilst they remained faithful subjects of King William; and that Church gave orders, that nothing in their houfes, &c. should be touched; but whilst he was entertained by Bourgeois, together with the principal officers, the reft of the army difperfed themfelves among the other houfes and behaved as if they had been in a conquered country. This may be true. Men raifed from the militia of any country, until they are used to discipline, are feldom exemplary for due fubordination. Charlevoix adds, that many of the inhabitants, not trufting to the promifes of the general, refused to come in, and that it was well they did; for, foon after, he broke through all bounds, and left only the church and a few houses and barns standing and. having having difcovered, posted up in the church, an order of 1696. Frontenac, the governor of Canada, for the regulation of trade, he threatned to treat them as rebels, fet fire to the church, and the houses which he had before spared and which were now all reduced to asses; and having done this, he prefented a writing, which he told them was an acknowledgment of their having renewed their subjection to King William, and would be a fecturity to them in cafe any English should again land among them.

THE condition of these Acadians was truly deplorable. Their natural attachment was to the French. They were bigotted to the roman catholic religion, in proportion to the meannels and other difadvantages of their education. Commerce, fmall indeed, led them to fome connection with the English. For a whole century together, they were, once in a few years, changing their maîters; and no fooner had owned themfelves the fubjects of one crown, but they were left to fall again under the power of the other. It was hardly reafonable, where protection was refused or neglected, to charge them with being traitors and rebels. When under Engtifli government, although allowed the exercise of their religion, yet their priests, always sufpected of drawing them over to the French, were hated and often molested by the English. Their civil liberty was much the fame under either government. They had certain perfons, annually chofen, whom they called deputies and fome-times felectmen, which they borrowed from the English colonies of New-England, but they had no other authority than to bring and carry meffages from and to their governors; and upon any general diffurbance or affair of general concern, the whole village or diffrict was fummoned to appear. Thus they were always de-preffed and without spirit. No people are more confined VOL. II. H to † They corrupted their language, having greater converse with the English than with the European French; and intermixed many English words, as et vous too, instead of et vous aufi, pas yet, instead of pas encore, and many, like expressions. 1696 to their own country than they were, few or none of them upon any occasion ever passing fo far as New-England. Their fate at last was hard and pitiable.

But to return to our flory. Church left Chignesto, the 20th of September, and flood with his transports for the river St. John's, and landed his men, not without fome opposition, upon the east fide. He took feveral prisoners; interrupted the building of a new fort at the mouth of the river, and deftroyed the materials they had prepared for it; brought away twelve of their cannon and what plunder he met with. Being informed there was not depth of water in the river for his veffels, he made no attempt to go up to Villebon's fort, but departed for Boston; intending to touch at all the harbours and rivers upon the eastern coast, in his way.

MR. Stoughton, having much at heart the removal of Villebon from St. John's, ordered the Arundel, Capt. Kiggins,* who returned to Boston the beginning of September ; the province galley, Capt. Southack, and a transport floop, Capt. Alden, + to go out and meet Church with his forces, and attempt to drive Villebon from his A reinforcement for the land forces was fent in fort. the transport, and the command of the whole given to Col. Hawthorn, of Salem, one of the council. This was an impolitic measure, unless any misconduct in Church made it neceffary that he should be superfeded ; and it is evident, by his own account, that he was not a little mortified; and although he fubmitted, it was with reluctance, and every thing went on heavily. The men alfo, having their faces towards home, were loth to turn back, but were obliged to it; being met by the fhips not far from the river. Villebon had timely notice of the return and reinforcement, and made the best preparations he could for his defence. Four of the fmall veffels went up the river, and landed their men near the fort, October the 7th. They raifed a battery for two field pieces, and ^{*} Charlevoix calls him Sikik.

The fame who was imprifoned for witchcraft, when Haw thorns the colonel had been one who examined him.

and began to fire with them and with their mulketry, 1690. the fame day; and the French made return: When night came on, which proved very cold; the English lighted their fires to keep them from perifhing. This made them a mark for the French cannon, which difurbed them to that degree, that they were obliged to put out their fires and to be expoled all night to the in-clemency of the weather: They were foon difcouraged; for the next night they reimbarked; and having joined those at the mouth of the river, made the best of their way to Boston. No notice was taken of any loss on either fide; except the burning a few of the enemy's houses; nor is any sufficient reason given for relinquishing the defign fo fuddenly. It is probable that the forces were not provided with tents, not cloathing, fuf-ficient to defend them from the cold, which they had reason to expect to increase every day, and it is certain the old colonel Church was offended at being superfielded in command.

WHILST the forces; which used to be employed for the defence of the frontiers, were upon other fervice, the inhabitants kept clofe confined to their garrifons and were hindered from their labour; the Indians being upon the watch in every quarter, and now and then would feize or fhoot down a man, who ventured to ftep out of his door. Befides those mentioned, in the beginning of fummer, Major Frost and his wife were killed at Berwick; as they were returning from meeting; and two men, who went to carry the news to the garrifon at Wells, were ambushed and slain. In October, four foldiers were killed, belonging to the fort at Saco. A late author fays, "a dreadful defolation was threatned, and "more for want of management than power;"‡ but this is not fo judicious, as fome others of this author's reflections. The fettlement of a new country could never be effected, if the inhabitants should confine them-H 2 felves

1. Difcovery and fettlement of the English in N. America, sta Hartis's collection;

1696. felves to cities or walled towns. A frontier there must be, and nothing less than making every house a fort, and furnishing every traveller with a strong guard, could have been an effectual fecurity against an enemy, as greedy after their prey as a wolf, and to whom the woods were equally natural and familiar.

An expedition against Canada had been follicited every year fince 1692. This year there was a more than ordinary dependance upon it. The bad fuccefs of the war in Europe put an end to this dependance. Intimations were given, divers ways, of a French armament from Europe by fea, and land forces from Canada, to make a defcent upon the English colonies. Application had been made to the French king, by the governor of Canada, in the latter part of 1695, for ten or twelve men of war, to be fent the next fpring from feveral ports in France, to encounter an English squadron, which it was expected would have been at fea about that time; and, having conquered the English ships, then to go and take Boston, which was represented to be a place of great trade; and if they could gain possession of it, they would gain, by that means, the sole possession of the fishery.* Nothing more was intended by the French court than the possession of Newfoundland, and the removal of the English from Acadie. Both these were effected, for after Iberville had taken the fort at Pemaquid, he went with his ships to Newfoundland, and poffeffed himfelf of St. John's and the other harbours there, and made a very fuccessful expedition. This was not only a much easier acquisition than Boston would have been, to a stronger squadron than Iberville's; although it was not then one fourth part fo well fortified as it is at this time; but, by gaining all the ports in Newfoundland, the whole colony was gained; whereas, the gaining of Boston would not have enabled them to have poffeffed even the reft of that province nor, without a very great land army, could they have held the possession possession of Boston alone one winter, against fo great a 1697. number of inhabitants as were then in the province.

* Charlevoix.

MASSACHUSETS-BAY. IOI

THE last year of the war proved more alarming to the province than any of the preceding years. An invalion was every day expected, for feveral weeks together; and news was brought to Boston, that a formidable French fleet had been feen upon the coast. It was indeed a very critical time, perhaps equal to that when the Duke d'Anville was with a fquadron at Chibuctou. The force, under the Duke, was fuperior, but the province, at that time, was in proportion stronger and better able to repel it. France expected that a very flrong fquadron would be fent from England to recover the ports in Newfoundland, which Iberville had taken the last year. Great preparations were therefore made, to defeat fuch fquadron, and, after that, or in cafe it should not proceed, then to lay waste the English colonies. Frontenac the governor of Canada, upon whom great dependance had always defervedly been placed, had orders to raife 1500 men, prepared to march upon fhort warning; but, at this time, the fervice for which they were intended was not communicated. He made H 3 provision

† The winter of 1696 was as cold as had been known from the first arrival of the English; flays and loaded fleds passing great part of the time upon the ice from Boston as far as Nantasket. Greater loss in trade had never been known, than what were met with in this year; nor was there, at any time after the first year, so great a fearcity of food; nor was grain ever at a higher price.

Lord Bellamont had been expected for two years paft. His long delay occafioned fome doubt, whether he had not laid afide the defign; but, in February 1696, Mr. Blaithwait writes, "You may be in expectation, fome time this fummer, of my "Lord Bellamont, who is now in a way of receiving his dif-"patches for the government of New-England, and probably of "New-York too, for the better uniting our ftrength against the "French and Indians. In the mean time, I hope the colony of "the Massachusets will take care to defend themselves against "the further encroachments of the enemy, and protect their "neighbours of New-Hampshire, for the common interest." 1697. provision accordingly, and they would have been all ready upon eight days notice. The remembrance of this danger is lost in New-England. Charlevoix's account will be new to most people. " The intended expedi-" tion, against Boston, was very well concerted, and " would not have failed, as all which preceded it had " done, if it had been vigoroufly purfued. The king had " intrusted the command with the Marquis of Nelmond, " an officer of great reputation, and had appointed for " the fervice ten men of war, a galliot and two frigates. " Bofton was not the only object. He had orders to " be ready to leave Breft, with part of the squadron, by " the 25th of April, at farthest, in order to join the other " part which lay at Rochel under commodore de Mag-" non; and, with all possible dispatch, to proceed to Pla-" centia bay in Newfoundland, that he might be before " hand of the English, who, it was faid, were determined " to recover all they had loft the year before in that " island, and to clear it entirely of the French. If he " found Placentia belieged by the English, he had orders "to attack them; if they flould be gone before he ar-"rived, he was to follow them and give them battle " whether they had fucceeded or not. After their de-" feat, he was to fail for Penobscot : dispatching, at the " fame time, a packet boat to Quebec,* to inform Count "Frontenac of his route, that fo that general might "meet him at Penobscot, with fifteen hundred men, " which he was to have in readinefs. As foon as the " junction was made, and the troops embarked, the fleet, " without lofs of time, was to go to Boston, and, that " town being taken, it was then to range the coaft to " Piscataqua; destroying the settlements as far into the " country as they could, and fo effectually as that it might " take the English a long time to re-establish themselves. «Tf

* This feems to be the greatest defect in the plan. The time in passing up the river St. Lawrence, embarking the troops, and coming down to Penobscot, from the uncertainty of that navigation, might take up the greatest part of the summer, and render the whole defign abortive.

102

If there fhould be time left for further acquisitions, 1697.
the fleet was to go to New-York; and having reduced that city, the French American troops were to march through that colony to Canada, laying the country waste as they went along.—The king had this expedition fo much at heart, that he had given permission to de Nesmond to strengthen his fleet with the addition of certain strengthen his fleet with the addition Hudson's bay, if he should happen to meet them at

 W_E fhall next fee, from the fame author, how this enterprize happened to fail of fucces.

"As the French court had not received the news of " the fiege * of Naxoat (St. John's river) when the in-" structions were prepared, but it happened to be brought " a short time after; upon de Nesmond's anchoring in "Rochelle road, he found orders had been fent from " court to meet him there, requiring him to give the " chevalier de Villebon all that aid both of men and " ftores which should be necessary to maintain him in, or " restore him to his post. When de Nesmond came to " Placentia, he found there a letter waiting for him from " the count de Pontchartrain, giving him intelligence of "18 English ships, laden with falt and ready to fail " from Lifbon, under convoy of a man of war; which " fhips were to be employed in the cod fifnery at New-" foundland; and he was required to do every thing in " his power to prevent their efcaping him. The count " added further, that if he should be fo fortunate as to " beat the English fleet, which was expected to be or " have been at Newfoundland, then it was the king's " pleafure that he fhould range the eaftern coast of New-" foundland, and take or burn all the English shipping he. " could meet with. But de Nefmond departed too late, " to carry fo many and fo great defigns into execution. " Befides, meeting with contrary winds, he had above " two months paffage, not arriving at Placentia until the " 24th of July. There, he heard no news of the English " fleet. H_4

^{*} By the Maffachulets forces.

1697. "fleet. He held a grand council of war, in order to "determine whether immediately to proceed to Bofton "or not. All the voices were in the negative, and for "thefe reafons; there was no affurance that it could be "a prudent meafure, whilft they were wholly ignorant of the fituation and circumflances of the enemy; moreover, let there be ever fo great difpatch in giving notice to Count Frontenac, the Canada forces could not be at Penobfcot before the 10th of September; and by that time the fleet would not have above 50 days "provifions left, and would be in no capacity of under-"taking any thing,"

IT was known in New-England, that a formidable French fleet was at no great diftance, and the approach of it was every day expected. There were no great hopes of an English fleet to encounter it. The inhabitants were in great confternation. The lieut. governor of the Maffachusets made the best preparations he could. The militia, for feveral weeks, were held in readinefs to march to the fea ports. The castle at Boston was, then, but an inconfiderable fortrefs. Such additions were made, as the time would admit of; and, when the danger was over, many perfons expressed themselves, in the accounts they gave of it to their friends, as if they had no doubt that the fhips would have been flopped from coming up to the town. It was expected, a great body of French and Indians from Canada would fall upon the eastern frontiers, when the French fleet was upon the fea coast; five hundred men were therefore railed, and fent under Major March, for the defence of that part of the province.

THIS scheme of the French, in all probability, faved the lives of many of our inhabitants. The greatest part of the summer, the strength of Canada, which would have been employed for our annoyance, was kept in a state of inaction, waiting for orders to move; and until September we were quiet, both eastward and westward. ward. A party of the enemy then fell upon Lancaster 1697. and killed twenty or thirty perfons, Mr. Whiting, the minister of the town, being one of them.⁺

THE

+ Governor Bradstreet died at Salem March 27th, 1697, aged 94 or 95. We have had frequent occasion to mention him, especially in the first part of our history, where he appears in the character of an affiltant, fecretary, agent, commissioner for the united colonies, and at length governor. He feems to have been of a moderate genius, fuch an one as we often fee by a long course of fleady inoffensive conduct rife from flep to ftep, but at those intervals when there happens to be none more thining or enterprizing to obstruct it. He was the youngest of all the affiltants who came over with the first charter, but had been fenior affistant many years before he attained to the chair. At length, in the 76th year of his age, it fell to his lot. It is not improbable that fome, who would otherwife have been his competitors, acquiesced in his advancement from the same confiderations that the competitors in the conclave at Rome have often acquiefced in the choice of a very old Cardinal to the Popedom. When King Charles demanded a furrender of the charter, he was for complying. The event proved it to be eafier to re-affume after a forced furrender than after a judgment against it. The King had promised lenity upon a compliance, and threatned all feverity if the colony forced him to a judgment against them. This influenced Mr. Bradstreet. He thought it wifdom to fave part of the privileges of the colony rather than lofe the whole. Belides, it was fubmitting to the necessity of the times, fubmitting to a power they could not refift. Some faid if judgment went against them, one time or other it might be reversed. He thought that Duresse per minas might be pleaded to avoid their own act, if ever a favourable opportunity thould offer for it. He was reproached for his putillanimity. If he was upright, the cenfure of the opposite party should-not transmit reproach to posterity. The most tenacious are not always most virtuous : Men will fometimes, purfuing popular measures, run risques in public affairs, which they would not think prudent in their private concerns. The reafon is obvious. Their particular share in the public, if the event should prove unfortunate, has not equal weight upon their minds with the applause which they are fure of, fucceed or not, for fortitude and heroism. Bad men in this way can oftentimes also gratify their private affections, or their hatred and defire of revenge, at the public expence, 1698. THE next year, they began early, and in February furprized Andover, about 25 miles from Boston, where* they killed feven of the inhabitants and took others prifoners, and burned many houfes. Among the flain was Chubb, the captain of Pemaquid fort, who lived here with his family, in a place thought to be not exposed, His death afforded as much joy to the Indians as the de-ftruction of a whole town, because they had taken their beloved vengeance of him for his perfidy and barbarity to their countrymen. It is not probable, that they had any knowledge of the place of his abode, but they fell upon him by meer accident. Rapin, the English historian, would have pronounced fuch an event the immediate judgment of heaven; Voltaire that, in this place of supposed fafety, the man could not avoid his deftiny. Among the prifoners was Col, Bradstreet (who absconded in 1692 to fave himfelf from a profecution for witchcraft) and all his family. Fortunately for them, the Indians apprehended they were purfued by a fuperior force, and fled, leaving their prifoners to escape. Their terror must have been great, seeing there was not time to knock the prifoners in the head, according to the usual practice when pursued. The enemy, upon their return home, made some spoil upon the town of Haverhill. In March, another party came upon the fame town, burned 9 houfes, and killed and took prifoners, in the whole, about 40 perfons. There was a woman (Hannah Durstan) a heroine, made prisoner at this time; whofe ftory, although repeatedly published, we cannot well omit. She had lain in but a week, when the Indians attacked the house. Her husband, with 7 of his children, made their efcape; but the wife, the nurfe and the young infant were feized. The Indians foon beat out the infant's brains against a tree. The two women they made to travel with them 12 miles the first night, and to continue travelling from day to day towards an Indian town,* the

* The diftance would agree well enough with St. Francis or Beçancour, but Charlevoix fays, this fettlement began fix or feven years later, in 1704.

106

the fettlement of which, as the Indians faid, had been 1698. begun a little while before, about 250 miles from Haverhill. When they had travelled 150 miles, the Indians told the women, there was one ceremony which could not be dispensed with upon their arrival. They must be stripped and run the gantlet through the village. This discipline has been sometimes so cruelly administred, that the poor captives have funk under it. The women had been affigned as fervants to an Indian family, t confifting of two men, three women, and feven children, befides an English boy, who had been prisoner a year and an half. The terror of the Indian gantlet feems to have infpired Dunstan with refolution, and the prevailed upon the nurfe and the English boy to join with her in the destruction of the Indian family. The Indians kept no watch. The boy had been with them fo long, as to be confidered as one of their own children. From women, ordinarily, attempts of this fort are not to be expected. In the morning, a little before day, Dunstan arose, and, finding the whole company in a found fleep, calls upon her confederates to join with her, and with the Indian hatchets, they filenced fuch as they began with, and yet took care not to make fo much noife as to awaken the reft ; and in this manner they difpatched the whole family, except a favorite boy, whom they defignedly left, and an old woman they fup-pofed they had killed, but who jumped up, and with the boy made their escape. They took off the scalps from ten, to bring home with them. Their danger was great from the enemy and from famine, in travelling home above an hundred miles, through thick woods and across mountains and rivers; but they arrived fafe with their trophies. They received a reward of fifty pounds from the general court, and many prefents from their neighbours; and Col. Nicholfon fent them a valuable prefent from

It was the practice of the Indians, after they had fell upon the English and were out of danger, to divide into small parties or single families and disperse for the fake of more advantageous hunting in their return. 1698. from Maryland, * the fame of fo uncommon an action having foon fpread through the continent.

THE lieutenant governor, Stoughton, had held the reins four years, and had kept free from controverfy with the other branches of the legiflature. The defence of the province, by fea and land, was enough to employ the attention of the public. Internal difputes and controverfies in flates are, ordinarily, most effectually avoided or fuspended by imminent external dangers. Besides, Mr. Stoughton now stood fo well in the effect of the people, that they chose him, at every election, one of the council; although, at the same time, he was commander in chief. Before the year expired, a new governor might arrive, in which case he would take his place as a councellor. Sheriffs, in England, are named or remain in commission for the peace during their shrievalty, although the exercise of their authority, as justices, is fussioned for such time.

THE earl of Bellamont embarked on board one of his Majesty's ships early in the fall. The merchant veffels, which failed at the fame time for Bofton, all arrived fafe with thort paffages; but the man of war was blown off to Barbados, and there wintered, not arriving at New-York until fometime in May. Immediately upon the advice of his lordship's arrival, a committee was fent with congratulations from the Maffachufets, and, during his refidence at New-York, he was frequently confulted, and all matters of importance were communicated to him, and his advice or directions were generally followed; but the administration of all acts of government were in the name of the lieutenant governor, as commander in chief. The party difputes, which ran high at New-York, and detained his lordship there about a year, do not come within our defign. In general, we may ob-ferve, that he countenanced the Leislerians. + This, together together with the intereft which had been made for Mr. 1698.: Dudley in England in opposition to his lordship, feems to have prejudiced him in favor of all Dudley's enemies in New-England. Whils he was at New-York, he kept a constant correspondence with Mr. Cooke, one of the council for the Maffachusets, who was a principal man of that party; and seems to have placed more considence in him than in Mr. Stoughton, who ever remained, in his heart, attached to the Dudley party.

^{*} Nicholfon was then governor of Maryland.

⁺ His lordship was one of the committee of parliament to enquire into the trials of Leisler and Milbourne, and told Sir Henry Ashurst those men were murdered and barbarously murdered.

THE peace of Ryfwick was proclaimed in Boston December the 10th 1697. The war with the Indians did not immediately ceafe. The beginning of the next year, they shewed themselves at Kittery, where they killed an old man; and at the fame time they carried away three perfons from York. In July, they appeared upon the western frontier and took three or four prifoners at Hatfield : But the French no longer daring to afford them affiftance, they fpent the reft of the year in contriving a peace. Upon intimations, given by the Indians to any of the forts or out posts that they are difposed to peace, the English are very ready to embrace the offer. The principal object is the recovery of the captives, which at the end of the war have generally been numerous. In October, Major Convers and Captain Alden were fent to Penobfcot to fettle preliminaries; one of which was to be the release of all. prisoners, but no more could be obtained, on this head, than a promife to return all fuch as defired it; the Indians refused to compel any who inclined to remain with them. In the winter, John Phillips, Efg; of the council, with Major Convers, and Cyprian Southack, commander of the province galley, went with full powers to conclude a treaty. The Indians are not very nice in acknowledging their perfidy in fuch terms as the English prepare for them, and make fuch fubmiffions and promifes of future fidelity as are defired. The treaty was in the fame terms with that in 1693. Several captives were restored, and others were promised in the spring; but many 1698. many remained, males and females, who mingled with Indians and contributed to a fucceffion of favages to exercife cruelties upon the English frontiers, in future wars; and perhaps upon fome of their own relations.

THE leaving bounds to be fettled between the English and French, upon the continent, by commiffaries; and the ambiguous terms made use of in treatics (perhaps artfully introduced by the French) have been the caufes of new difputes between the two crowns; and, in one inftance at leaft; have very foon brought on a new war.* The peace of Ryfwick was fearcely proclaimed in New-England, when the inhabitants were inade fenfible of the defigns of the French to make themfelves fole proprietors of the fifhery, and to reftrain the English from the poffellion of any part of the country contained in the Maflachufets charter to the eaftward of Kennebeck. It was understood by the English court, that, by the treaty of Ryfwick, all the country weftward of Saint Croix was to remain to the English, as being within the bounds of the province of Maffachufets-Bay. The French court, immediately after the treaty, afferted an exclusive right to the fifthery upon the fea-coasts and to all the inland country. † A French man of war, bound from France to Port-royal, met one of our fifthing veffels off Cape Sables, fent for the skipper to come on board, and caufed to be translated and read to him in English an order of the French king for feizing all English veffels found fishing on the coasts, and told him to give notice of this order to all other veffels. Villebon, governor of St. John's river, writes, foon after, to Mr. Stoughton, that he had orders, from the French king, his mafter, to take possession of and defend the whole country as far as Kennebeck, t

THE

- * After the treaty of Aix la Chapelle in 1748.
- † Acadie has been stretched and contracted at different times, as the French found it to ferve their interest.
- f "I am expressly ordered by his Majesty, to maintain the bounds between New-England and us, which are from the head of "between New-England and us, which are from the head of

" Kennebeck

THE Norridgewock Indians, this year alfo, built a 1698. thurch, at their chief fettlement upon Kennebeck river, which was complained of by the Maffachufets government as a French encroachment; but I know not for what reafon, except their having a Frenchman for their prisst can be thought one.

REPRESENTATIONS were made to the ministry, and the right of the English to the eastern country, as far as St. Croix, was infifted upon. The Lords of trade write thus to the Earl of Bellamont. "As to the "boundaries, we have always infifted and shall infift up-"on the English right as far as the river St. Croix; but "in the mean while, in relation to the encroachments of "the French and their building a church on Kennebeck "river, that feems to us a very proper occasion for your "Lordship's urging the general affembly of the Massa-"chusets-Bay to rebuild the fort at Pemaquid, which they "ought to have done long ago, and thereby they might "have prevented this and many other inconveniencies."*

THE French perfifted in their moleftations of the English fishermen, and there seems to have been no great concern about it in the English ministry; other greater affairs, in difference between the two crowns, engaged the attention, and brought on a new war; and it was well they did, for it looks very probable, that this difpute

"Kennebeck river unto it's mouth, leaving the courfe of the "river free nuto both nations, and I expect that you will no "longer confider the Indians inhabiting there as your fubjects. "-I am informed, that you have divers fifthermen on our "coafts, and that you permit your people to trade in the "French ports. You may well expect, Sir, that I fhall feize " all the Englift who fhall be found fifting or trading; for "you cannot be ignorant, that it is plainly prohibited by the "treaty between the two crowns, which you yourfelf fent to "me. Monf. de Bonaventure, commander of the Envieux, " has alfo fent you fome of your fifting veffels, which he had " taken, and acquainted you, that if they returned, either for " fifting or trading, he would make prize of them."

Villebon's letter 5 Sep. 1698.

• Octob. 30. 1700.

1698. pute about the fifhery would not have made a breach, but if peace had continued, the French would have excluded the English, and this valuable branch, once lost, might never have been recovered.

KING JAMES, always under the influence of France, had relinquifhed his right to Acadie or Nova Scotia; and altho' his governor (Andros) for the fhort time the King remained afterwards upon the throne, retained the poffeffion of Pemaquid, and challenged a right to St. Croix; and although the friendship between the two monarchs might prevent any feverity upon the English fishermen, yet the French infisted upon their right both to the country and coasts. The war, upon the revolution, fuspended the dispute about title. At the treaty of Ryswick, England was not disposed to urge any points which would retard the peace; and the French immediately after renewed the fame claim they had made under King James.

1699. LORD Bellamont arrived at Bofton from New-York May 26th 1699. A nobleman at the head of the government, was a new thing. All ranks of people exerted themfelves to fhew him refpect, and the appearance was fopompous, that his lordfhip thought it gave him good reafon to expect a very honorable fupport from a province fo well flocked with inhabitants, and in a flate of fo much affluence. He took every method to ingratiate himfelf with the people. He was condefcending, affable and courteous upon all occafions. He profefied to be of the moft moderate principles, in religion and government; although a churchman, yet far from high church, and he attended the weekly lecture at Bofton * with great

> * The general court in that day always adjourned to attend the lefture. An anecdote or two, or what the French call perfonalitez, will give us an idea of fome parts of his lordfhip's charafter. The precife part of the country, however treated with refpect in public, were not most agreable for private company and more intimate acquaintance. Among the more liberal was great reverence, and professed great regard and esteem for 1699. the preachers. He avoided all unneceffary contests with private perfons, or with either branch of the legislature. His inclination led him to Mr. Dudley's enemies, but he did not neglect those who were friendly and attached to him. There was perfect harmony in the general court whilft he prefided. There was fomething fingular and unparliamentary in his form of proceeding in council; for he confidered himfelf as at the head of the board in their legiflative, as well as executive capacity. He concerned himfelf in all their debates ; + proposed all bufinefs; and frequently recommended to them to refolve into a committee upon bills or claufes in bills, and then, as the entries stand, he left the chair, and the committee (being ready to report) reaffumed; nor did he think it proper they fhould act as a house of parliament in his absence; but when detained at home; by meffages from time to time, directed their going into a committee and preparing business against fuch time as he should be able to attend. This was guiding them in all their debates and refolves, as far as his influence would extend, which was not a little way; and yet afterwards, as a VOL: II: feperate was one Bullivant, an apothecary, who had been a justice of peace under Andros. Lord Bellamont, going from the lecture to his house, with a great crowd round him, passed by Bullivant standing at his shop door loitering, "Doctor," fays his lordship with an audible voice, "you have loss a precious fermon to day." Bullivant whispered to one of his companions who shood by him, "If I could have got as much by being there as his lordship will, I would have been there too.

- A fpeech of his to his lady, when his table was filled with reprefentatives from the country towns, is yet remembred :-Dame, we should treat these gentlemen well, they give us our bread.
- + Henry IV. fat in the Houfe of Lords in De la Pole's cafe ; but the Lords protefted against the King's interposing in their rights and privileges. In the reign of his predecessor Richard 2d, the houses of parliament had resolved that the King has the appointing what matters shall be first handled in parliament and, after that, what next, and so on to the end of the fession.

1699 seperate branch, he had his negative upon all their proceedings which were not according to his mind. This irregularity does not feem to be the meer effect of his lordship's authority and influence over the council. The conflitution under the new charter was not fettled. They came off by degrees from their practice under the old charter. The governor, created by the people, ufed, then, to vote with the affiftants; and although he had no negative, yet he had a cafting voice.* Lord Bellamont finding this to have been the practice, and confidering how much it increased his share in all acts of government, might be difposed to retain it. Experience taught, what was not at first conceived, the great difference between the privilege of proposing or originating and that of rejecting. In fome fucceeding administrations, it has given cause of exception and complaint when the governor has interested himself in 'the debates of the council, to influence their determinations and abridge them of that freedom, to which they are equally intitled with the other branches of the legiflature. He was the first governor who imitated the lord lieutenant of Ireland, in formal speeches, as the king's representative, to the two houses of parliament; copies of which were delivered to the fpeaker and afterwards printed. Extracts, from one or two, fhew they were calculated ad captandum. The unfavorable fentiments of the inhabitants, in general, of the reign of the Stuarts, were well known to him; no fubject could be more engaging than a cenfure upon that family. He concludes his first speech, which is a very long one, in this manner. "I should be wanting to you and myself " too, if I did not put you in mind of the indifpenfable " duty and respect we owe the king, for being the glo-" rious instrument of our deliverance from the odious " fetters and chains of popery and tyranny; which has " almoft

> * While Mr. Stoughton was commander in chief, he had always been chofen of the council; it can fcarcely be fuppofed that he gave his voice as one of the council, in legiflative matters,

" almost overwhelmed our confeiences and fubverted all 1699. " our civil rights. There is fomething that is godlike " in what the king hath done for us. The works of " redemption and prefervation come next to that of cre-" ation. I would not be mifunderstood, fo, as to be " thought to rob God of the glory of that stupendous " act of his providence, in bringing to pais the late hap-" py and wonderful revolution in England. His bleffed " work it was, without doubt, and he was pleafed to " make king William, immediately, the author and in-" ftrument of it. Ever fince the year 1602, England " has had a fucceffion of kings, who have been aliens in "this refpect, that they have not fought our battles nor " been in our interests, but have been, in an unnatural " manner, plotting and contriving to undermine and fub-" vert our religion, laws and liberties, till God was pleafed, " by his infinite power and mercy and goodnefs, to give us " a true English king, in the perfon of his present majesty, " who has, upon all occafions, hazarded his royal perfon in " the fronts of our battles and where there was most dan-"ger; he has reftored to our nation the almost lost cha-" racter of bravery and valor; and, what is most valuable " of all, his majefty is entirely in the intereft of his people. " It is therefore our duty and interest to pray to God, " in the most fervent manner, that he would bless our " great king William with a long and prosperous reign " over us, to which I am perfwaded, you that are pre-" fent and all good people will heartily fay amen."

Hts laft fpeech had expressions, strong enough, upon the fame strain. "The parting with Canada to the "French and the eastern country called Acadia or Nova "Scotia, with the noble sistery on that coast, were most "execrable treacheries to England, and intended, without "doubt, to ferve the ends of popery. It is too well "known, what interess that King favoured, who parted "with Nova Scotia, and of what religion he died."

By avoiding offence to particular perfons, and by a general conformity to the caft or prevailing disposition

I 2

of

IIC

1699. of the people, his Lordship obtained a larger sum, as a falary and gratuity, not only than any of his predeceffors, but alfo than any who fucceded him, when the inhabitants were more numerous and more opulent, and monëy, compared with the necessaries of life, had become lefs valuable; for he remained but 14 months in the province, and the grants made by the general court amounted to \pounds . 2500 lawful money, or \pounds . 1875 fterling.

His time was much taken up in fecuring the pirates and their effects, which, we have observed, was a great inducement with the king to fend him to America. Before his arrival in Boston, several suspected persons had been feized. After 30 or 40 years indulgence, there fucceeded a general abhorrence of bucaneering; and the bucaneers, or freebooters, were hunted from one colony to another. A large fum of money was feized in the possession of one Smith, part of it foreign coins and the impressions unintelligible; and he was brought upon trial, but the evidence produced being insufficient to fatisfy the jury, he was acquitted.

ABOUT the fame time, one Bradish was apprehended. He had been boatfwain's mate of a ship fitted out by merchants and tradefmen of London to India, in the interloping trade. The crew turned pirates; and, having left the mafter ashore at Polonais, gave the command to Bradish. They came to America, and lodged large fums of money and goods with perfons upon Long Island and other places within and near to the government of New-York, and then difperfed; fome to Connecticut, others to Maffachufets bay, where Bradifh was taken and others of his crew and fent to England. The vigilance, used in pursuing and apprehending them, appears from the account Mr. Stoughton transmitted to the fecretary of state.* But Kidd was his lordship's chief object.

* "I have further to obferve unto your honor that, about the 19th of March last past, there arrived at the east end of Long Ifland, in the province of New York, the ship or hack-boat named the Adventure, of London, burthen about 350 tons, mounted with object. His own reputation and that of feveral of his 1699friends depended upon his feizure, being the only effectual way of removing the jealoussies and unjust furmises, 1 2 not with 22 guns, Thomas Gullock late commander ; which fhip failed from Gravesend the 16th day of March 1697-8, bound to the Island of Borneo in India, upon an interloping trade ; being fet forth by Capt. Henry Tate and Capt. Hammond, who kept. a brewhouse in Thames-street, and Mr. Samuel Shephard and the Heathcoats, merchants in London. Having proceeded fo far onward of the voyage as Polonais, they there stopped to water ; and the faid commander, with feveral of the officers, mariners and fome passengers being on shore upon the faid Island, and the Boatswain gone on board with water, the reft of the ship's company combined and conspired together to leave the faid commander and others with him on shore upon the faid Ifland, and to run away with the fhip and lading ; which they accordingly put in execution, on the 17th day ofSeptember last past, cut the cables and brought the ship to fail, offering the yawl to fome of the company that refused to join with them in the faid piracy, to transport them to the shore ; which they accepted of and feveral went off in her to the faid Ifland ; the lurgeon's mate and two other youths they forced to ftay in the fhip : The chief mate alfo, with the boatfwain and armourer, not confenting, unto the faid villainous act, but unwilling to go alhore at the aforefaid Ifland, they gave the long boat unto them with necessary provisions, &c. three days after, being then about 20 leagues from the land ; in which they went off from the fhip, the remainder of the company on board, being five or fix and twenty in number, made choice of one Joseph Bradish, the boatswain's mate, to be their commander, whom they preferred for his skill in navigation, and directed their course for Mauritius, where they fitted the fhip, took in fome fresh provifions and two young gentlemen named Charles Seymour and John Power, who being on a voyage for India, in a fhip under the command of one Capt. Pye, were unhappily left behind on the faid Ifland ; and from Mauritius they came about cape bon esperance and in some short time after made a sharing of the money on board, which was contained in nine chefts, flowed in the bread room, and fet forth three or four and twenty fingle. shares, besides the Captain's which was two shares and a half. In weighing out the money, fome received 1500 others 1600. - dollars for a fingle fhare. They afterwards made a fecond fharing of broad cloths, ferges, ftuffs and other goods on board. They stopped at the Island of Ascension, took some turtle and irelli 1699. not only against feveral of the ministry, but even against the king himfelf. In order to suppress the piracies committed by English subjects in India, &c. it was thought proper to fit out a ship for that special purpose. Lord > fresh provisions there, and thence directed their course for this continent and arrived as aforefaid at Long Island, where the faid Capt. Bradifh went on fhore, carried the most of his money and fome rings and jewels with him; committed them to the care of a gentleman on faid Ifland ; fent a pilot on board to remove the fhip and bring her to an Ifland called Gardner's Ifland ; but the wind not favouring them, ran over to Block Island within Rhode-Ifland government ; from whence they fent two of the company to faid Rhode-Ifland to buy a floop, but the government there, having notice that a fhip was hovering about those parts, suspected to be a pirate, feized on the faid two men and detained them ; the intelligence whereof being carried to the ship, and some sloops being descried coming from faid Island towards the fhip, the company, fearing that they were manned out from thence to feize them, forthwith came to fail and flood off to fea ward; the floops following, came up with them, and being informed what the floops were, permitted them to come on board and bought one of the floops and hired another to transport them and their money, allowing the floops men to take what they pleafed out of the fhip and gat on fhore fome in one place and fome in another; landing at farm houses, where they provided themfelves with horfes, and fcattered into divers parts of the country; the captain, and fome others with him, coming into this province ; upon the first intelligence whereof, a proclamation was iffued and hue and cries fent through the province and into the neighbouring governments to purfue and feize all fuch of them as could be found, with their treasure. The captain, with ten more of the company, are apprehended and in cuftody here in order to a trial ; who upon examination feverally confessed the particulars before recited; and a confiderable quantity of money, to the value of near three thousand pounds, with several goods and merchandizes taken out of the faid ship are feized. Seven or eight more are apprehended within Connecticut government, and purfuit is making after the reft. The juffices of the peace and other officers, in their respective stations, have been very vigorous in the profecution of thefe villains, and the people in general have just refentment and abhorrence of fuch vile actions, and the government here will be very zealous in the difcountenancing and punishing all fuch criminals."

Alr. Stoughton's letter to Mr. Secr'y Vernon, Ap. 12. 1699.

Lord Rumney, Sommers and others, became adventurers, 1699. to the amount of fix thousand pounds sterling, and a grant was made to them of all captures, faving one tenth only referved to the king. Lord Bellamont feems to have had the principal direction. Upon enquiry for a proper commander, Mr. Livingstone, a principal inhabitant of New-York being then in London, recommended Kidd who had failed out of New-York, and having a family there, no question was made of his attachment to it, and there was no fuspicion of his ever turning pirate himself. From London he went first to New-York, where he broke through the inftructions he had received, shipping his men upon new terms; and when he arrived in India, not only connived at and fuffered to continue, a known pirate veffel, but committed divers alarming acts of piracy himfelf, to the endangering the amity fubfifting between the East India company and the princes in that part of the world. The least faid, by the enemies of the administration, was that, from a greedy defire of gain, an ill-judged measure had been engaged in, which would be attended with very mischievous confequences, and the malice of fome infinuated a criminal intention in the undertaking.

WHERE Kidd would feek an afylum was uncertain. Strangely infatuated, he came from Madagafcar to Bofton, and made a bold open appearance there, July the first this year, and fome of his crew with him. On the third, he was fent for by the governor and examined before the council. What account he could give of himfelf does not now appear, but he was not immediately committed, and only ordered to draw up a narrative of his proceedings; which neglecting to do in the time affigned him, on the fixth he was apprehended and committed to prifon. Being a very refolute fellow, when the officer arrefted him in his lodgings, he attempted to draw his fword, but a young gentleman,* who accompanied the I 4

* Mr. Thomas Hutchinson, afterwards, for many years one of the council. 1599. officer, laying hold of his arm prevented him, and he fubmitted. Several of his men were fecured at the fame time, and advice having been fent to England, it was thought an affair of fo much importance, that a man of war was fent to carry them there; where Kidd, Bradifh and divers others were condemned and executed. The party writers in England pretended, that after Kidd's arrival he had affurance from fome anti-courtiers, who examined him in prifon, that his life fhould be fpared if he would accufe his employers, but that he was not bad enough to comply with fuch a propofal.

LORD Bellamont held two feffions of the general court this year; the first, the anniversary for the election of councellors, the latter the 31st of March following, occasioned by a general rumor through the colonies, that the Indians (from all quarters, not only those upon the frontiers, but those who were feattered through the towns in the several colonies) had united and agreed, at an appointed time, to fall upon the English in order to a total extirpation. The Indians were no less alarmed with a report, that the king had withdrawn his protection from them, and ordered his subjects to unite in their destruction. These reports were supposed to have been raised by evil minded perfons among the English or Dutch; but it is more probable, the Indians of the fix nations,* to obtain the prefents which accompanied all treaties between the English and them, were the contrivers

I remember that when the commissions from feveral governments were at Albany, upon treaty with the Indians of the fix nations, in the year 1745, Hendrick, the Indian chief (who afterwards loft his life fighting under the English when baron Diefkau was defeated) had contrived, a little while before the treaty, to spread a rumor, among his countrymen, that the English had laid a plan for their destruction; and that arms, ammunition, &c. were provided and fent to the frontiers, in order to make a stroke upon them, when they least expected it. The commissioners were surprized at the general discontent discovered by the Indians, their frequent assessing and their backwardness in conferring with the English; and having fome intimation of the rumor, they refolsed to fearch to the bottom contrivers and managers of the whole affair. Such was 1699. the confternation in the Maffachufets, that feveral acts paffed the general court for levying foldiers; for punifhing mutiny and defertion; for holding all the militia in readinefs to march; and for enabling the governor to march them out of the province, which, by charter, he was reftrained from without an act of affembly. As it happened, there was no occasion for carrying these laws into execution; the general terror fubliding foon after.

SOON after the feffion of the general court in May 1700. 1700, Lord Bellamont took his leave of the Maffachufets and went to New-York, where he died the 5th of March following, Mr. Stoughton took the chair again, with reluctance. His advanced age and declining ftate of health made him fond of eafe and retirement.

As foon as the news of the governor's death reached 1701. England, Mr. Dudley renewed his follicitations, with fresh vigor, for a post which he never loss fight of. By the interest of Lord Cutts, and the condescention of Lord Weymouth, whose fon in law was a competitor, he was chosen member for Newtown in Southampton county in King William's last parliament. This, with the place of lieut. governor of the Isle of Wight, was to be preferred to all he could expect in New-England if it had not been his native country; but he had a passion for laying his bones there, which equalled that of the antient Athenians, and which he could not help mentioning to every New-England man who paid him a visit; as many frequently would do, from Portsmouth, where they were often detained for convoy.

WHEN bottom of it. Hendrick, finding himfelf in danger of being difcovered, and fearing the refentment of his own countrymen, came to the commiffioners privately, and defired they would make no further enquiry; he would undertake to quiet the Indians and remove their fears. The commiffioners confidered him as a neceffary man, who had been very ufeful in bringing his countrymen to agree to measures proposed by the Englifh, and that it was good policy not to expose him, and left it to him to convince the reft, that their fuspicions were groundlefs, which he effected in a very flort time.

. 121

WHEN Sir Richard Onflow and Mr. Harley + were 1701. competitors for the fpeaker's place, his inclination led him to the latter, from whom he had received favors; but his favorite object, which he was then purfuing, obliged him to comply with the court and vote for the former. He made use of the diffenting interest in England to obtain his commission and to recommend him to his countrymen upon his arrival. I There was another

+ We have a tradition that Mr. Harley had fome New-England blood in him, his mother being a grand daughter of Sir Richard Saltonstall. A letter from her to one of her fisters in New-England is faid to have been preferved many years after his death for the fake of this passage in it. " I am now going to carry Bob up to the inns of court to make a man of him."

1 " Revd Sirs,

London 13 Aug. 1701.

The just and great concern we have for the welfare of NewEngland has, upon all occafions, engaged us to improve that little interest we have or can make at court, in the appointment of your governor from time to time, that he may be fuch aone as may feek your good, and under whom you may be fecure and encouraged in your holy religion, and also in your civil rights and privileges; and fuch a one we hope and have a great deal of reafon to believe is Col. Dudley, whom the king was pleased upon his departure to appoint your governor, and we crave leave to acquaint you that we were very well pleafed in his Majefty's nomination upon many accounts, our own perfonal knowledge of his character to be a man of learning, prudence and fobriety, and of good acceptance with the prefent government of England for his faithful fervice in the Ifle of Wight, and that his family, eftate and interest is in your country. Upon the whole, we judge it an especial act of the king's favour towards you, that he, among fo many others that always offer upon fuch accounts, fhould be determined for you. We hope and believe it is the especial providence of God, and shall heartily pray that you may foon fee him and have the benefit of his good conduct and care for you, and do not doubt but you will joyfully receive him and affift him with your prayers and advice. Rev^d Sirs, Your most affectionate and At all times we are, humble fervants, John Quick Robert Billio Jofiah Chorley Norwich Fr. Glascocke Jeremiah White Matt. Sylvefter." John Long Letter from disenting ministers in England to the ministers of Massachusets-bay.

Rich^d Stretton Tho. Powell. minifter of the gospel, other difficulty ftill remaining, the king was not willing 1701. to appoint a governor who he knew had been very obnoxious to the people. A petition was therefore procured, from fuch perfons belonging to the Maffachufets bay as were then in London, and from the principal New-England merchants, praying that Mr. Dudley might be appointed governor. He had alfo the addrefs to reconcile himfelf to Mr. Mather the younger, and to obtain from him a letter favoring his caufe, which he made known to the king, and which removed his objection;* and although Lord Cornbury, a near relation

* " I have been fo hurried in parliament, and indifpofed by my late attending committees, that I could not find leifure to write to you; or rather, I was fo out of humour with my ill ufage here and in New-England, for my faithful 12 years fervice, that I had no heart to write. I fee, he that is faithful to his religion and his country must expect his reward above. Before the king died, I had another hearing before the council and the king. Mr. Dudley and Mr. Phips on the one fide, and I alone on the other. Mr. Dudley produced Mr. Cotton Mather's letter, and read it to the king; and Mr. Phips and he averred, that there was not one minister nor one of the affembly but were impatient for his coming. I wifh you very happy under. his government. As to my Lord Cornbury, he was bred at Geneva, and would no more have attempted upon your religious interest than I would. I could not believe that my Lord Weymouth should hinder his own fon in law from being chofen. parliament man, that Mr. Dudley, when I opposed him, might get in, and that Mr. Blaithwait and the bishop of St. Afaph, thould fo earneftly be for Dudley's going, and that on purpofe to ferve the interest of your churches. Mr. Stretton gat all the Non-cons to fubscribe that letter. Poor Mr. Glascock wept to Mr. Howe for figning it. Whatever you pleafe to fay or think of me, I have the testimony of my confcience, that in the integrity of my heart, in the fight of God, I have ferved New-England with all my might."

Sir H. Afhurst to I. M. March 25. 1702. Sir Henry Ashurst was mistaken in his opinion of Lord Cornbury. Mr. Smith, in his history of New-York, has given us an account of the arbitrary fevere treatment the diffenters received from him. A circumstantial account of his profecuting two itinerant preachers I have feen, under the hand of one of them. The fouthern colonies being destitute of ministers of any fort, the diffenting 124 $701. of the late Queen and the Princefs Ann, being appointed for New-York, expected Maffachufets alfo, yet Mr. Dudley prevailed; and his commiffion paffed the feals. The king's death, a few months after, caufed him the trouble of taking out a new commiffion from the Queen, but he had the unufual favor fhewn him of remitting most if not all the fees.

WHILST

diffenting ministers in London, with fome principal men of their congregations made provision for the support of two itinerant millionaries from Virginia to New-York, who were to be absent two years; and upon their return, two others were to be fent out, and fo from time to time. The two first were George Macnish from Scotland, and John Hampton from Ireland; but being strangers to America, Francis Makennie, another minister who had been there before, accompanied them. Beginning their mission at Carolina they travelled northward; and M' Nifh being left to take care of five meeting houses in Somerset, Maryland, the other two went on to New-York. They waited upon the governor, and were civilly received; and fome of the inhabitants who defired to hear them, applied to his Lordship to give them leave to preach in the Dutch or French church. but he refused it, and the ministers of the churches did not care to admit them against his mind. Makennie, in compliance with the defires of the people, preached in a private house with the doors open, and a day or two after left New. York in order to preach at Newtown on Long-Island where he and Hampton who had preached in the meeting house at Newtown were apprehended by a warrant from the governor, carried before him and charged with preaching in his government without his licence : They replied, that they prefumed upon the liberty given by an act of parliament the 1st. of William and Mary, and had obtained certificates according to the directions of the act which they delivered him. He told them the act was local, and they must find fureties for their good behavior, and especially not to preach any more in his government. This they declined, and were committed to cuftody, where they continued many weeks at the expence of 40s. per week. During their, confinement, they applied to the ministers of Boston, defiring them to represent their case to some gentlemen in England who might appear in their behalf, which occasioned among others the following letter.

" Sirs,

WHILST these things were transacting in England, 1702, the lieutenant governor, Mr. Stoughton, died, in May this year, at his house in Dorchester. The administration for the first time devolved upon the council. Some manuscript

Bofton, N. E. April 1. 1707. " Sirs. We have lately given you fome account of the violent and illegal actions of my lord Cornbury, governor of New-York, in imprifoning two qualified prefbyterian ministers (Mr. F. M. and Mr. J. H.) for offering to attend the duties of their ministry in his government, under the shelter of the act of toleration. The gentlemen lay prifoners for more than fix weeks at forty shillings per week charges, upon a mittimus figned by my lord; not in the queen's name and without any crime specified, Tho' both my lord and the queen's attorney denied the act of toleration to extend unto the plantations, yet they have fince made the act of uniformity, notwithstanding the clauses of limitation in it, fo extensive. The chief justice, finding himfelf under a necessity to grant the gentlemen an babeas corpus, which would have discharged them, my lord (from whom they have no hope of obtaining here any fatisfaction for their falfe imprisonment all this while) ferved a new mittimus upon them. A grand jury was packed, whereof three were juffices of the peace, who had already, as fuch, appeared against the prifoners; the reft of the English were high flying churchmen, and the biggest part were Dutch and French, who neither knew the English law nor spake the English tongue, and either were dependents on my lord or fufpected of popery. This grand jury found against Mr. Francis Mackennie a bill, that on the 22d day of January he did preach and teach at the houfe of one William Jackfon, where were affembled together above the number of five perfons at one time, and did voluntarily and unlawfully ufe other rites and ceremonies and form and manner of divine worship than what are contained in a certain book intitled, the book of common prayer and administration of the facraments. against the statute in that cafe made and provided. Mr. John Hampton was discharged, being a man of less interest. On this bill, the faid Mr. Francis Mackennie is bound over to the court in June, when he expects another jury of the fame complexion, and that their defign is then to make a prey of him. Except a speedy relief be obtained, the issue will be, not only a vast oppression on a very worthy fervant of God, but also a confusion upon the whole body of diffenters in those colonies, where they are languishing under my lord Cornbury's arbitrary and unaccountable government. We do therefore carnefly

125

follicit

manufcript minutes and letters, which I have feen, about 1702. the time, and after the fettlement of the charter, take it for granted, that upon the death or absence of the governor and lieutenant governor the fenior counfellor would prefide, and an inftruction from the crown has been given for that purpofe; but the expression in the charter, if it will admit of this construction, does not favor it: We must not wonder therefore, that twenty. feven councellors did not readily give up their share in the administration to him that happened to be the eldest. It is a defect in the conflitution, for although, for certain purposes, seven councellors make a quorum, yet in all acts, as commanders in chief, it has been judged. neceffary, that fifteen (or a majority of the whole number) fhould give their confent. This must be extremely inconvenient, especially in time of war, when dispatch, often, and fecrecy, fometimes, are of great importance.

MR.

follicit you, that you would humbly petition the queen's majefty on this occafion, and reprefent the fufferings of the differences in those parts of America which are carried on in fo direct violation of her majefty's commands, of the laws of the nation, and the common rights of Englishmen.

- The diffance of a thousand leagues between England and these colonies, and the uncertainty of communication in this time of war, make our condition under oppressions the more insupportable, e'er any relief or fo much as a check, to fuch a governor as my lord Cornbury, can be obtained; and bespeaks the more lively compassion of those unto whom we cry, as we now do unto you to be our advocates. It is the cause of the oppressed that you now have to plead; the cause of not only many thousands in America, but of a great part of the English nation, and indeed the common cause of humanity itself. You may depend upon the truth of the representation here laid before you, and it is to be wished that it may be published unto the whole English nation.
- The defires of many, of the most eminent persons in New-England, thus address unto you by the pen of,
 - To Sir H. Afhurft, Sir W. Afhurft, and Sirs, your most humble fervant.
 - Sir Edm. Harrison, London.

MR. Stoughton's father was effeemed by the people; 1702. was commander in chief of the forces of the colony in. the first war against the Pequod Indians, and after that, many years a magistrate; and of a confiderable estate for those times. This circumstance caused his own natural endowments, which were cultivated and improved by the best education the country afforded, to be more obferved and valued. He was, in early life, a candidate for the ministry; + but the people judged him proper to take his father's place as a magistrate; then employed him as their agent in England; and urged him a fecond time to engage in the fame fervice. It is no blemish in his character that he had many oppofers. Every man, who makes it more his aim to ferve than to pleafe the people, may expect it. From the observations he made in his agency, he was convinced it was to no purpole to oppose the demands of king Charles; and from the example of the corporations in England, he was for furrendering the charter rather than to fuffer a judgment 'or decree against it. In fuch cafe, a more favorable administration might be expected to fucceed it, and in better times there would be a greater chance for re-affuming it. He confented to act as one of the council under Sir Edmund Andros, in hopes, by that means, to render the new form of government more eafy. By this ftep he loft the favor of the people, and yet did not obtain the confidence

† Many gentlemen, before and fince Mr. Stoughton, who have been probationers for the ministry, have afterwards made a figure at the bar, and in the legislative as well as executive courts of the province, gained great reputation; and fome, who have been fettled ministers, have not been lefs efteemed for leaving their parishes where an infufficient support has been afforded, or there has been other good cause assigned; but these inftances are more rare. The New-England clergy do not assume an indelible character; however, after having been once ordained, or, to use one of their own as well as a foriptural expressive term, feperated to the work of the ministry, there feems to be fome more special reasons requisite to justify the forfaking this, than would be sufficient in the case of a civil employment or course of life. 128

1702. confidence of the governor, who would willingly have been rid of him, feldom confulted him, and by the influence he had over the majority of the council, generally, carried the votes against his mind. He joined upon the revolution with the old magistrates, who made no fcruple of receiving him, in re-affuming the government; but upon the election afterwards made by the people he did not obtain a vote. At the defire of the council and reprefentatives he drew up a narrative of the proceedings of Sir Edmund and his accomplices, figned by him and feveral others of the council ;* in which they modestly take exception to many things in the administration, and exculpate themfelves from any fhare in them. He was nine years lieutenant governor, and fix of them commander in chief; had experienced the two extremes of popular and abfolute government; and not only himfelf approved of a mean between both, but was better qualified to recommend it, by a difcreet administration, to the people of the province. He died a bachelor. Instead of children, he faw, before his death, a college reared at his expence, which took the name of Stoughton hall. He had good reason to think it would transmit a grateful remembrance of his name to fucceeding ages.

SIR

* They conclude their narrative with these words; " These are " the chief matters which upon this occasion, without any un-" due prejudice again& any man, or design to justify the desets " of ourselves in the performance of our own shares of duty, " but in answer to the desire fignified to us as above, we have " to set forth ; professing truly, that by such a state of things " as we had the experience and feeling of, the places that we " held were rendered exceeding uneasy to us, and that out of " a fincere respect to the prosperity of these their majesty's " plantations, we could not but be very desirous, that through " the favor of God and our superiors, all due redress might in " a good happy feason be obtained ; and the way of govern-" ing English subjects in their majesties dominions, without an " as allow of the people's representatives, be basisfied forever. " Will. Stoughton

" Thomas Hinkley Wait Winthrop

"Barth. Cedney Sam. Shrimpton."

+ The foundation flone was laid the 9th of May 1698.

SIR Henry Ashurst* and Constantine Phips had con- 1702. tinued agents for the province, in England, for ten years together. Divers attempts had been made, by Mr. Mather's friends, to fend him again to England in the fervice of the province; and, after Mr. Stoughton's death, the two houses came to a resolution to chuse some berfon in the province, and fend him to England as their agent; and a great interest was made that Mr. Mather might be the man; but it happened that Mr. Cooke, who had not forgot their former difference when joint agents, stood as well with the affembly at this time as he had ever done, and had influence enough to prevent Mr. Mather from fucceeding. The choice fell upon Waitstill Winthrop, grandfon to the first governor of the Maffachufets and fon to the first governor of Connecticut, and who either out of respect to his family, or for fome other reafon which does not now appear, was confidered as prefident of the council, although there were many who by priority of appointment, the rule generally observed, fliould have preceded him.

THE French claim to the country east of the river Kennebeck and to an exclusive fishery upon the fea-coast were the reafons publickly affigned for the choice of an agent at this time, and an addrefs to the king had paffed the council and affembly, and Mr. Winthrop's inftructions were prepared. These proceedings of the French were really alarming. The professed reasons, however, were not the true reasons. Mr. Dudley's follicitations for the government were known, and, although his interest in the province was increasing, yet, a majority of the general court had a very ill opinion of him. Mr. Winthrop was a good fort of a man, and although he was of a genius rather inferior to either of his ancestors, yet he was popular, and the party against Mr. Dudley wished to VOL. II. K have

* Sir Henry was finally difmiffed just before Lord Bellamont left the province. 1702. have him governor. They flattered themfelves that his being acceptable to the country would, together with his family and his eftate, both which were of the first rate. be fufficient to recommend him, but they were miltaken. Winthrop was a plain honeft man. Dudley had been many years well acquainted with the cuftoms and manners of a court, and would have been more than a match for him. Just as he was about to embark, news came that Mr. Dudley was appointed governor and Thomas Povey lieutenant governor. The reafon of Mr. Winthrop's appointment to the agency immediately appeared. The vote for his instructions was reconfidered and his voyage laid afide. It was thought proper, however, that the address to the king should be forwarded. This was fent to Mr. Phips. A fecond addrefs accompanied it, occafioned by advice of a bill being brought into the house of lords for diffolving charter governments. It is not probable that the Maffachufets charter was the fpecial occasion of this bill. It differs so little from the commissions in the royal governments, as they are called, as not to be worth notice. About this time, or a little before, the fpirit against the king had caused the reaffumption of many grants which he had made of private estates. If there was a special prejudice against colony charters, it is probable the charter to Pennfylvania was the most exceptionable. The proprietor was obnoxious, had absconded a few years before upon a fuspicion of treafonable practices, and was still under a cloud. The Maffachufets inftruct their agent as follows. " As to the bill, faid to be lying before the honfe of lords, " for the diffolving charter governments in the planta-" tions, we intreat you to be very watchful in that mat-" ter and use utmost diligence, by all convenient means, " to prevent our being comprehended in or concluded by " the fame. Our circumstances are different from those " of other plantations under charter government, our first " fettlement being wholly at our own coft and charge, " and

" and by our prefent fettlement we are already reduced 1702. " to a more immediate dependance on the crown, his ma-" jest having referved to himfelf the nomination of our governor, lieutenant governor and fecretary, and à " negative on our laws." In their address to the king they thus express themselves. "And forasmuch as we "are given to understand that, through the fuggestions " of fome perfons not well affected to charter govern-" ments, a bill has been preferred in the house of lords " for vacating charter and proprietary governments with-" in your majesty's plantations, we in all submission crave " leave humbly to pray your majefty's grace and favor " towards your good fubjects within this your province, " that no fuch fuggestions may make an impression in " your royal breaft to deprive us of those privileges "which we enjoy under your majesty's most gracious "grant, and that we may not be included in any such " act to our prejudice, without having opportunity given "us of being heard and speaking for ourselves." The bill was dropped in the house of lords, and, a war with France being every day expected, the longest fword was to determine the points complained of in the first address.

THE fending these addresses to Phips was grievous. to Ashurst. Although he had not very shining talents, yet being a member of parliament, having a great family interess, and being an honess man and conficientious in the discharge of his trust, he had been very serviceable K 2 to † Sir Henry Afhurft was fon to Henry Afhurft, Efq; who had a great hand in fettling the corporation for propagating the gofpel among the Indians in New-England and parts adjacent. Sir Henry being a zealous differter, accompanied Mr. Baxter when he was brought to his trial before a favage judge, was at the expence of fees for his counfel and, after the trial, led him through the crowd and conveyed him away in a coach. Notwithftanding this, he was created a baronet in the fame reign, when differters, in oppolition to the church of England, were

in

1702. to the province. He had however the fate of most agents. Affoon as the party against him found they were strong enough they left him out of the agency, and he made frequent complaints that they had flighted his fervices and neglected giving him an adequate reward. All the agents who had been employed before him, except Mr. Winflow, were unfuccefsful and feveral, probably for that reason, thought unfaithful. The first who were employed were Weld, Peters and Hibbins, in 1640. They borrowed money for the fervice of the colony, and proper care not being taken by the government for the payment, these agents, for several years after, were contending about the proportion in which they should pay it themselves. Winflow, who went over in 1646, foon found more profitable employment, but his allowance was fo fcant from the colony that the corporation for propagating the gofpel among the Indians allowed him f.100 fterling for promoting that defign, but wrote to the government that it ought to be reftored. Bradstreet and Norton were fent in 1660. Norton laid the reproaches he met with fo much to heart as to affect his health and shorten his life. In 1677 Stoughton and Bulkley were employed, and foon after their return it was faid by those who charged Bulkley with too great compliance with court measures, that his fun set in a cloud. He died of melancholy. Stoughton was reproached, and, although he had a majority of the court in his favor, he could not be prevailed on to rifque his reputation a fecond time. Dudley and Richards were the next, in 1682. The former managed the whole bufinefs > in favor, just before the revolution. His lady was daughter of lord Paget. He died in 1710, leaving only one fon, Sir Henry Ashurst, who married a daughter and coheiress of Sir Thomas Draper, of Sunninghill-park, Berkshire, and was member for Windsor in 1714, and died in 1732 without iffue, so that the title is extinct, but the descendants of the first Henry by the younger branches remain, and the family is still respectable.

bulinefs and bore the whole blame but, being of a very 1702. different temper from fome of his predeceffors, inftead of laying to heart the flight of his countrymen, he was politic enough to improve frowns at home to procure favors from abroad. Mather, Cooke and Oakes were employed to follicit the reftoration of the firft charter. In this they failed. Mather without the confent of his brethren accepted the prefent charter, and although, at firft, a majority of the court acknowledged his merit, the opposite party foon after prevailed, and he failed of his expected reward, and complained all his life of the ingratitude of his countrymen, after having fpent not only his time but part of his effate in public fervice. I would draw a veil over our tranfactions relative to agents, if my obligations to truth would permit me. Errors and failings, as well as laudable deeds, in paft ages, may be rendered ufeful, by exciting pofterity to avoid the one and to imitate the other.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

From the arrival of Governor Dudley, in 1702, to the arrival of Governor Shute, in 1716.

R. Dudley was received with ceremony and marks of refpect, even by those who had been his greatest opposers in the reign of King James. Winthrop, Cooke, Hutchinson, * Foster, Addington, Russell, Phillips, Browne, Sargent and others, who had been of the council which committed him to prison, where he lay 20 weeks, were of the council when he arrived. Upon such political changes, a general amnest is oftentimes adviseable and necessary.

THE affront and infult fhewn by Lewis the 14th, not only to the prince upon the throne, but to the Englifh nation, in proclaiming another perfon king, had rendered a war with France inevitable, before the governor left England. The news of its being proclaimed arrived, in a few weeks after him. Nothing lefs could be expected than a war with the Indians alfo. Ever fince the peace, in 1698, the governor of Canada, by his emiffaries, had been continually exciting them to hoftilities; and juffified himfelf upon this principle, that the Indians having caft themfelves upon the French, long fince, as their protectors, and being proprietors of the eaftern country, where the Englifh had uturped a jurifdiction, which as far weftward as Kennebeck rightfully belonged to the French, Col. Hutchinfon had the command of the caftle when Mr. Dudley's arrived, but was removed and fucceeded by lieutenant governor Povey. French, the English therefore were to be confidered as 1702. intruders and invaders upon the jurifdiction of the French and upon the property of the Indians.

THE governor, the first fummer, visited all the eastern frontiers as far as Pemaquid; taking fuch gentlemen of the general court with him as he thought proper; † met the delegates from the Indian tribes and confirmed the former treaties which had been made. He had recommended, in his first speech to the affembly, the rebuilding the fort at Pemaquid; and the gentlemen, who accompanied him east, reported in favor of it, and their report was accepted by the council; but the houfe continued of the fame mind they had formerly been, urging that all the money they could raife would be wanted for other fervices more necessary than that, and refused to comply with the governor's propofal. His heart was fet upon it; the ministry continued their prejudice in favor of this particular spot, and, it is not improbable, that he had given encouragement he should be able to carry a point, which his predeceffors could not, and therefore was the more mortified at the failure.

THE Indians, upon the Maffachufets frontiers, continued quiet this year, but the Nova-Scotia Indians feized three of the filhing veffels belonging to this province, upon a report that war was declared. The council attempted to recover them, and by the interpofition of Bruillon, governor of Nova-Scotia, two, if not the third, were reftored.

At the first election Mr. Dudley treated the house 1703. more cavalierly than Sir William Phips or Lord Bellamont had ever done. After the lift of councellors elect had been prefented, "A meffage was fent, from his excellency, to defire Mr. speaker and the house forthwith to attend him in the council chamber; and, Mr. speaker and the house being come up, his excellency observed to them, K 4 that † He always refufed to allow the two houfes to appoint committees to attend him upon any treaties. 1703. that in their lift of elections, prefented to him, he took notice that there were feveral gentlemen left out, that were of the council last year, who were of good ability, for eftate and otherwife, to ferve her majefty and well disposed thereto, and that some others who were new elected; were not fo well qualified ; fome of them being of little or mean estate; and withal fignified, that he should expunge five of the names in their lift, viz. Elisha Cooke and Peter Sargent Esq's, Mr. Thomas Oakes, Mr. John Saffin and Mr. John Bradford, and dismissed the house, who returned to their chamber :"* Cooke had been of the council nine or ten years, had been affistant before the revolution, married a daughter of governor Leveret, and was allied to the best families in the province, had a better effate than the governor himfelf, but then he had been agent in England, and difcovered greater zeal for profecuting the complaints against Andros, Dudley, &c. than any of his fellow agents. Sargent had married the relict of Sir William Phips. Oakes had been one of the agents in England alfo, and under the direction of Cooke. Saffin was a principal inhabitant of Briftol, (the father of Thomas Saffin in Stepney church yard, whole memory the author of the spectator has immortalized) and Bradford was grandfon of the first worthy governor of Plimouth.

THERE had been but one inftance, of the governor's refufal of a councellor, fince the charter. The right of refufal could not be difputed. Had the power been frequently exercifed, lefs exception would have been taken to this inftance; but the long difufe of it caufed the re-affumption of it, upon fo many perfons at once, to be more difagreeable. Oakes was of the Houfe, and, notwithftanding the negative as a councellor, remained there; and, if he could be of any confequence, this would add to his weight.

LORD Cornbury, governor of New-York, fome time in the month of May, advifed Mr, Dudley of an army of French and Indians, intending to make a defcent upon 1703. Deerfield, in the Maffachufets province. The intelligence was brought to Albany, by fome of the praying or christianized Mohawks, who had been to visit their friends at Cagnawaga in Canada, who formerly had belonged to the fame village, about 40 miles from Albany. This defign was not immediately carried into execution.

* Gen. cours records.

91

WHILST every one was fearing hoftilities from the Indians, feveral Englishmen, pretending friendship to Castine, son of the Baron de St. Castine by an Indian woman, who now lived at Penobscot, plundered his house, &c. and made great spoil. Upon his complaint to the government, he was affured the action should not go without due punishment, and that restitution should be made. About the same time, the Indians did mischief to some of the people upon Kennebeck : Which action was first, I cannot ascertain. Perhaps neither of them was from resentment or revenge for the other.

BEFORE the end of the year, the blow threatned in the beginning of it, was struck upon Deerfield. This was the most remote fettlement upon Connecticut river, except a few families at Squakheag or Northfield adjoining to it. Deerfield, being eafiest of access of any place upon the river, had often fuffered by fmall parties. In 1697, an attempt was made upon it, but failed of fuccefs, through the vigilance and bravery of the inhabitants, with Mr. Williams their minister at their head. Col. Schuyler, of Albany, had obtained information of the defigns of the enemy upon it this year, and gave notice feasonable enough to put the people upon their guard. It was afterwards thought remarkable, that the minister had it ftrongly impreffed upon his mind, that the town would be destroyed. It would not have been very strange if this impression had never been off his minds He warned his people of it in his fermons, but too many made light of the intelligence, and of the impressions which naturally followed. The government, upon his application, ordered 20 foldiers as a guard. The party, which had 1703. had been fitted out at Canada, confisted of about 300 French and Indians, under Hertel de Rouville, who had four brothers with him; their father had been a noted Partifan, but was now unable to take fo long a march. They came upon the town, the night after the 28th of February. In the fore part of the night, and until about two hours before day, the watch kept the ftreets ; and, then, unfortunately went all to fleep. The enemy, who had been hovering about them, and kept continually reconnoitring, perceived all to be quiet, and first furprized the fort or principal garrifon houfe. The fnow was fo high, in drifts, that they had no difficulty in jumping over the walls. Another party broke into the house of Mr. Williams, the minister, who, rising from his bed, discovered near 20 entring. He expected immediate death, but had the firmnefs of mind to take down a pistol, which he always kept loaded upon his tefter, and to prefent it to the breast of the first Indian who came up to him. The pistol, fortunately for Mr. Williams, fnapped only and miffed fire. Had he killed the Indian, his own life no doubt would have been taken in revenge. Being, in effect, difarmed, he was feized and pinioned, and kept flanding, in his fhirt only, in that cold feafon, the fpace of an hour. In the mean time, his houfe was plundered, and two of his children and a negro woman murdered. His wife and five other children were fuffered to put on their cloaths, and then he himfelf was allowed to drefs and prepare for a long march.

OTHER parties fell upon other houses in the town, and flew about 40 perfons, and made about 100 more prisoners. Sun about an hour high, the enemy had finished their work, and took their departure, leaving all the houses, outhouses, &c. in flames. Mrs. Williams had fcarcely recovered from her lying in, and was in a weak state. The enemy made all the haste they could, less a superior force should overtake them. The second day, the let her husband know she was unable to travel any farther, as fast as they did. He knew the confequence, and and would gladly have remained with her and affifted 1703. her; but they had different mafters, and leave could not be obtained, and he was carried from her and foon after heard that her mafter had funk his hatchet into her brains. One cannot eafily conceive of greater diftrefs, than what an affectionate hufband muft then have felt. About twenty more of the prifoners, in their travel towards Canada, gave out and were killed alfo.* They were 25 days between Deerfield and Chambli, depending upon hunting for their fupport as they travelled. † Vaudreuil, the French governor of Canada, treated thefe prifoners with humanity; and although the Indians have been encouraged, by premiums upon prifoners and fcalps, to

This is not mentioned as an inftance of favage barbarity. Their own prefervation often depends upon their deftroying their prisoners. Henry the fifth of England killed, in cold blood, the flower of France, when he fupposed his own little army to be in danger. The Indians, after these onsets, always expected to be purfued. If they left their grown captives in the woods they would discover them to their pursuers, if such captives should be found by them. To leave young children to die would be more eruel than to kill them outright. Their barbarities are committed, when they are intoxicated with liquor or enraged with passion. Some of the children, who were taken at Deerfield, they drew upon flays; at other times they have been known to carry them in their arms or upon their backs to Canada. This tenderness has occasioned the beginning of an affection, which in a few years has been fo rivetted, that the parents of the children, who have gone to Canada to feek them, could by no means prevail upon them to leave the Indians and return home. One of Mr. Williams's daughters married an Indian husband and yet lives with them. I faw at Albany two or three men, in the year 1744, who came in with the Indians to trade, and who had been taken at Groton in this, that is called Queen Ann's war. One of them ---- Tarbell, was faid to be one of the wealthieft of the Cagnawaga tribe. He made a vifit in his Indian drefs and with his Indian complexion (for by means of greafe and paints but little difference could be difference) to his relations at Groton, but had no inclination to remain there.

Most of the captives were redeemed after fome years. Two of Mr. Williams's fons, after their return, were worthy ministers, of amiable characters, one at Waltham, now deceased; the ether fill living at Long-Meadow in Springfield.

139

1703. to lay waste the English frontiers, yet the captives, who have been carried to Canada, have often received very kind usage from the French inhabitants.

THE unfortunate provinces, of Maffachufets-bay and New-Hampshire, were the only people upon the continent against whom the French and Indians, during a ten years war, exerted their strength. Connecticut and Rhode-Island were covered by the Massachusets. New York took care of themfelves, and of the colonies fouth of them, by a neutrality which the Iroquois or fix nations (influenced by those who had the direction of Indian affairs) engaged to obferve between the English and French. This was, in effect, a neutrality between the French and the English governments to the fouthward of New-England. Nothing could be more acceptable to the Canadians. The New-England governments felt the terrible confequences. Charlevoix gives this account of it. " Teganifforens arrived, a little while after, at "Montreal, and, in the conference which he had with " the commander in chief, he appeared, at first, to be "out of humor, which boded ill to the business he " came upon. The Europeans, fays he, are an out of " the way people; after they have made peace, one with " another, they go to war again, for meer nothing at all. " This is not our practice; after we have once figned to " a treaty, there must be fome very strong reasons to " induce us to break it. He went on and declared, that " his nation fhould not engage in a war which they did " not approve of, neither on one fide nor the other. " Monf. de Vaudreuil let Teganissorens know, that he " defired nothing further; and, that the Iroquois might " have no pretence to break fo advantageous a neutra-" lity, he determined to fend out no parties towards "New-York." Again, upon another occasion, "At all " events, the fix nations, and especially the Tsonon. " heans,* were refolved ftrictly to obferve the neutrality. " which they had fworn, and of which they had begun " to

* Seneka's,

" to feel the benefit; but you may fee that they were 1703. " much fet upon including the English, that they might " be confidered as mediators between them and us. " Mr. Vaudreuil, who had very early feen through their " defign, had acquainted the court with it, and received " for answer, that if he was able to carry on the war " to advantage without putting the crown to any ex-" traordinary expence, he should reject the proposals of " the Iroquois; otherwife, he might fettle a neutrality " for America, upon the best terms he could, but that " it was not for his majefty's honor that his governor " and lieutenant general should be the first mover of it. " The minister added, that he thought it would be most " proper for the miffionaries to let the Indians know, " that the French did not defire to difturb the peace of " the country; that altho' they were very well able to " carry on a vigorous war, yet they proferred the quiet " of Canada to all the advantages they might reap from " the fuperiority of their arms; and if the fix nations, " convinced that this was our disposition, should cause the " English to ask a neutrality for their colonies, M. Vau-" dreuil might confider of it; but that he should not " come to a conclusion without orders from the king."

I am fenfible Charlevoix fays, that "the Bostoneers " would have obtained the fame thing from the Abena-" quis or eastern Indians." It is certain, that the Massachufets government would have been content (provided the eastern Indians had continued at peace with the English) that they should not be obliged to go to war against the French; but the Massachusets, in all their treaties with the eastern Indians, made peace for the other governments as well as for themfelves; and hostilities against Connecticut or New York would have been deemed a breach of the peace, as well as those against the Maffachufets ; whereas the New-Yorkers, or rather the Albanians, fuffered the Canada Indians to go through their province and fall upon any of our frontiers, without looking upon it to be a breach of the neutrality, and carried 1703. carried on great trade both with French and Indians, at the fame time; and fometimes the plunder, made in the county of Hampshire, became merchandize in Albany. Some of the best people detested such proceedings, particularly Col. John Schuyler of Albany; who, by means of the Indians of the fix nations in the English interest, informed himself of the intended expeditions of the French, and French Indians, and gave frequent notice to the people upon our frontiers to be upon their guard; but most of the inroads made upon us he had it not in his power to discover.

142

THAT the French might improve this plan to greater advantage, they drew off, about this time, a great number of the Abenaquis families from Penobscot, Norridgewock, Saco, Pigwacket, &c. and settled them at Becancour and St. Francois, in Canada, where they were known to the English by the name of St. Francois Indians. Here they were under the constant direction of the governor of Canada, and were fent out, from time to time, with parties of the fix nations in the French interest and French Canadians, to massive the men, women and children upon the east and west frontiers. Charlevoix fays, "they were intended as a barrier against the inroads of "the fix nations, in case of a future war between them " and the French."

THE Maffachufets, thus harraffed and perplexed, thought it neceffary to remain no longer on the defensive only; and, in the fall, sent out three or four hundred men to a noted settlement of the Indians at Pigwacket, and another party to the ponds, Offapy, &c. upon the back of the eastern frontier; but neither party met with the enemy. Soon after, Col. March going out with another party, killed and took about a dozen of the enemy. This measure not answering expectation; to encourage set fmall parties of the English to go out and hunt the Indians, the general court promised a bounty or reward, no less than forty pounds, for every Indian set. Tyng went out in the winter and brought in five.

În

In the fpring, another project was tried. About an 1704. hundred Indians were obtained from Connecticut and posted at Berwick, in the county of York; but these Indians were not only ftrangers to the woods, and wholly ignorant of the frontiers of Canada, but by long living in a depreffed state among the English, were dispirited, enervated and unfit for this service, and nothing remarkable was effected. Had not the fix nations been reftrained, parties of them, harraffing the French fettlements, would have induced the French, for their own prefervation, to have fuffered the frontiers of New-England, as well as New-York, to have remained unmolefted.

ALL these attempts failing, a still more expensive undertaking was agreed on. It was supposed, that an army, to fweep the coast and country from Piscatagua river to Nova-Scotia, would strike terror into the Indians and bring them to reafon. Col. Church, noted for his exploits in former wars, especially in Phillip's war, was pitched upon to command in this expedition, and had orders to inlift as many as he could, both of English and Indians, who had been in fervice before. This is called. by Charlevoix, an expedition against Portroyal; but Church was instructed not to make any attempt against the fort there, and to ravage the country only. Mr. Dudley had intimations of the Queen's intention, to fend ships the next year for the reduction of that fortress. +

CHURCH had 550 foldiers under him, in 14 fmall transports, and was provided with 36 whaleboats, and convoyed by the Jersey man of war, of 48, the Gosport of 32, and the province snow of 14 guns. He stopped first at Montinicus, and fent two of his boats to Green-Island, where he took four or five French and Indians. who ferved him for pilots up Penobfcot river and to the Indian settlements there. In this river he killed and took captive

† This he, publickly, gave as his reafon. His enemies charged him with a fecret defire that the place might be preferved, for the fake of unlawful trade with the inhabitants in which he was to be a fharer.

captive divers of the enemy; among the captives were 1704. Caftine's daughter and her children, her hufband and father being gone to France, where Castine had an estate upon which he lived after he left America. The transports lay at Mount Defart. Church, having taken from them a fresh supply of provisions, went in the boats up the western Passimaguady. In the harbour, he found only a French woman and her children, upon an island, and another family upon the main, near to it. He then went up the river, where he took prifoners, Gourdon a French officer and his family, who lived in a fmall cottage. Church feeing fome of his men hovering over another hut, he called to them to know what they were doing; and upon their reply, that there were people in the houfe who would not come out, he, haftily, bid his men knock them in the head; which order they immediately observed. He was much blamed for this, after his return, and excufed himfelf but indifferently. He feared the enemy might fall upon his men, who he faw were off their guard, which put him in a paffion. He went as high up the river as the falls, taking or deftroying all in his way; miffed Chartiers, another French officer who lived or was posted there. The transports took in the forces at the harbour or mouth of the river. and carried them to Menis; the men of war standing for Port-royal. At Menis, he met with fome opposition, the enemy firing from the banks as he rowed up the river to the town; but he loft none of his men. They found plenty, not only of fresh provisions but good liquor in the town, which occasioned fuch diforders among the men, especially the Indians, that it was necessary to stave all the cafks which had any wine or fpirits in them, and it was done accordingly. Here, the lieutenant of Church's own company, Barker, (Charlevoix calls him the lieutenant general) and one man more were fhot down, which were all that were loft in the expedition. After plundering the inhabitants of all their goods, they fet the town on fire, and then embarked on board the transports. The

144

The inhabitants of a village, upon another branch of 1704: the river, supposed the English to be gone, and that they should escape; but Church went back with his boats, and, going up this branch, came unexpectedly upon the village and took what prifoners he had a mind to, and among the reft, two gentlemen who had been fent by the governor of Port-royal to bring two companies of foldiers for the defence of the place against the men of. war which appeared in the gut. Church gave the gentlemen leave to return, for the fake of fending a mellage by them to the governor, to defire him to acquaint the governor of Canada, that if he did not prevent his French and Indian's from committing fuch barbarities upon poor helples women and children, as the people of Deerfield had fuffered the last year, he would return with a thoufand Indians and let them loofe upon the frontiers of Canada to commit the like barbarities there. This the French governor must know to be a gasconade.

THE forces, after this, went up what is called the eastern river and destroyed the fettlements there, and then returned to the transports, and joined the men of war at Port-royal; where it was agreed, both by fea and land officers, that no attempt should be made. The men of war returned to Mount Defart harbour, and Church, with his transports, went up to Chignecto. The inhabitants all fled, taking with them as much of their fubstance as they could carry away; the rest they left to the mercy of the English, who laid all waste. From Chignecto they went to Mount Defart; the men of war being gone to Bolton, the transports followed ; and ftopping at Calco-bay, Church found orders lodged there, from the governor, to go up Kennebeck river as far as Norridgewock fort; but having intelligence that it was deferted, and his men having undergone much fatigue, he thought it best to return home.

THIS expedition Mr. Dudley supposes, in his speech to the affembly, ftruck great terror into the Indians, and . drove them from our frontiers; but it appears from Church's YOL. II. L 1704. Church's journal, that the poor Acadians, who had been fo often ravaged before, were the principal fufferers now, and that the Indians were little or nothing annoyed.*

An exploit of Caleb Lyman, of Northampton, deferves to be recorded. Hearing of a fmall party of Indians at Cohafs, far up Connecticut river, he went out with only five friend Indians, and, after nine or ten days travel, came upon the enemy Indians in the night, killed feven out of nine, the other two escaped, but wounded.

THIS may be placed among the favorable years; but the frontiers were not without annoyance. In April, an Indian fcout killed Edward Taylor at Lamprey river and carried his wife and child to Canada; Major Hilton with 20 men purfuing without overtaking them. They lay in wait to take Major Waldron at Cochecho, but miffed him, carrying off one of his fervants in his ftead. July 31. About four hundred, French and Indians, fell upon Lancaster, and affaulted fix garrifon houses at the fame time, which made a brave defence. They burned many

* Mr. Dudley laid himfelf open to cenfure. The professed defign was the reduction of Port-royal. When it was known that this never was the real defign, it was not an eafy thing to perfuade the people that want of orders from the queen was the true cause. A correspondence between the friends of the governor and the French in Acadie was fuspected, and it was faid the place must be preferved for the fake of trade, in the profits of which the governor was to have his fhare. "When Church went with his forces to Port-royal he could eafily have taken the fort, or done any thing in the world, but the reafon which he has often given for his not doing it is, because you abfolutely forbad him, you peremptorily forbad him. The cause you affigned was, because the matter had been laid before the queen, and the queen had fent over no orders for it, and though the queen had fent no orders we fend with a pretence to take it .---- But the flory grows now too black a ftory for me to meddle with it ____ The expedition baffled _____ The fort never fo much as demanded ----- An eternal grave flone laid on our buried captives ----- A nest of hornets provoked to fly out upon us ---- A fhame caft upon us that will never be forgotten--- I dare not, I cannot meddle with these mysteries." --- Cotton Mather's letter to Gov. Dudley, Jan. 20. 1707.

many other dwelling houfes and the meeting houfe. An 1704. alarm was foon fpread, and 300 men were in the town before night, who engaged the enemy with fome lofs on both fides. The beginning of August, a party of the enemy, lying in wait, fired upon a small fcout going from Northampton to Westfield, killed one man and took two prisoners; but more of our forces being behind, they came up, retook the two men and killed two of the Indians. Soon after, they killed lieutenant Wyler and feveral others at Groton, and at a plantation called Nasheway.

Almíbury, Haverhill and York, in the Maffachufets; and Exeter, Dover and Oyfter river, in New-Hampfhire, fuffered more or lefs, this fummer, by the enemy.

THE licentious practice, indulged among the feamen. of making depredations upon foreign nations in the east and west Indies was not wholly suppressed. John Quelch (who had been master of the brigantine Charles, and had committed many piratical acts upon the coast of India) came with feveral of his crew and landed, fome in one part of New-England, fome in another. Quelch and fix more were condemned at Bofton and executed. Some were admitted to be witneffes for the king, fome reprieved, and fome pardoned. The governor, upon this occafion, found old prejudices against him reviving. Reports were fpread, of large fums of money falling into the hands of the governor and of his fon, the queen's advocate, which however groundlefs eafily obtained credit.+ L 2 MR.

+ I have taken fo many facts and remarks, in my first volume, from a manuscript history of Mr. William Hubbard, one of the ministers of Ipswich, that I may not omit taking notice of his death, Sept. 14th, 1704, at the age of 83 years; and giving him the character, he deferved, of a man of learning, of a candid and benevolent mind, accompanied, as it generally is, with a good degree of catholicism; which, I think, was not accounted the most valuable part of his character in the age in which he lived. Among his other children, Nathanael Hubbard, Elq; shone with peculiar lustre, inherited his father's virtues, especially that amiable soft the fuperior court, too late in life for his country to reap any long benefit. 1.705. MR. Dudley's principles, in government, were too high for the Maffachulets people. He found it very difficult to maintain what appeared to him to be the just prerogative of the crown, and at the fame time to recover and preferve the effeem of the country. The government had been fo popular under the old charter, that the exercise of the powers referved to the crown by the new charter was fubmitted to with reluctance. Sir William Phips was under the influence of fome of his council and fome of the ministers of note, and suffered remains of customs under the old form, hardly confistent with the new. Mr. Stoughton, expecting every day to be fuperfeded, avoided all occasions of controversy. Lord Bellamont, indeed, in fome inftances, affumed more than he had right to. His quality and the high efteem, at first, conceived of him, prevented any controversies, during his very fhort administration. Mr. Dudley fet out, with refolution, to maintain his authority. The people were more jealous of him than they would have been of any other perfon. His negativing five of the council, the first election, was an unpopular stroke. The next year (1704) the two houses chose again two of the negatived perfons, Mr. Cooke and Mr. Sargent, and the governor again refused to approve of them. They were fuch favorites of the houfe, that the fpeaker, the houfe

> The governor, in the month of March this year, returning by water from his other government of New-Hampfhire, before the brigantine in which he had taken his paffage came up with Cape Ann, was furprized with as violent a florm as had been known and of as long continuance. There being advice brought to Bofton of his failing from Portfmouth and no further intelligence of him, it was generally apprehended that the veffel must have foundered. At length came news of his arrival in the harbour of Glocefter, having been four days at anchor on the back of the cape, expecting every hour to perifh. In a proclamation for a public thankfgiving, a few days after, notice is taken of his wonderful prefervation from fhipwreck.

Ap. 4. 1704, died at Newbury Daniel Pierce, Efq; of the council. July 20. 1704, died at Marshfield Peregrine White, aged 83 years and 8 months, the first born in Plimouth colony.

house being present, addressed his excellency and pray- 1705. ed him to reconfider his negative, and to approve of the choice. This was out of character, and the house diffionoured themfelves and had the mortification of being denied. This year, neither of the perfons were chose of the council, but one of them, Mr. Oakes, being chosen weaker of the house, upon the governor's being acquain-ted therewith, he signified to the house that he disapproved of their choice, and directed them to proceed to the choice of another, which they refused to do. It had been always the practice, for the governor to give directions to the two houses to proceed to the choice of councellors; but the dispute about the speaker prevented it at this time, the council inferted themfelves, and the question being put, whether it was in the governor's power, by virtue of the charter, to refuse the election of a speaker and direct the choice of another, they determined it was not, and immediately joined the house in electing councellors. The next day the governor de-clared, that he looked upon it to be her majesty's prerogative to allow or difallow the choice of a fpeaker, but he would not delay the affembly by difputes, when the affairs of the war were fo preffing, faving to her majesty her just rights at all times.

THE governor had it in special command to recommend three things to the affembly; the rebuilding the fort at Pemaquid; the contributing to a fort at Pifcatafort at Pemaquid; the contributing to a fort at Pifcata-qua; and the eftablifting honorable falaries for the go-vernor, lieutenant governor and judges of the courts. He had been prefling thefe things from his firft arrival, but could obtain neither of them, and as to falaries, they not only refufed fixing a falary, but allowed him only $\pounds.500$ per annum, viz. 300 of it in the fpring and 200 in the fall. To the lieutenant governor they gave $\pounds.200$ annually, as lieut. governor and captain of the caftle; and although it was more than any lieut governor hes realthough it was more than any lieut. governor has re-ceived fince, yet he found it infufficient to fupport him, and this year, by the way of Lifbon, went back to Eng-1 3 land 1705. land and never returned to the province. A meffage from the house this year to the governor, though not very elegant, shews the sense they had of these matters.

" May it pleafe your excellency, "

"I N anfwer to those parts of your excellency's "I speech, at the beginning of the selfion, referring "to her majesty's directions for the building a fort at "Pemaquid, contributing to the charge of a fort at "Piscatagua, and settling of salaries, we crave leave to offer,

"IMPRIMIS, as to the building a fort at Pemaquid, "we are humbly of opinion, that her majefty hath re-"ceived mifreprefentations concerning the neceffity and "ufefulnefs of a fort there; wherefore, this houfe, in "their humble addrefs to her majefty, dated the 27th of "March 1703, and fince twice repeated, did among "other things lay before her majefty our reafons why we "could not comply with her expectations in that affair, as

"FIRST, the little benefit faid fort was to us, not be-"ing, as we could difcern, any bridle to the enemy or "barrier to our frontiers, being out of the ufual road of "the Indians and one hundred miles diftant from any "Englifh plantation; and feemed only to make an an-"chorage for a few fifting boats, that accidentally put in "there; but the expense thereon was very great, not "lefs than twenty thousand pounds.

"SECONDLY, the charge of the faid fort will be "fuch that we cannot fee how the province can poffibly "fuftain it, having already laid out feveral large fums of "money in raifing new fortifications at Caftle Ifland, &c. "which was fet forth in the addrefs and memorial ac-"companying the fame; but we underftand we have "been fo unhappy, as that the faid addrefs and memo-"rial did not reach her majefty's hands, becaufe proceeding from this houfe alone, although the addreffing her "majefty is a privilege ever allowed to the meaneft of her "fubjects. We did therefore at our feffion in February "laft join the council, in making our humble addrefs to "her " her majesty upon the affair aforesaid, which we hope, 1705. " hath some time since arrived to her majesty's favora-" ble acceptance.

"THE fecond article is the contributing to the charge " of Piscataqua fort.— The fort in that province has " been built feveral years past, when it was not defired or " thought neceffary that this province should affist them " therein. The late reforms and reparations made of " the fame, as we have been informed, ftands that whole "province about the fum of five hundred pounds, which "doth not amount to the quota of feveral particular " towns, within this province, towards the charge of the " war one year; and all the navigation and trade of this " province, coming down Pilcataqua river, have been " charged with a confiderable duty towards the fupport of " that fort; and this province hath always afforded fuch " guards as were needful for their haling of malts, tim-" ber, &c. for her majesty's fervice, whillt the principal " benefit and advantage of the trade hath accrued to that " province. And they have never contributed any thing " to the charge of our forces, forts and garrifons, or " guard by fea, that are as great a fafety and defence to " them as to ourfelves; but the public charge of that " government has been much lefs proportionably than " the charge of this; which being confidered we hope "no affistance will be expected from us towards the " charge of the faid fort.

"THIRDLY, as to the fettling fixed falaries, the cir-"cumftances of this province, as to our ability to fupport "the government, are at times fo different, that we fear "the fettling of fixed falaries will be of no fervice to "her majefty's intereft, but may prove prejudicial to her "majefty's good fubjects here: and as it is the native "privilege and right of English fubjects, by confent of "parliament, from time to time, to raife and difpofe of fuch fums of money, as the prefent exigency of affairs calls for; which privilege we her majefty's loyal and "dutiful fubjects have hitherto lived in the enjoyment L 4 . " of, 152

1705. "of, fo we hope and pray always to enjoy the fame "under our most gracious fovereign and her fucceffors."

THE governor then proposed the feveral matters to the council.

Ift. Whether they advifed to the building a fort at Pemaquid.

- 2d. Whether they advifed to a contribution towards the charge of Piscataqua fort.
- 3d. Whether they advifed to the fettling a fixed falary for the governor and lieutenant governor for the time being.

And they gave a negative answer to each question.

IT was a great difappointment, to be able to carry neither of these points, which the ministry were very much fet upon, and which it is not improbable they were encouraged might be obtained. Had they been matters less unpopular, yet the governor's weight, at this time, would have been fcarce fufficient to have carried them through. The prejudices against him were great. The people in general looked upon him as an enemy, even to the privileges of the new charter. Sir Henry Ashurft procured an original letter, wrote by the governor's fon Paul, who was then attorney general, to Mr. Floyd, and fent it to New-England, in which were these expressions, " the government and college are disposed of here in " chimney corners and private meetings, as confidently as " can be-this country will never be worth living in for " lawyers and gentlemen, till the charter is taken away-" My father and I fometimes talk of the queen's efta-" blifhing a court of chancery in this country. I have "wrote about it to Mr. Blathwait." Copies were difperfed about the province, and the letter was foon after printed. Mr. Dudley had no rest the first feven years; befides the opposition he met with in his administration, endeavors were using, foon after his arrival, to supplant him, and his enemies prevailed upon Sir Charles Hobby, wha

(who had been knighted as fome faid for fortitude and 1703refolution at the time of the earthquake in Jamaica, others for the further confideration of £.800 fterling) to go to England and follicit for the government. He was recommended to Sir H. Afhurft, who at firft gave encouragement of fuccefs. Hobby was a gay man, a free liver and of very different behaviour from what one would have expected fhould have recommended him to the clergy of New-England; and yet, fuch is the force of party prejudice, that it prevails over religion itfelf, and fome of the most pious ministers strongly urged, in their letters, that he might be appointed their governor instead of Dudley; for which Assure the forces them.

iome of the most plous ministers itrongly urged, in their letters, that he might be appointed their governor in-stead of Dudley; for which Ashurst himfelf, after his acquaintance with Hobby, reproves and censures them. THE governor, this year, fent Mr. Livingston, William Dudley the governor's fon, and two or three other gentlemen, to Canada, for the exchange of priso-ners; who brought back with them. Mr. Williams the minister and many of the inhabitants of Deerfield with ners; who brought back with them. Mr. Williams the minifter and many of the inhabitants of Deerfield, with other captives. Vaudreuil, the French governor fent a commissioner to Boston, with proposals of neutrality, which were communicated to the general court, who did not think proper to take any steps towards effecting it. They wissed and hoped instead of a neutrality for the reduction of Canada; whereas the employment given to the French strength in Europe might well cause Vau-dreuil to fear the want of protection and dispose him to fecure himself by a neutrality. Dudley, however, kept fecure himfelf by a neutrality. Dudley, however, kept the matter in fufpence with Vaudreuil for fome time, and to the policy of his negotiation it was owing, that the people upon the frontiers enjoyed remarkable tranquility, and he values himfelf upon it in his fpeech to the general court. Charlevoix fays, "it was evident "Mr. Dudley had no intention to agree, that he was a "long time in treaty and at length declared that he "could come to no agreement without the confent of "the other English colonies; and thereupon Vaudreuil " caused hostilities to be renewed against the people of SS Nell'-

154 THE HISTORY OF

1705. "New-England. He adds, that the Canadians were "much diffatisfied with their governor, for fuffering Mr. "Dudley's fon* to remain fome time at Quebec, under "pretence of finishing the treaty, and for permitting a "New-England brigantine to go up and down the river."

ANOTHER negotiation, the next year, had a lefs defi-1706. rable effect. William Rowfe was fent in a small veffel. to Nova-Scotia, as a flag of truce. He tarried there a long time, and brought back only feventeen prifoners. Being fent a fecond time, he brought no more than feven. Much greater numbers were expected, confidering the time spent in procuring them. Upon his last return, it was charged upon him, that instead of employing his time in redeeming captives, he had been trading with the enemy and fupplying them with ammunition and other ftores of war. Rowfe, upon examination, was committed to prifon. Samuel Vetch, afterwards Col. Vetch, and governor of Nova-Scotia ; John Borland, a merchant of note in Boston, and Roger Lawson, were all apprehended and examined, and bound to answer at the superior court. There was a general clamour through the province; and it was whifpered about, that the governor was as deeply concerned as any of the reft, and fuch reports against a governor as eafily obtain credit, with many, without grounds, as with.[†] The houfe of reprefentatives took the first opportunity of fatisfying themfelves. It was fuggested there, that the superior court had no cognizance of the offence; and that admitting Nova-Scotia to be part of the province, yet it was not within the bounds of any county, and there was no authority, but the general court, that could punish it. (The carrying carrying the goods from Boston and the conspiracy there, 1796. were not confidered.) Besides, no persons could be supposed to have the public interest fo much at heart, and none fo like to fearch to the bottom. They thereupon refolved, that the fuperior court had not jurifdiction, and that a parliamentary enquiry was neceffary ; and, in imitation of the house of commons, they framed articles of accufation and impeachment against the feveral perfons apprehended, for traiteroufly fupplying the queen's enemies &c. These were figned by the speaker, and fent by a committee to the council (June 25) praying, " that fuch proceedings, examinations, trials and " judgments may be had and used upon and relating to " the faid perfons as is agreeable to law and justice." It was expected that the council should proceed, as the house of lords do upon an impeachment. No wonder the council did not immediately proceed. In trying a capital offence it behoved them to be well fatisfied of their jurisdiction. No notice is taken of the affair, in the council books, for above a fortnight. The governor fat every day in council, and he still continued the practice of directing, every day, upon what business the council should proceed. It having been reported, that the houfe, in their examination of the prifoners, enquired how far the governor was concerned; on the 9th of July they paffed a vote, vindicating themfelves from an aspersion cast upon them, as having, in the examination of the prifoners, made it the first question, whether the governor was not concerned with them in the unlawful trade; wickedly infinuating, that the houfe had fuspicion thereof, which they declared to be utterly falfe ; and they thanked his excellency for his utmost readines and forwardness, upon all occasions, in detecting and difcouraging all fuch illegal trade and traders. For this the governor gave them thanks.

^{*} Afterwards, Col. Dudley, the governor's youngelt fon, many years a member of the houfe, fpeaker, and then of the council, defervedly effeemed and conftantly employed in the most important fervices of government.

[†] Thomas Hinkley Elq; many years governor of Plimouth colony died at Barnstable aged 74.

[‡] Tam filli pravique tenax quam nuncia veri. VIRG.

BEFORE the 13th of July, the houfe were either convinced that the form of proceeding was irregular, or elfe that they could not fupport the charge of high treafon. 1706. treafon, and ordered a bill to be brought in for inflicting pains and penalties; fome moved for a bill of attainder, but the court being near rifing, a meffage was fent to the governor, defiring that the prifoners charged might be kept in close cuftody, until the next feffion, in order to further proceeding against them.

AT the next fellion, a few weeks after, the perfons charged, with two or three other, accomplices of lefs note, were brought upon trial before the whole court; the governor's fon, Paul Dudley, the queen's attorney, supporting the charge. The prisoners were heard by council in their defence. The court pronounced them all to be guilty, and then proceeded to determine their punishment. A committee of the two houses reported a fine of f.1000 on Mr. Borland and three months imprifonment; f.350 on Roger Lawfon and three months imprisonment; £.400 on Samuel Vetch and one year's imprisonment; £.1000 on William Rowse, one year's imprisonment and incapacity of fustaining any office of public truft; £.100 on John Phillips, jun. and one year's imprifonment; and f.100 on Ebenezer Coffin. The house accepted this report, with an addition to Rowse's punishment, that he fit an hour upon the gallows with a rope about his neck; but the board difagreed to and reduced all the fines except Rowfe's, and difagreed to the infamous part of his punishment. After a conference between the two houses, they fettled the penalties as follows, viz. on Vetcha fine of $f_{2.200}$; Botland $f_{2.1100}$; Lawfon £.300; Rowfe £.1200 and incapacity; Phillips £.100; and Coffin £.60: all to stand committed until the fines and cofts of profecution were paid; and fix feperate acts passed the whole court for these purposes. By a clause in the charter, the general court is impowered to impose fines, imprisonments and other punishments, and in confequence of this claufe the proceeding was thought to be regular; but the queen did not think ſo, to, and these acts were disallowed.* The governor was 1706. under a disadvantage, any obstruction to the two houses would have been improved as an evidence of the truth of the reports of his being particeps criminis; his compliance did not satisfy the people. An ill impression against perfons in authority is not easily effaced. Several perfons, fome

156

* "At the court at Kenfington the 24th of September 1707, Prefent "The Queen's most excellent Majesty,

- His Royal Highnefs Prince George, Lord Archbifhop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor, Lord Treafurer, Lord Privy Seal, Lord Steward, Earl of Sunderland, Earl of Berkeley, Lord Bifhop of London, Lord Coningfby, Mr. Bertie, Mr. Vice-Chamberlain, Lord Chief Juffice Holt, Lord Chief Juffice Trevor, Sir Charles Hedges, Mr. Vérnon.
- " WHEREAS by powers granted under the great feal of England, to the governor or commander in chief of her majefty's province of Maffachusets-bay in New-England, in America, the governor, council and affembly of that province are authorized and impowered to make, conflitute and ordain laws, flatutes and ordinances for the public peace, welfare and good government of the faid province, which laws, statutes and ordinances are to be (as near as conveniently may be) agreeable to the laws and statutes of England, and to be transmitted to her majesty for her royal approbation or difallowance of them. And whereas, in purfuance of faid powers, there have been passed in the faid province, the 7th of August, fix acts, intitled, viz. An act for the punishment of Samuel Vetch, Efq; for high misdemeanor.' An act for the punishment of John Borland, merchant, for high mifdemeanor. An act for the punishment of Roger Lawson, merchant, for high misdemeanor. An act for the punishment of William Rouse, mariner, late commander of the floop Ann, a flag of truce in the immediate fervice of her majefty's government of this province, for high mifdemeanor. An act for the punishment of John Phillips, jun. for high misdemeanor. An act for the punishment of Ebenezer Coffin, mariner, for high mifdemeanor. The faid feveral perfons above-mentioned having been accused of trading with the French and Indians at Nova-Scotia; which faid feveral acts having been perused and well confidered by the lords commillioners of trade and plantations, who by their report, this day read at the board, humbly represent their opinion, that the faid acts are not fit for her majesty's royal approbation, the crimes in the faid feveral acts mentioned being in no wife cognizable before the general affembly there, in regard they have no power to proceed against criminals, fuch proceedings being > being left to the courts of law there ; in which they may beft be carried on by the ordinary rules and known methods of justice. Her majelty taking the fame into confideration and approving of the faid report, is graciously pleased, with the advice of her privy council, hereby to declare her royal difapprobation and difallowance of the faid acts; and purfuant to her majefty's pleafure thereupon, the faid acts are hereby repealed and declared void and of no effect. And her majefty is further pleafed to order, and it is accordingly hereby ordered, that the fines imposed upon the faid Samuel Vetch, John Borland, Roger Lawfon, William Roufe, Ebenezer Coffin and John Phillips, by virtue of the afore-mentioned acts, be restored and paid back to them, they first giving fufficient furety, not exceeding the value of the respective fines, to stand a new legal trial at law, if they thould be profecuted within a year after their entering into fuch fecurity ; but in cafe they be not profecuted within the term of one year, for the crimes mentioned in the faid acts, that the faid fecurities be void. And the governor or commander in chief of her majefty's faid province of New-England, and all others whom it may concern, are to take notice of this her majesty's pleasure, and yield all due obe-Edward Southwell." dience hereunto accordingly.

1706. fome in Boston, the most in London, figned a petition, † full of invectives against the governor, which was

The power of making laws feems to be underftood, by the lords of trade, to be founded upon the commission to the governor. Perhaps a form used in allowing or difallowing acts of the royal governments, without confidering the charter, was taken up for the Massachusets.

+ " To the Queen's most excellent Majesty.

- " The humble petition of your majefty's molt loyal fubjects, inhabitants in your majefty's dominions in America or trading thereto, fheweth,
- " THAT Col. Joseph Dudley, whose arbitrary and tyrannical proceedings had exposed him to the just resentances of his countrymen before the happy revolution, hath been nevertheless fo fortunate as to obtain the government of the Massachusets colony in New-England.
- " That your petitioners are certainly informed of divers unheard of corruptions and oppreflions, and unjust and partial practices of the faid Dudley, on which they might ground many complaints against him; but they are fo fensible of the imminent danger which threatens your majesty's subjects in this and the neighbouring colonies, through his male administration, that they at this time beg leave humbly and fingly to represent to your majesty, That was prefented to the queen. Upon information of 1706. this petition, the council and house of representatives passed votes declaring their sense of the injury done the governor

- "That the faid Dudley hath countenanced a private trade and correspondence with your majesty's enemies, the French of Canada and the Indians which are in their interest, and furnishing them with ammunition and provisions.
- " That the perfons, managing the faid correspondence, pretended a voyage to Newfoundland, and being accused of high treason by the general affembly of New-England, the faid governor, by his interest and power, delayed their profecution till the ammunition he had furnished the enemy was used by them to the destruction of your majesty's good subjects, and that colony thereby put to thirty thousand pounds charge.
-  That many of the best and most prudent members of the lower house of representatives being tired with his delays, and necessitated to go home and defend their plantations from the enemy, he prevailed with those that remained, who were fearce a number to make a house, that the accusation against his agents should be changed from treason to misdemeanor; and they being convicted, he laboured to mitigate their fines; all which was fo apparent to the people of New-England, that they threatened to pull down his house.
- " That he had the confidence, neverthelefs, to apply to the general affembly for an addrefs to your majefty in his favor; but this application was received with a general murmur and contempt, and nothing done therein. And although he hath fince endeavoured to obtain your majefty's good opinion, by collecting a number of names, of perfons under his command and influence, to give him a character, your petitioners, who apprehend their wives, families and eftates to be in imminent danger, under fuch a governor, do therefore humbly pray, that faid Dudley may be fpeedily removed, and that your majefty would be pleafed to give fuch directions thereupon, as to your majefty's great wifdom fhall feem meet, and your petitioners as in duty bound fhall ever pray. Nath. Higginfon, William Partridge, Steph. Mason, John Cawley, Thom. Taylor, B. Wright, Richard Partridge, Thomas Allen, Joseph Bishop, Hugh Musson, Alex. Holmes, Michael Wilson, John Burridge, Will. Wharton, John Hincks, Thomas Newton, John Morton, J. Wright, Francis Clark, Jn^o Bulfinch.

"Read before the queen in council, at Kenfington, the 10th of June, and ordered to be heard, at Windfor, the 28th of the fame month, before her majefty in council."

Stephen Mason was appointed one of the affistants or councellors by the charter. 1706. governor by the perfons figning this petition or addrefs. Mr. Higginfon, who is at the head of the petitioners, was originally of New England and educated at Harvard college, afterwards he travelled to the Eaft-Indies, and upon his return became a merchant in London, was a member of the corporation for propagating the gofpel among the Indians of New-England &c. and had fo good intereft, that fome perfons of note by their letters, fignified that they thought the two houfes impolitic in the feverity of their expressions, which, from being their friend, might at least caufe him to become cool and indifferent. Besides

* "Upon reading the copy of an address to her majefty against his excellency, our prefent governor, figned Nath. Higginfon, &c. Voted, that we firmly believe and are of opinion, that the allegations therein, of the governor's trading or allowing a trade with her majefty's enemies the French and Indians in their interest, is a scandalous and wicked acculation; the contrary being always apparent to all her majefty's good fubjects under his government, more especially to this board, and in particular, to the general officers attending his excellency; as the fecretary and commiffary general; his negotiations and letters with the agents or meffengers from the French governor or commanders of the neighbourhood, being, from time to time, laid before the council and the affembly; when they have been fitting, and are fenfible of his indefatigable care and protection of his majesty's good subjects. Passed unanimously." Council records. " A vote passed in the house of reprefentatives and fent up, being in the words following-Upon reading the address offered to her majefty against his excellency our prefent governor, figned

- Nath. Higginfon, &c. Voted, that we firmly believe and are of opinion, that the allegations therein, of the governor's trading or allowing Vetch, Borland and Lawfon to trade with her majefty's enemies the French and the Indians, in their intereft, is a fcandalous and wicked accufation." Idem.
- The vote of council was unanimous, but Samuel Sewall, long known by his title, Judge Sewall, being in intimate friendfhip with fome, who at that time had a very bad opinion of the governor, was either influenced by them and perfuaded he had gone too far in giving his affent to this vote, or for fome other reafons, was fo diffatisfied with his conduct, that he could not be eafy, without declaring his diffatisfaction and protefling or remonstrating against his own conduct. The original paper which he fent to one of those friends is still preferved.

" Tuelday,

BESIDES this petition, a painphlet from New-England 1706. appeared, about the fame time in London, charging the governor with treafonable correspondence, and it was expected, that his enemies would prevail. Mr. Povey wrote to him from London, that he must prepare to receive the news of being superfeded; the was so Vol. II. M fortunate,

" Tuesday, November 23d, 1707.

- ⁴⁴ The reafons of my withdrawing my vote from what was paffed in council, upon Saturday November the first, relating to an address offered to her majesty, figned, Nath. Higginson, &c.
- ⁴⁴ Becaufe my motion, for leaving the confideration of it till the Monday following, was not admitted, and it was entered upon and paffed about noon, in a very flort time, being a matter of great concernment to our liege lady queen Anne, to the province, to his excellency our governor and to the council and reprefentatives. The governor's perfonal intereft was much in it, and therefore, I humbly conceive, the vote ought to have been debated and framed by the members of council, apart by themfelves, in the abfence of the governor.
-  The words firmly believe, and always apparent, were never pleafing to me; and now, I do not firmly believe that the governor did no way allow Mr. Borland and Capt. Vetch their trading voyage to her majefty's enemies the French. Qui non vetat peccare, cum possil, jubet. Not that I fusped the governor defigned to hurt the province, but to gratify grateful merchants. And I readily and thankfully acknowledge the governor's orders, for the defence of the frontiers, to be truly excellent, both respecting the fuitableness of the orders themselves and the quickness of their dispatch; and I bless God for the fuccess that has attended them.
- ⁴⁴ I have been acquainted with Mr. Nath. Higginfon thefe 40 years, and I cannot judge the offering this addrefs to her majefty to be, in him, a fcandalous and wicked accufation, until I know his inducements; and I fear this cenfure may be of ill confequence to the province in time to come, by difcouraging perfons of worth and probity, to venture in appearing for them, though the neeeffity fhould be never fo great.

Samuel Sewall."

† Sir William Afhurft writes, "London, May 10. 1707. As to Mr. Dudley, though he may meet with fome with you that will facrifice their country and conficiences to his intereft, I can affure you he will not meet with any fuch here. I doubt not, but in a little time he will be fucceeded by a more worthy perfon, and the country freed from his oppreffions." 1706. fortunate, as either to convince the queen and her minifters of his innocence, or by fome other means to lay the ftorm which had been raifed against him. The charge of fupplying the enemy with ammunition is incredible. Those perfons who were convicted, had he been an accomplice, would have discovered him. He left them to fuffer fuch punishment as the court thought proper to inflict. There was no certainty that the acts would be repealed and, after they were repealed, fome remained long in prifon; Roufe lay there 18 months, unable to find fecurity. The whole that appeared upon the trial, was an invoice of 100 m. of nails, which, at the request of the governor of Port-royal, Mr. Dudley allowed to be shipped. This was foundation enough, though in no degree criminal, to give rife to all the calumny. It is not improbable, from the remonstrance of Mr. Sewall, who was a perfon of great integrity, that connivance might be shewn of some supplies of merchandize, and that this indulgence might be abused to the fupply of powder, fhot, &c. contrary to the governor's mind. It was the general opinion, that, without thefe fupplies, the French could not have proceeded in their expedition against Newfoundland, where the harbours this year were much fpoiled, and great lofs and damage was fuftained, not by the Europeans only, but by the New-Englanders, who had then large commerce there.*

THAT

- * There were fome who fuppofed this affair to be brought, by the governor's influence, before the general court to prevent its being carried into the common law courts, where the trial would have been public, and where he could not have fet limits to the enquiry. If this was the cafe, it flews that he was no contemptible politician, for they who were the most difaffected to him, in the general court, were the most zealous for taking cognizance of it.
- "The whole affair of those grateful merchants will by degrees be brought to light, yea it is already fo, and the communications between Roxbury and the prison are discovered, will be published on the house top, and some fear 'twill be found minor fuit ipfa infamia viro. A trial of that nature by the general affembly

THAT I might finish what relates to this profecution, 1705. which was a subject of conversation for many years after, I have been led a year or two forward. I meet with no remarkable devastations by the enemy in 1705, but, in April 1706, they renewed their inroads and murdered eight or ten people, in one house, at Oyster river. There was a garrison house near, where the women of the neighbourhood had retreated, their husbands being abroad at their labour, or absent upon other occasions. This house being attacked, the women put on their husbands hats and jackets, and let their hair loose, to make the appearance of men; and firing briskly from the flankarts, faved the house and caused the enemy to retreat.

Col. Schuyler gave intelligence of 270 men having marched from the frontiers of Canada, which was an alarm to all the frontiers of New-England; for it was uncertain upon which part they would fall. They made their first appearance upon Merrimack river, about Dunstable, furprized and burned a garrifon house there, in which 20 foldiers were posted, and did other mischief. Five of their Indians, probably from the fame party, ventured down as far as Reading, about 15 or 18 miles from Boston, surprized a poor woman, who had eight children with her in a lone cottage, killed the woman and three of the children and carried away the reft; but the diffant inhabitants were alarmed time enough to overtake them in their retreat, and recovered three of the children. Chelmsford, Sudbury, Groton, Exeter, Dover and other plantations had more or lefs of their people killed or taken; fome of the latter they murdered M 2 before affembly is a thing which you had always decried with the greatest abhorrence; yet you permitted it, yet you promoted it, yet you managed it when a perfonal advantage might come out of it. The people were enfnared, the country endangered." C. Mather's letter to Dudley, Jan. 20. 1707.

A finall fum ($f_{...,600}$) was collected in the churches this year and fent for the relief of fuch of the poor inhabitants of St. Chriftes phere as had been diffrested by the enemy. 1706. before they could reach Canada, others very narrowly efcaping. A poor woman, Rebekah Taylor, after the mifery of a long travel to St. Lawrence river, near to Montreal, having offended her Indian mafter, he took off his belt and fastened one end of it round her neck and threw the other over the limb of a tree; but the weight of her body broke the limb. He was making a fecond attempt, when the noted Bomazeen came by and refcued her. In their march, their hunting failing, they were kindling a fire to roast a child of one Hannah Parsons, when a strange dog, falling in their way, supplied the child's place. A Groton foldier, Samuel Butter-field, defended himfelf bravely and killed one of their chiefs. This occasioned a dispute about the kind of punishment, some being for burning alive, others for whipping to death. It was left to the dead man's wi-dow to determine it. She told them, that, if killing the prifoner would bring her husband to life, she cared not what kind of death he fuffered, but, if not, fhe defired to have him for a flave, and her requeft was granted.

IT appears, by the French accounts, that the Indians themfelves were tired of the war, and with great difficulty were prevailed upon to continue it. To encourage them, a noted chief, dreaded by the English upon the frontiers, from the report of his cruelties, Nescambouit, was about this time fent by M.Vaudreuil to France, to receive his reward from the king himfelf. Upon his appearance at court, he held out his arm and bragged, that with that arm he had flain 150 of his majesties enemies. The king was fo much pleased, that, as was then reported, he knighted him and settled a pension of eight livres per day for life.

CHARLEVOIX attributes the diffrefs of the New-Englanders to their refufal of a neutrality, "the Abe-"nakis continued to lay New-England defolate; Mr. "Dudley either being unwilling or afraid to accept the "neutrality which had been proposed for that province. "He was much affected with the cries of the inhabitants, "who were no longer able to improve their lands, which "were " were continually ravaged by the Indians, and he thought 1707. " the only way to put an end to this diftrefs was to ex-" tirpate the French from Acadie."

DUDLEY depended upon the French being extirpated from Canada, as well as Acadie, otherwife he would have been glad of a neutrality, if he could have had the queen's leave to agree to it. It was known, that an armament was intended, this year, from England against the French, either in Canada or Acadie, or both. Troops were actually deftined for this fervice, and general Maccartney was to have commanded; but the battle of Almanza, in Spain, made fuch an alteration in affairs, that the troops could not be fpared, and the expedition was laid afide. The Maffachufets would have been ready with the forces expected from them; and it was determined, early in the fpring, that fuch a number of men should be raised, as might be sufficient for the reduction of Acadie, although no affistance came from England. At least, the other parts of Nova-Scotia might be ravaged; but for Port-royal, it was doubted whether it could be fubdued : However, the fortrefs there was " to be infulted, if by a council of war upon the place it fhould be found practicable."

One thousand men, it was refolved should be raifed. in the Maffachufets, and propofals were made to New-Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode-Island to join. Connecticut declined. The other two governments affisted, and Mr. Dudley, in his speech to the affembly, acknowledges that he had received a very honorable affiftance from Rhode-Island, and a proper force from New-Hampshire. The naval force was barely sufficient for convoy, there being only the Deptford man of war, Capt. Stukeley, and the province galley, Capt. Southack. The command of the land forces was given to Col. March, who had behaved well at Cafco fort and upon fome other occasions; but had never been tried in any fervice where other talents, befides meer natural bravery, were necessary. The fleet failed, from Boston, the 13th of M 3 May,

1707. May, and arrived, the 26th, at Port-royal. March immediately landed, with 700 men, on the harbour fide; * Col. Appleton, with 300 men, landing on the other fide, The next day, as March with his men were advancing towards the fort, they discovered about 200 of the enemy, with Subercas, the governor, at their head, near the top of a hill. A fhort skirmish + ensued, and Subercas had his horfe killed under him; but the numbers being very unequal, the French foon retreated, leaving two of their number killed, and having wounded three of the English. On the 29th, Appleton and his 300 men were attacked by a body of Indians, joined by about 60 Canadians who had arrived, just before, to man a privateer which lay in the harbour. They killed two of the English, and then retreated. All the inhabitants forfook their houfes and retired to the fort, which was well garrifoned. They made a continual fire, with cannon and mortars, upon the English camp; but wanted skilful engineers; very few of their shells falling to as to be any annoyance. The Indians, upon every quarter skulking about, shot down every man, who ventured without the camp. It is evident that our forces were very diffident of fuccefs, from their first landing; and the army would in a great measure have faved their reputation, if, in conformity to the vote of the court for engaging in the expedition, they had, at a council of war, determined not to attack the fort, and proceeded to ravage the country. Some intelligence, which they had received of the disposition of great part of the garrison to revolt, feems to have encouraged them, more than any hopes they had of being able to reduce the place, by a regular fiege or fudden attack. The 13th of May, at a council of war, it was agreed, " that the enemy's well disciplined garrison in a strong fort, was more than

- * Charlevoix fays, they had 24 veffels, the largest of 50 guns; and that they landed 1500 men on the fide where the fort was, and 500 on the other fide.
- 1 Un combat vif. Charlevoix.

166

than a match for our raw undifciplined army." They 1707. opened their trenches, notwithstanding, and, in three or four days, they had made fome breaches, and determined upon a general affault; but, advancing towards the fort and finding no deferters come over, they altered their minds, and, the 6th or 7th of June, the whole ar. my were re-embarked. Col. Redknap (the engineer) and Col. Appleton went to Bolton for further orders; the rest of the army to Casco-bay.* A great clamour was raifed at Boston against March and Wainwright, and letters were fent them from thence, some anonymous, vilifying them as cowards and deferving the gallows. They charged Appleton with being the first for decamping, but own it would have been to no good purpose to have remained; as there was no profpect of carrying the fort. Captain Stukeley, of the Deptford, gave an account of the strength of the place, and added, that he hoped the fighting men at Boston, who had wrote fo many fcurrilous, vilifying letters, without names, would be fatisfied, that regular, well fortified and well defended, forts are not to be taken by raw men; and he was very certain, that 1500 of the best of them would come back again as the army had done.

MR. Dudley, notwithstanding the diffidence expressed, thought of nothing fhort of the reduction of Port-royal, from the beginning; and after fo great expence, in raifing fuch an armed force, and fo little diminution of it, he was loth to give over the defign, and fent immediate orders for the forces to remain where they were, whilft he confidered of further measures. March was

M 4

" The ignorance, idleness and flothfulness of fome of our officers, make things go on not fo fmooth as defired ; and by the difobedience of private foldiers, we loft two men this day in our very fight, fcalped and mangled by the Indians. These and some other difficulties caused the refult of a council of war, this day affembled, which I herewith fend. The commander in chief will make a general ravage of the country and fea coast, which will be all we shall do at this time." William Dudley to Gov. Dudley, 31 May 1707.

1707. was beloved by the foldiers ; befides, his courage was not fuspected, altho' his capacity for a general was called in question. It was not, therefore, thought proper to recall him; to appoint a general officer over him, would be as exceptionable. An expedient was pitched upon, fuggested perhaps by the practice of the Dutch. Three gentlemen of the council were to be fent to the army, with as full powers to superintend and direct the proceedings as the governor himfelf would have had if present in person. Col. Hutchinson, Col. Townsend and Mr. Leverett were pitched upon for this purpofe. They embarked the middle of July in Capt. Gerrifh, with about 100 recruits and feveral deferters, who had left the army at Cafco.* Upon their arrival, they found parties formed, among officers and men, no fubordination, a coldness in the officers, and an aversion in the privates, to a return to the ground they had left. But, it feems, the governor had made a point of it, that, at all events, the army fhould go back.+

I find a round robin among Col. Hutchinfon's papers, figned by a great number, peremptorily refufing to go to Port-royal; but the ringleaders being difcovered and fecured, whilft their fentence was under confideration, the reft humbled themfelves and fubmitted, and the fhips of war and transports failed. They flopped at Pallimaquadi, about the 7th of August. Marsh's spirits were

- They were not chosen by the affembly, but to keep the power, as far as he could, in his own hands and at the fame time obtain a grant for or acquiescence in the expence, the governor, in this and other instances, pitched upon such persons as he knew would be acceptable. Hutchinson and Townsend were popular men, and Leverett had been speaker of the house.
- We have fo little prospect of any fervice from the marine, after we have taken the ground, that, for the keeping it, we must have dependence upon our other force, being only 743 officers and foldiers, fick and well; and they are fo extremely dispirited, that we cannot look upon them equal to 300 effective men. However, we have your excellency's commands, which we yield an absolute obedience to and shall proceed."

Col. Hutchinfon's let. to Gov. Dudley, Cafco 2616 July 1707.

were broke and his health affected, fo that, when the 1707. disposition was making for landing the army, he declared himself incapable of acting and the command was given to Wainwright, the next officer. The toth of August they croffed over to Port-royal where they landed; but on the opposite fide to the fort and, in every respect, in a much worfe condition than before. The nights were growing cold, the men fickening and the army, in general, incapable of suftaining the fatigues of a fiege: Wainwright's letter to the Commissioners Angust 14th shews the state they were in. " Our not recovering "the intended ground on the opposite fide is a mighty " advantage to the enemy, in that they have opportunity, " and are improving it, for cafting up trenches in the " very place where we defigned to land, and draw up " our small forces. Yesterday, the French, about eight " of the clock forenoon, on the fort point, with a fmall " party of St. John's Indians, began to fire on our river " guards and fo continued until about three afternoon : " Then appeared about one hundred Indians and French, " upon the fame ground, who kept continually firing " at us until dark. Several were fhot through their " cloaths, and one Indian through the thigh. About " four in the afternoon, I fuffered a number of men, " about 40 or 50, to go down to the bank of the river, " to cut thatch to cover their tents. All returned well, " except nine of Capt. Dimmock's men, who were led " away by one Mansfield, a mad fellow, to the next " plantation to get cabbages in a garden, without the " leave and against the will of his officer. They were " no fooner at their plunder, but they were furrounded " by, at least one hundred French and Indians, who in a " few minutes killed every one of them, their bodies " being mangled in a frightful manner. Our people " buried them, and fired twice upon the enemy; on which " they were feen to run towards our out guards next " the woods, which we immediately ftrengthened. " Indeed, the French have reduced us to the fame flate to

169

" to which we reduced them, at our last being at Port-1707. " royal; furrounded with enemies and judging it unfafe " to proceed on any fervice without a company of at least "one hundred men. I shall now give you a short " account of the state of our people, truly, as delivered "me by Doctor Ellis. There is a confiderable number " of them visited with violent fluxes, and although we " have things proper to give them, yet dare not do it ; "others taken with mighty fwellings in their throats ; " others filled with terror at the confideration of a fatal " event of the expedition, concluding that, in a fhort " time, there will not be well enough to carry off the fick. "I am distressed to know which way to keep the " Indians steady to the fervice. 'They protest they will " draw off, whatever becomes of them. It is truly " aftonishing, to behold the miserable posture and temper " that most of the army are in, besides the smallness of " our number, to be attacked by the enemy which we " expect every moment.

" I am much difordered in my health by a great cold. " I fhall not ufe it as an argument to be drawn off my " felf, but, as you are mafters of the affair, lay before " you the true flate of the army which indeed is very " deplorable : I fhould much rejoice to fee fome of you " here, that you might be proper judges of it.

"If we had the transports with us, it would be im-"poffible, without a miracle, to recover the ground on "the other fide, and I believe the French have addi-"tional ftrength every day. In fine, most of the forces "are in a diftreffed ftate, fome in body and fome in "mind, and the longer they are kept here on the cold "ground the longer it will grow upon them, and, I fear, "the further we proceed the worfe the event. God "help us."

CAPTAIN Stukeley had given encouragement, that he would lead on an hundred of his own men; but the bad state of affairs caused him to change his mind, and he had drawn them off before the date of this letter.

THE

THE army continued ashore until the 20th, when 1707. they re-embarked. The enemy then attacked them. Our accounts fay, that we killed and wounded many of the enemy and finally put them to flight. The French fay, that both retreated by turns. Each feem to have been glad to be rid of the other. About 16 were killed in the whole expedition, and as many wounded. The French, finding fo few dead bodies, supposed we threw them into the fea.

WHEN the forces returned, Mr. Dudley put the best face upon their ill fuccefs. In his fpeech to the affembly he fays, " though we have not obtained all that we " defired against the enemy, yet we are to acknowledge " the favor of God in preferving our forces in the expe-" dition, and prospering them so far as the destruction of " the French fettlements and estates, in and about Port-" royal, to a great value; which must needs distress the " enemy to a very great degree."

A court martial was judged neceffary, and ordered, but never met. The act of the province, for conftituting courts martial, made fo many officers requifite, that it was found impracticable to hold one. + This must be owing to the great number of perfons charged, the remainder being infufficient to try them.

WHILST the forces were employed against the French, the Indians kept harraffing our frontiers. Oyfter river, Exeter, Kingston and Dover in New-Hampshire government, and Berwick, York, Wells, Winter-harbour, Cafco, and even the inland town of Marlborough, in the Maffachusets, fustained loss. The winter following passed without molestation.* Early in the fpring, Mr. Little- 1708. field, the lieutenant of Wells, travelling to York, was taken and carried to Canada. For feveral months after, the + Governor's fpeech.

* November 27. 1707, died John Winthrop, Elq; governor of Connecticut and was buried at Bolton, December 4th. The bones of John Winthrop the first governor of Massachusets, his fon and grand fon two governors of Connecticut, reft in the same tomb in the first or oldest burying ground.

1708. the enemy feem'd to have forfaken the frontiers. It afterwards appeared, that they were collecting their forces in Canada for some important stroke.

SCHUYLER had fuch influence over the French Mohawks, who kept a constant trade with Albany, that they inclined to a more general peace with the English than meerly those of New-York. The French discovered their indifference, and, to keep them engaged, a grand council was called at Montreal, the beginning of this year, and an expedition was agreed upon, in which were to be employed the principal Indians of every tribe in Canada, the Abenakis Indians, and one hundred felect French Canadians, and a number of volunteers, feveral of whom were officers in the French troops. They were to make in the whole 400 men.

DE Chaillons, and Hertel de Rouville (he who facked Deerfield) commanded the French, and La Perriere the Indians. To give the lefs alarm to the English, the French party, with the Algonquin and St. Francois and Huron Indians, marched by the way of the river St. Francois : La Perriere and the French Mohawks went by lake Champlain : They were to rendezvous at lake Nikifipique, and there the Norridgewock, Penobscot and other eastern Indians were to join them. They all began their march the 16th July, but the Hurons gave out and returned, before they arrived at St. Francois river. One of them had killed his companion, by accident, which they thought an ill omen and that the expedition would prove unfortunate. The Mohawks alfo pretended, that some of their number were taken sick of an infectious distemper, which would be communicated to the rest, and they returned. Vaudreuil, when he heard these accounts, fent orders to his French officers, that, although the Algonquin and St. Francois Indians fhould leave them alfo, yet they fhould go on, and fall upon fome of our scattered settlements. When the Indians are tired of murdering poor helplefs women and children, Vaudreuil employs his French officers to do it. Those Indiana

Indians, however, did not leave them, and, being about 1708. 200 in all, they marched between four and five hundred miles through the woods to Nikipifique, where they found none of the eaftern Indians. This was a happy difappointment for the English. Had the whole proposed number rendezvoused there, Newbury, or perhaps Portfmouth, might have been furprized and destroyed; but, the army being thus reduced, Haverhill, a fmall but compact village was pitched upon. Intelligence had been carried to Boston, that an army of 800 men was intended for some part of the frontiers, but it was uncertain which. Guards were fent to Haverhill, as well as other places; but they were posted in the most exposed parts of the town and the enemy avoided them, or paffed undifcovered, and, on the 29th of August, about break of day, furprized the body of the town, adjoining to Merrimack river, where were 20 or 30 houses together, feve-ral of which they burned, and attempted to burn the meeting-houfe, but failed. The rest of the houses they ransacked and plundered. Mr. Rolfe the minister; Wainwright the captain of the town, and 30 or 40 more, the French fay above 100, were killed, and many taken prisoners. Mr. Rolfe's maid jumped out of bed, upon the alarm, and ran with his two daughters of 6 or 8 years old into the cellar, and covered them with two large tubs, which the Indians neglected to turn over and they were both preferved.* Three very good officers were at that time in the town, Major Turner, ‡ Capt. Price and Capt. Gardner, all of Salem, but most of their men were posted at a distance, and, before any fufficient number could be collected, the mifchief was done. The enemy, however, was purfued, overtaken and attacked, just as they were entring the woods. The French reported, when they got back, that they faced about, and that Afterwards Col. Turner, a principal merchant of Salem, and many years, a member of the council.

^{*} One was, afterwards, wife to the late Col. Hatch of Dorchefter, and is lately deceafed; the other ftill living, the wife of the Rev. Mr Checkley, fen. of Bofton.

1708. that our people, being aftonished, were all killed or taken, except 10 or 12, who escaped. The truth is, that there was a brush, which lasted about an hour, and that the enemy then took to the woods, except nine who were left dead, among whom was Rouville's brother, and another officer. Many of the prisoners were also recovered. The governor, in his speech to the affembly fays, "we might have done more against them if we had fol-"lowed their tracks."

THE return of the French Mohawks might be owing to Schuyler's negotiations with them, which, it may be faid, he would have had no opportunity for, if it had not been for the neutrality between them and Albany; but, on the other hand, not only those Indians, at other times, but even the Penobscots and Norridgewocks were enabled, by this neutrality, to make their inroads upon us. The governor of Port-royal, in a letter to the count de Pontchartrain, fays, " that the Michmacks were quite " naked and the Kenebeckanst and Penobfcots would have " been fo too, if they had not carried on a trade with the "Indians of Hudson's river or, rather, by their means, " with the English, who allowed a crown a pound for-" bever, and fold their goods very reafonably." Charlevoix justly remarks upon it, " thus our own enemies " relieved our most faithful allies, when they were in " neceffity, and whilft they were every day hazarding " their lives in our fervice." The Maffachufets general court alfo, this year, in an addrefs to the queen, fay, " A letter from M. Vaudreuil, governor of Canada, to " the late governor of Port-royal was fometime fince hap-" pily intercepted, and came to our governor's hands ; " wherein he writes thus, namely, that he endeavors to " keep all quiet on the fide of Orange or Albany, hay-" ing command from the king his mafter not to have " any quarrel with your majesty's subjects on that side, " or with the Mohawks, which he hath ftrictly observed. "And they are in a profound peace, having met with " little or no lofs on the land fide, either in men or " effates this war." THE ‡ Norridgewocks,

THE enemy were fatisfied with their fuccefs at Haver- 1708. hill, for this feafon, and, except now and then a ftraggling Indian, none of them appeared again upon the frontiers this fummer.

THE party against the governor still purfued their schemes in England for his removal. Ashurst engaged a committee of the kirk of Scotland, who came up to London to fettle fome affairs with the queen's council, to use their interest, that Dudley might be removed and a new governor appointed; and he was very fanguine, that this would do the business, and that Hobby would be appointed, though not fuch a perfon as he could wifh; but the earth, he fays, must help the woman. Which, too often means no more than we must do evil that good may come of it. In the province, the governor's interest was strengthening. Some of the old senators, who had been difaffected to him, were left out of the council. Oakes, whom he had negatived as fpeaker, and one other member for Bolton loft their election, and John Clark and Thomas Hutchinfon, two young gentlemen of the town, who were under no prejudice against him, came into the house in their stead; and, although, this year Mr. Cooke was again chofe one of the council, it was the last effort. The governor perfifted in negativing him, and at the fame time negatived Nathaniel Paine of Briftol; but he had fo accustomed them to negatives, that they gave lefs offence than they would have done after long difuse.

THE principal fubject of the affembly's addrefs, which we have just before mentioned, to the queen, was the reduction of Canada and Acadie by an armament from England, to be affisted by forces raifed in the colonies. Vetch, who the last year was charged as a traitor, this year appeared, before the queen and her ministers, folliciting in behalf of the colonies; being able to give a full information of the condition of the french in America.*

EARLY

August 21st, this year, died Ezekiel Cheever, venerable not meerly for his great age, 94, but for having been the schoolmaster of most of the principal gentlemen in Boston who were then 1709. EARLY in the spring, Mr. Dudley was advised, by letters from the Earl of Sunderland, that the queen had determined upon an expedition, and Vetch, made a colonel, came over with instructions to make the neceffary preparations. The plan was extensive. The French were to be fubdued, not only in Canada and Acadie, but in Newfoundland alfo. A fquadron of ships were to be at Boston by the middle of May. Five regiments of regular troops were to be fent from England, to be joined by 1200 men, to be raifed in Maffachufets and Rhode-Island, and the governments were to provide transports, flat bottomed boats, pilots and three months provisions for their own troop's. With this force, Quebec was to be attacked; at the fame time 1500 men, proposed to be raifed in the governments fouth of Rhode-Island, which were to march by the way of the lake, were to attack Montreal. The men, affigned to the Massachusets to raise, were ready by the 20th of May ; + and Vetch gave a certificate under his hand, that all the governments concerned had chearfully and punctually complied with the orders given, except Penfylvania!* It was left to Lord Lovelace, governor of New-York, to appoint the general officer for the 1500 men, but, by his death, the power devolved upon Mr. Ingoldfby, the lieutenant governor; and Nicholfon who had > then upon the stage. He is not the only master who kept his lamp longer lighted than otherwise it would have been, by a supply of oil from his scholars.

- John Higginfon, the first minister of Salem, who came over with his father in 1629 at the age of 14 or 15, lived until the 9th of December 1708, having alfo been minister of the fame church from the year 1660. His early days he fpent in Connecticut colony, and in 1641 was chaplain to Mr. Fenwick and Lady Botcler, at the fort at Saybrook.
- Tuesday the 14th December was remarked as the coldest day ever known in the country from its first settlement.
- † The transports and 900 troops, raifed by the Maffachusets, were kept in pay from the 20th of May to the beginning of November.
- * Penfylvania, at that time, principally confifted of the people called quakers, and we are to impute their backwardness to a religious principle or persuasion, and not to difaffection.

had been lieut. governor of New-York under Andros 1709. and afterwards lieutenant governor of Virginia and Maryland, being then in America, was pitched upon as a proper perfon, and marched with the forces under his command as far as Wood-creek, there to wait until the arrival of the fleet at Boston, that the attack on both places might be made at one time. The transports and troops lay waiting at Boston from May to September, every day expecting the fleet. No intelligence coming from England ; Vetch, being fenfible it was too late to go to Canada, proposed a meeting, at New-London, of the governors of the feveral colonies, to confider in what other way the forces raifed fhould be employed against the enemy, that the expense might not be wholly loft : but Nicholfon, unexpectedly, returned with his men fiom Wood-creek, and he and Vetch and Colonel Moody met some of the governors at Rhode-Island. Two or three days before the congress (October 11th) a fhip arrived at Boston from England, with advice that the forces intended for America were ordered to Portugal; and with directions to confult whether the forces raised in America might not be employed against Portroyal, the flips of war of which there were feveral then at Bolton to be aiding and affifting.+ There was no great honor or profit to be expected, by the captains of the men of war, if the expedition should succeed, nothing more being required of them, than to ferve as convoy to the transports, and cover to the forces at their landing; therefore two of the frigates, whole station was New-York, failed immediately from Boston, without taking leave of any body; and the commanders of the VOL. II. reft. N

† It is faid in one of the articles of Lord Oxford's impeachment, that an expedition against Canada, having been frequently deliberated upon and maturely confidered in a committee of council, was laid as dangerous and impracticable; but there can be no doubt that an expedition was fully determined upon this year, and was laid aside upon an unexpected change of affairs in Europe. 1709. reft, Mathews, afterwards Admiral Mathews, who was then commander of the flation fhip at Bofton, only excepted, peremptorily refufed. Affoon as this was known to the two houfes, the court being fitting, they defired the governor to difcharge the transports and difband the men, it not being fafe to proceed without convoy. This was a heavy charge upon the province, without any good effect. It was indeed late in the year for the attempt against Port-royal, but then the prospect of furprizing the enemy was fo much the greater, and if it had happened otherwise and the forces had returned without fubduing the place, it would have caused but little increase of the expence.

WHILST Nicholfon lay at Wood-creek, the governor of Canada, who had intelligence of all his motions, fent out an army of 1500 French and Indians, who left Montreal the 28th July N. S. and the three first days advanced 40 leagues towards the English camp; but upon a report that they were 5000 strong, and upon the march, to meet the French, and there being discord at the fame time, among the French officers, it was thought best to return to their advanced posts, and wait to receive the English there. Had they proceeded, they were equal to the English, better acquainted with the country, would have come unexpected, and the event would at least have been doubtful for us.

CHARLEVOIX gives an inftance of the treachery of the Indians of the fix nations, and of their intention to deftroy the whole Englifh army. Speaking of father Mareuil, who had been a prifoner at Albany, he fays, "This miffionary having been exchanged for a nephew "of the principal officer at Albany, we learned from him " all the circumftances of that affair and to what New "France owed her deliverance from the greateft danger " to which fhe had been at any time exposed from that " quarter." Then having mentioned a grand council of the Indians, held at Onondago, where all their general meetings upon important matters were held, he goes on, " The

in the

" The Onondago, one of the old men of that nation, 1709; "who was the speaker, asked whether it was out of "their minds that they were situated between two " potent people, either of which were capable of totally " extirpating them, and that it would be the interest of " either to do it, affoon as they fhould have no further " occasion for them. It behoved them therefore to be " very careful, that they did not lofe their importance, " which they would do, unless each of those people " were prevented from destroying the other. This " harangue made great impression upon the assembly, " and it was refolved, upon this occasion, to continue the " political conduct which they had hitherto obferved. "Accordingly, the Iroquois, when they had joined the "English army, and found, as they imagined, that "it would be strong enough to take Mont-real, em-" ployed their whole attention in contriving the de-" struction of it; and this was the way they went to " work. The army being encamped upon the banks of " a small river,* the Indians, who spent most of their " time in hunting, threw the fkins of all the creatures, " which they flead, into the river, a little above the camp, " which foon corrupted the water. The English never " fuspected this treachery and continued to drink the " water; but it caufed fuch a mortality among them, " that father de Mareuil and the two officers, who went " to fetch him from Albany to Canada, judged, by the " graves, that there must have been at least a thousand " buried there."

NICHOLSON certainly decamped fooner than was expected, which caufed fome diffatisfaction. The army was in a bad ftate. I have a letter dated New-York, November 4th 1709, which fays, that many of the foldiers, who were at the lake, died as if they had been poifoned.

ALTHOUGH the French were in conftant expectation of being attacked themfelves, yet it did not take them

N 2

* Wood-creek,

off

1709. off from employing fome of their ftrength, this fummer, against the New-England frontiers. In April, a man was taken prifoner at Deerfield. In May, feveral men were furprized and taken, as they were passing to a faw mill in Exeter; and in June, one of the Rouvilles, with 180 French and Indians, made another attempt upon Deerfield, to destroy or carry away prisoners the poor people who, but a little while before, had returned from their captivity; but the enemy was discovered at a distance and beat off, the inhabitants bravely defending themselves. The town of Brooksield, in the west, and Wells, in the east, foon after lost fome of their people, by fmall parties of Indians.*

NICHOLSON went to England, in the fall, to follicit 1710. a force against Canada the next year, and an expedition feems to have been again refolved upon. Advice was received, in New-England, that, in July, Lord Shannon, with a fleet destined for that fervice, lay under orders for failing, but that it was feared the westerly winds would detain him until it was too late. Port-royal, which did not require fo great force and which might be attempted late in the year, was afterwards made the only object. The Dragon and Falmouth, with a bomb fhip and a tender, and two or three transports, left England in the fpring, and Nicholfon was on board one of them. They arrived at Boston, July the 15th, and feem to have lain waiting there for orders, or until it fhould be made certain whether they were to be joined by any further force from England. + On the 18th of September

* Feb. 24th 1709, Joseph Hammond of the council died at Kittery.

Thefe fhips being feen in the bay and no certainty of any fleet intended from England, the ufual fignal for an alarm was given at the caffle, and the militia in Bofton was kept under arms until evening, when news came that they were English fhips.

The like happened upon the arrival of a fleet of fmall merchant veffels from Saltertudas a year or two after, but the conflernation was greater and more extensive. The number of fhips feen off Plimouth, was reported to be very great, and fome of them.

180

September a fleet failed from Nantasket for Port-royal, 1710. confisting of three fourth rates, viz. the Dragon, commo-dore Martin; the Chester, 1 Matthews; the Falmouth; Riddle; two fifth rates, the Loestaffe, Gordon, and the Feversham, Paston, together with the Star bomb, Roch-fort, and the province galley, Southack, with fourteen transports in the pay of the Massachusets, five of Connecticut, two of New-Hampshire and three of Rhode-Island. Thefe, with the tender and transports from England, made 36 fail. There was a regiment of marines, commanded by Col. Redding, and four regiments raifed in New-England, two commanded by Sir Charles Hobby and Col. Tailer of Maffachufets-bay, one by Col. Whiting of Connecticut, and one by Col. Walton of New-Hampshre. Nicholfon was general and Vetch adjutant-general. One transport, Capt. Taye, ran afhore at the mouth of the river and was loft, and 26 men were drowned, the rest of the fleet arrived safe at Port-royal, the 24th of September. The forces were landed without any opposition. Subercase, the governor, had only 260 men, and most of them he was afraid to trust out of the fort, left they should defert to the English. As the army was marching up to the fort, feveral men were killed by the inhabitants, who fired from their houses and from behind their fences and made their escape; and, for three or four days, whilst the neceffary preparations were making by the English, the French threw shells and shot from the fort, and the bomb-fhip, on the other hand, plied the French with her shells. It was commonly faid, after the return of the forces to Boston, that early intimation was given to the English that they would meet with no great difficulty, N 2 2 them, it being war time, were fitted with mizen-top-gallant, fails and fpreetfail-topfails, and other unufual fails for merchant men, and no doubt was made of their being capital French men of war. The country were coming in, when one of the fmall veffels arrived and informed of the reft.

t The Chefter failed a fhort time before the reft as a cruizer, and joined them on the passage.

1710. a decent pretence for a furrender was all that was desired. On the 29th, the governor sent out a flag of truce, praying leave for fome of his ladies, who were afraid of the bombs, to be sheltered in the English camp. The officer, not observing the rules of war, was put under arrest, and an English officer sent to the fort to acquaint the governor with the reasons of it. The first of October, the two engineers, Forbes and Redknap, had three batteries open, two mortars and twenty four cohorn mortars ready, within 100 yards of the fort, and began their firing, the French firing their flot and throwing shells at the same time. The same day, Col. Tailer and Capt. Abercrombie were fent, with a fummons to furrender, and, in confequence thereof a ceffation of arms was agreed upon and the terms of the capitulation were foon fettled, and the next day the following articles figned, > "ARTICLES of capitulation agreed upon for the furrender of the fort at Port-royal, &c. betwixt Francis Nicholfon, Elq; general and commander in chief of all the forces of her facred majefty Anne queen of Great-Britain, &c. and Monfieur Subercafe, governor, &c. for his most christian majefty.

THAT the garrifon fhall march out with their arms and baggage, drums beating and colours flying.
THAT there fhall be a fufficient number of fhips and provisions to transport the faid garrifon to Rochel or Rochfort, by the fhortest paffage, when they fhall be furnished with paffports for their return.

3. THAT I may take out fix guns and two mortars, fuch as I shall think fit.

4. THAT the officers fhall carry out all their effects, of what fort foever, except they do agree to the felling them; the payment of which to be upon good faith.

5. THAT the inhabitants, within cannon shot of Portroyal, shall remain upon their estates, with their corn, cattle and furniture during two years, in case they are not desirous defirous to go before, they taking the oaths of allegiance 1710.

and fidelity to her facred majesty of Great-Britain.
6. THAT a vessel be provided for the privateers belonging to the islands in America, for their transportation thither. 7. THAT those, that are defirous to go for Placentia in Newfoundland, shall have leave by the nearest passage.

8. THAT the Canadians, or those that are defirous to go there, may, for during the space of one year.

9. THAT effects, ornaments and utenfils of the chappel and hofpital shall be delivered to the Almoner.

10. I promife to deliver the fort of Port-royal into the hands of Francis Nicholfon Efq; for the queen of Great Britain, within three days after the ratification of this prefent treaty, with all the effects belonging to the king, as guns, mortars, bombs, ball, powder and all other fmall arms.

11. I will discover, upon my faith, all the mines, fugaffes and cafemates.

12. ALL the articles of this prefent treaty shall be executed upon good faith, without difficulty, and figned by each other at her majefty of Great-Britain's camp before Port-royal fort, this fecond day of October; in the ninth year of her majefty's reign, Annoque Domini 1710.

Francis Nicholfon. Subercafe.

MEMORANDUM. The General declared, that within cannon shot of Port-royal, in the fifth article abovefaid, is to be understood three English miles round the fort, to be Annapolis-royal and the inhabitants within three miles to have the benefit of that article. Which perfons, male and female, comprehended in the faid article, according to a lift of their names given in to the general by M. Allein, amounts to 481 perfons."

THE English lost 14 or 15 men in the expedition, besides the 26 drowned when the transport was lost. The fort had been neglected and was in a very bad state. Subercafe told the general " he was very forry for the " king N A 1710. "king his mafter, in losing fuch a ftrong fort and the "territories adjoining." This was the compliment to Nicholfon, but it was in no condition to ftand a fiege. Charlevoix fays, Subercafe's character fuffered a great fhock. He mentions feveral actions which our accounts take no notice of—" The troops being landed and no-"thing to oppofe their march, went on towards the fort; "but when they came within reach of the cannon, the "governor caufed fo finart a firing as put them to a "ftand, killed a great many of their men, &c." Again, "The eighth (N. S.) M. Subercafe, having obferved the "fpot where the enemy were about to erect their bat-"teries, made fo lucky a fire that Mr. Nicholfon, after "having lost a great many men, was obliged to retreat."

THE general having left a fufficient garrifon under the command of Col. Vetch, who was defined, in cafe of fuccefs, to the government of the country, returned with the fleet and army to Boston, arriving there the 26th of October.

WHILST the forces were at Porteroyal, it was thought proper, at a council of war, to fend Caffine, who I fuppofe was in the fort, and Major Livingstone to Canada, through the country, with letters to M. Vaudreuil, acquainting him that the country of Acadie was fubdued and that all the inhabitants, except fuch as were within cannon fhot of the fort, were prisoners at discretion; and as the council had been informed that he had often fent out his barbarous Indians to murder the poor innocent women and children upon the frontiers of New-England, if he continued that practice they would caufe the fame execution upon the people of Acadie or Nova-Scotia, now abfolutely in their power;* but they abhorred fuch barbarities, and hoped he would give them no further occasion to copy after him, but rather would releafe and fend home fuch prifoners as had been taken by the

* This would have been rather a harder cafe upon the poor Acadians than any they have ever been obliged to fubmit to. the Indians. After a most fatiguing hazardous journey,* 1710. having three Indians for their guides, they arrived at Quebec. The governor fent his answer to the message by two partizans, Rouville and Dupuis, by land through Albany, that they might be acquainted with the country and more fit to be employed in making war upon any future occasion. + The fum of the answer was, that Nicholfon had been fo well taught the laws of war as to know that they did not admit of reprifals upon fuch inhabitants as had furrendered upon an express promile of being well treated. That he, Vaudreuil, never knew the French charged with inhumanity, and he was not afraid to appeal to the English prisoners, within his government, against fuch a charge; they had often been redeemed from the Indians, at great expence, and, out of pure charity; indeed, the Indians themfelves, ordinarily, did not treat them ill, but let that be as it would, the French

* I have Livingftone's journal. He went about the middle of October from Port-royal to Penobscot, where he was kindly entertained by Castine, at his own house; and from thence went up the river in canoes, until they came to an ifland where was a great body of Indians, men, women and children. Here, an Indian, being in a rage becaufe fome English prisoners had run away with his canoe, feized Livingstone by the throat and would have dispatched him with a hatchet, if Castine had not thrown himfelf between them and refcued him. The Indians would not fuffer them to proceed, for feveral days. At length, November 4th, they fet out in their canoes and the next day the canoe, the major was in, overfet and one of the Indian guides was drowned. Soon after, the water beginning to freeze, the ice fo shattered their tender vessels and made the passing fo difficult, that they were obliged to betake themfelves to the land and to travel by their compais, through a country to thick with fpruce, cedar and pine wood and underwood, as to be fcarce passable, and the greatest part of the way broken and mountainous land. They were above a fortnight without the fight of the fun, the weather being ftormy or foggy the whole time. They had fpent their provisions fix days before they came to any French fettlement, and lived wholly upon mols, leaves and dried berries. At length, the 16th of December they arrived at Quebec.

+ Charlevoix.

French were not accountable for the behavior of the Indians; it was not his fault, that this unfortunate war was not over a long time ago, and all the miferies, which had been the confequence, must be attributed to those who had refused the neutrality between the two colonies; he was very ready to agree to the exchange of prisoners, but he had not the command of those which were in the hands of his Indian allies; as for the menace, of delivering up the Acadians to the Indians of New-England if the Indians of New-France should refuse to deliver the English prisoners, it was contrary to all the rules of justice and humanity, and if it should be carried into execution he fhould be obliged to do 25 much to all the English he had in his power. This was all the effect of Livingstone's most fatiguing hazardous journey.

THE affair of the agency in England has often occasioned a division and contention in the general court. They, who have ferved the province well and done every thing in their power, have not done enough. If our rights and claims do not appear in the fame light to those who judge of them in England, as they do to our felves, we are too apt to attribute it to the want of skill or fidelity in those who appear for us. At this time, a change in the agency was agreed upon from a different caufe. The change of the ministry in England was as alarming to New-England, as to any part of her majesty's dominions. Mr. Phips was deeply engaged in the new measures. There could not then have been any apprehension of his removing to Ireland; but a whig people would not be fatisfied with a tory agent. Sir H. Ashurst never had any great powers, and he was now declining in age and health. The party that used to support him fet up his brother, Sir William Ashurst, a gentleman of fuperior character and real worth. Mr. Dudley did every thing in his power to prevent the choice, but, when he could not prevail, made a merit of accepting it. An

An addrefs to the queen was fent to Sir William, but he 1710. refufed the agency; he was well acquainted with the flights put upon his brother and the little or no reward given him for fo long fervices. When he excufed himfelf, he recommended a New-England young gentleman, then in London, Jeremiah Dummer,* who, alfo procured from the principal merchants in London, trading to New-England, letters in his favor. He was not, at that time, acceptable to Mr. Dudley, and, in a meffage to the affembly, he advifed them to chufe Henry Newman,⁺ a New-England man, then in London alfo, a perfon of great probity, who had lived fome years in the duke

Mr. Dummer's grand father, Richard Dummer, was an affiftant the year when Mr. Vane was governor ; but, being of the governor's party, was left out, with others of the fame fide; and lived many years after, maintaining a fair character and acquiring a good estate, at Newbury. His father was an acting justice of peace in Boston. Mr. Dummer, besides the advantage of bright natural parts, had been very well educated. The college at Cambridge fitted him for the univerfity of Utrecht, where he fpent some years, and received a doctor's degree. After that, he returned to New-England; but finding no prospect of employment there, that would be agreeable to him, he went to England, where he arrived a little before the change of queen Ann's ministry. Contrary to the expectation of his countrymen and conflituents, he devoted himfelf to the perfons in power, was employed by lord Bolingbroke in fome fecret negociations and had affurances of promotion to a place of honor and profit, but the death of the queen blasted all his hopes. His letter to a noble lord, upon the Canada expedition, and his defence of the New-England charters, will tend more to perpetuate his memory, in his country, than all his fervices in the agency, which were far from inconfiderable. Mr. Dummer conformed to his patron, lord Bolingbroke, in religion as well as politicks. In the latter, he left him, upon the change of times. In the former, he is faid to have adhered to him to the end of his life. He died in 1739. The translation of the travels of James Massey, wrote to encourage scepticism and infidelity, was dedicated to Mr. Dummer. Some, who did not know they were originally wrote in french, fupposed he was the author.

+ Mr. Newman was many years agent for the province of New-Hampshire. $710. duke of Somerfet's family, and who afterwards was fecretary to the fociety for promoting christian knowledge; but the choice fell upon Mr. Dummer and the governor did not think proper to negative him.

MR. DUDLEY found means to remove the prejudice of Sir William Alhurst. From this time, all his letters are in a different strain from what they used to be, and he represents the times to be fuch, that there was no prospect of a better governor, and advises the people, if they could be tolerably eafy, not to run the rifque of a change. This was not the only time when fuch a word of advice, to this, as well as other colonies, would have been feafonable. Mr. Dummer, who was attaching himfelf to the new ministry and had great favor shewn him, engaged alfo in Mr. Dudley's interest. Mr. Phips, who, at first, opposed him, had for some time been very friendly to him. It was a rule with him to gain his enemies, he was fure of his friends. It requires much of that art and skill, of which he is faid to have been master, to render this rule, for any length of time, fuccessful. He happened alfo, as we have obferved, when he was in England, to be known to and favored by Mr. Harley, and his interest there was so established, that he was no longer in danger, until the death of the queen caufed an entire revolution, both as to men and measures. In the province, fome reports against him were of fo gross and criminal a nature, that although they might find fome ready to believe them, at first, yet time alone had funk the credit of them, and the remembrance of leffer matters funk with it, and the last days of his administration were his best days.

THIS year, the enemy made their first appearance, in the spring, at York, but found the inhabitants upon their guard. In June, Col. Hilton of Exeter, being in the woods with 18 men, was ambushed by a party, who fired and killed the colonel and two of his company, and took two prisoners, the rest escaping. Hilton was a good officer, and had behaved well with Church, in 1704, and upon upon other occasions; but at this time was off his guard. 1710. One hundred men went out upon the alarm, but had no other fuccels than to bring in the dead mangled bodies to a decent interment. A few days after, 60 or 70 French and Indians appeared in the fkirts of the town of Exeter, but were alarmed by the firing a gun, and went off with four children only, which they picked up in the fireet or road at play, to the unspeakable diffress of their parents upon receiving the news. In their retreat, they killed one man and took another prisoner. They then travelled westward and killed several of the inhabitants of Waterbury and Simbury in Connecticut, ftruck down upon Brookfield and Marlborough, and, from thence, to Chelmsford, where Major Tyng was stain, an officer respected for his prudence and courage.

THE 2d of August, about 50 Indians came upon Winter harbour, and hovered about the place, fome time, until they had killed four or five and taken eight or ten of the inhabitants. They infulted the fort, and found the garrifon too many to be taken; but not enough to fally out and attack them. October the 1st, feveral perfons, as they were going to meeting at Berwick, were way laid, one of them killed, another had his horse shore under him, the rest escaping. The 10th of the fame month, Bomazeen, with 60 or 70 more Indians, appeared at Winter-harbour, killed three or four and took as many captives; one of the latter was Johnson Harman, a noted officer in expeditions, the next war, against the enemy. The Indians, after they had done the mischief, fent a flag of truce to the fort, and offered to ransom their prisoners, if a vessel should be fent to Kennebeck river to receive them.

OUR forces had been focuring the woods all the fummer, but the parties of the enemy avoided them. Towards winter, Col. Walton, after his return from Port-royal, with 170 men ranged the eaftern country, and killed a Norridgewock chief and fix or eight others. He made a fecond march to Winnepifiaukee, without any 1710. any fuccels; but in, the mean time, the Indians, he was hunting after, were feeking for their own bloody game, more or lefs of which they met with at Cocheco, York, Wells, &c.*

1711.

AFTER Port-royal was reduced, Nicholfon went to England to follicit another expedition against Canada; and, although his intention was known, there feemed to be no expectation that he would fucceed. The New-England people we have obferved were all Whigs and fuppofed the Tory ministry to be determined upon a peace, and rather disposed to fuffer France to recover part of what she had lost, than to make further acquisition from her. And there was a general furprize at Nicholfon's return to Boston, the 8th of June, with orders from the queen to the feveral governments of New-England, to New-York, the Jerfeys and Penfylvania to have their quotas of men in readiness for a fleet which was expected to arrive a few days after, and in fact did arrive the 24th following. This was fhort warning. What was more extraordinary, ten weeks provision for the army was to be procured at Boston. It was one reason given for this measure, that there might be no fuspicions, in Europe, of the destination of this armament. It might well be doubted whether it would be possible to procure fuch a quantity of provisions at Boston in feason, and if it was not, it would be impossible to proceed. This extraordinary measure increased a jealousy, began before, that it was not defigned Canada should be taken, and that the blame should be cast upon New-England. This jealoufy may have been as groundlefs as the charge, which Walker first and, after him, many other authors have brought against New-England, for not affording that ready affiftance which was expected; but it certainly had this effect, to caufe, not only the government, but even

- July 29. 1710, died at Briftol, in Massachusets-bay, John Sassin, Esq; who had been one of the council.
- Feb. 9th 1710-11, died Col. John Foster, one of the council from the charter, and a wealthy merchant in the town of Boston, of a most fair and unblemished character.

190

even private perfons to exert themselves with more zeal 1711. and vigor than had been done upon any other occasion ; and the people fubmitted, not without reluctance, it is true, to have their property taken from them, in a way and manner which I think the people of Great-Britain or Ireland, at this day, would not fubmit to. A general meeting of all the governors was appointed, immediately after Nicholfon's arrival at New-London, and they were fitting when the fleet arrived. The affembly happened to be fitting at Boston, when the first orders came. The governor, without delay, recommended to them a full compliance with the orders he had received. The first thing neceffary, was money. The credit of the treafury was fo low in England, that no merchants or private perfons here would take bills, unlefs the drawers would make themfelves refponsible, and there was no body authorized to draw fuch bills. The general court determined to iffue forty thousand pounds in bills of credit, and to lend them to merchants and others, for the term of two years. These perfons with their bills of credit purchased bills of exchange upon the treasury in England, which, it was hoped, before the expiration of the two years, would be paid, and, if they should not, it would be in the power of the government to continue the loan, but there was no engagement to do it. The next difficulty to be removed was the extravagant price to which provisions had started, upon the advice of this extraordinary demand. For this purpose, an order passed the court, stating the prices of the feveral species of provisions necessary for the fervice. The owners of the provisions that up their ftores, or removed their provisions in order to conceal them. The demand, which had raifed the price, they urged, was the common chance in trade, which every merchant was justly intitled to. Another order foon paffed the court, to imprefs all provisions, in whose possession foever, and for this purpose to open all doors and enter. This effected a general compliance. The fhort time spent for this purpose and the 1711. the refusal of particular persons to submit at first, caused a charge from the officers against the country in general, for unneceffarily delaying the fleet and army; and no notice was taken of the zeal of the government and this extraordinary measure for the removal of these impediments. The addition of fo many mouths had caufed a fudden rife of all poultry-and fresh meat, and at that feason of the year, if the usual confumption had continued, the forces must have failed of necessary refreshment. This confideration induced many of the principal gentlemen in Boston, to deny themselves and to engage, while the fleet lay there to eat falt provisions and no other in their families. The foldiers and feamen, fome of them, deferted and were concealed by the inhabitants who were justly centured for doing it; but not fo the country, for in all countries; there are more or lefs perfons who for the fake of gain will do the fame. A law against this offence was made, with a very fevere penalty, and a more fummary way provided for trial of the offence than ever had been in any inftance before. The defertion of the men put the Admiral out of temper, and he wrote the governor an angry letter, in which he tells him, the fervice had been prejudiced, rather than forwarded fince his arrival at Bofton, and demands from the government a fupply of men equal to the lofs. This could be done in no other way than an imprefs. The inhabitants, it must be owned, would not have fubmitted to it but, in general, would have preferred a prison on shore to a man of war at sea.

BESIDES the miltake, in the plan of this expedition, with respect to a speedy supply of provisions at Bofton without previous notice, there was another, in prefuming that skilful pilots were to be obtained there. The best in the country were shipmasters, who had been once of twice up the river St. Lawrence. These were employed in other business, upon which their future fupport depended, and they were averfe to leaving it; but the government imprefied them into the fervice.

fervice, and afterwards was charged with their defect of 1711. skill, which, admitting it to be true, could not be helped.

THE troops were all landed upon Noddle's ifland; about a mile from the town, where they were every day exercifed in a healthy air; and it was allowed, that men were never landed and reimbarked in better order. The land force, including two regiments from New-England, amounted to near 7000 men, an army more than equal in number to that which afterwards reduced Quebec; under general Wolfe; although, in 1711, it was not half fo ftrong as in 1759.

THE fleet, which arrived at Boston, confisted of 13 fail of men of war and 40 transports, and all failed again the 30th of July: Greater dispatch could not well be expected from such short warning. Nicholson fet out for Albany the same day, to take the command of the forces which were to march by land.

NOTHING remarkable happened in the passage of the fleet to Gaspee, where it arrived the 18th of August and failed again the 20th. The next day and the day after proving foggy, and the wind beginning to blow fresh at E.S.E. the ships brought to, with their heads to the southward, being out of fight of land and out of foundings: This, the admiral, in his own account, fays was by the advice of the pilots, both English and French; and that they were of opinion the fleet would drive into the midft of the channel or river. The New-England pilots always denied they gave fuch advice, and declared, upon their oaths, their opinion was not followed nor regarded. Some of the principal perfons on board one of the thips which belonged to New-England, reported that upon the fleet's being ordered to lie with their heads to the fouthward the whole fhip's company determined they must drive upon the north shore, and they were confirmed in their former jealoufy, that it was never intended the fleet flould arrive at Quebec. This, however, is incredible, and the admiral, who had not the character of an abandoned man, was incapable of facrificing Vol. II. 0 the 1711. the lives of fo many men; and, it must be prefumed. he would not have thrown away his own life, which was exposed as well as the reft. The pilots from Boston supposed the admiral had a very mean opinion of them, and laid greater firefs upon the judgment of the French pilots, who, through ignorance or from defign, occafioned this wrong measure. In two or three hours after the feet brought to, fome of the transports were among the breakers. Eight or nine ships were lost upon the rocks. about midnight, one thousand of the men that were on board drowned, and about fix or feven hundred faved by the other thips. All the men of war escaped; the admiral's fhip is faid to have anchored, and the reft either flood off or came to anchor; and the next morning, the wind fhifting to W.S.W. the admiral bore away for Spanifh river, the men of war and transports following; but, the wind fhifting again to East, they were eight days before they all arrived, and, as they had the wind, might more eafily have gone to Quebec. In a conncil of war, it was unanimoufly refolved, not only not to make any further trial to go up the river St. Lawrence, but also not to attempt any thing against Placentia in Newfoundland; the fleet not being fufficiently victualled for either. They failed the 16th of September, and the admiral arrived the 9th of October at Portfmouth and, the 15th, his fhip, the Edgar, blew up; the caufe not being known, jealous minds would fuggest that even this was not without defign.

THE admiral fuppoled, in his account of the expedition, that if they had arrived at Quebec and landed their men, their misfortune would have been ftill greater; that the French would either have quitted the place and carried all their provisions with them, or that they would have defended the place until the provisions of the fleer and army were spent and they must have laid down their arms; or if they finally surrendered, it was not to be expected the provisions, for fo small a garrison, would have lasted any time for twelve thousand men, and French and and English must have starved together. Vaudreuil had 17115 made the best preparations he could for their reception, having early notice, of their coming, from the governor of Placentia. An English prisoner, carried in there from Boston, gave an account of Nicholson's arrival, of the fleet that was to follow, and of the forces intended by way of the lake; and the captain of a privateer faw the fleet within 60 leagues of Boston. This intelligence was afterwards confirmed by an Onondago Indian, who came to Quebec to inform of the great preparations making at Albany. †

NICHOLSON had made but little progrefs in his march when he received the news of this difafter, and, if the fleet had arrived fafe, he would have been too late to have drawn any of the French force from Quebec, before fo much of the provisions of the fleet had been spent that it would not have been fafe to have remained any longer; and it is well he did not proceed, for affoon as Vaudreuil had advice of fo many ships stove, and fo many dead bodies with red coats drove upon the shore, and that the river was clear of ships, he ordered all the strength of Canada towards Montreal and the lake Champlain, which, if Nicholson had passed, would have been sufficient to prevent his return.

To complete the charge against the Maffachusets, they are faid to have represented the navigation to Quebec to be easy and without hazard, of which they were wholly ignorant; for the French, after an hundred years experience, almost every year suffered shipwreck, and failing in the bay and river St. Lawrence was so hazardous that they could hardly obtain failors for a voyage thither. The Maffachusets people knew very well that Phips and his fleet went up and down without difficulty, in 1690; that flags of truce had frequently passed and repassed, and they supposed the French represented the passed difficult, to deter other nations, and experience now shews that they judged right.

0 2

. .

1711. THE American transports were all preferved, except one victualler, and the crew of that were faved. The difappointment and lofs was grievous to New-England. Some pious minds gave over all hopes of reducing Canada. So many attempts blafted, plainly indicated, as they conceived, that providence never defigned the whole northern continent of America for one European nation. Upon the first news in England of the difaster, the blame was laid upon governor Dudley, and it was faid he would be removed, but his conduct foon appeared to have been unexceptionable.*

UPON the return of the Maffachufets troops, they gave an account of the freedom used by the sea and land officers, in attributing the whole misfortune to the colonies. The forces were unreasonably detained at Bofton-The provisions fell flort of what was expected -The pilots were ignorant and not fit to be trufted. The general court therefore thought that it was neceffary to exculpate themfelves, and that it would be prudent to lay no blame any where elfe. The governor, in his fpeech, Octob. 17. fays " I condole with you upon " the forrowful difaster of the fleet and forces fent hi-".ther, by her majesty's special favor, to all her good " fubjects in the provinces of North America. I have " had time enough, fince the account thereof, to confi-" der the feveral articles of her majesty's commands to " this government for the putting forward the expedi-" tion, and, therein I cannot charge this affembly with " neglect in any particular; but when I perufe the " journal of the proceedings, I think there was all pro-" vision and expedition made, in every article referring. " to foldiers, artificers, pilots, transports and provisions " for the fervice of her majesty's British forces, as well as " our own; which I hope you will fee reafon to confider " and reprefent home for our justification, that it may be " demonstrated, that we were in earness to do our duty, " to the utmost, for our own benefit and establishment, " as well as her majefty's honor and just rights."

THREE

* Letters from London in 1711.

THREE of the principal pilots, in the fervice, were 1711. fent to England, to be ready to give an account of their conduct, if enquiry fhould be made. A journal of the proceedings relative to the expedition was prepared and transmitted, together with an address to the queen. The inftructions to the agent were given with prudence and caution. "It chiefly concerns us to fet forth that we "have done our duty, by giving all affistance in obe-"dience to her majesty's royal commands, as we have "reprefented in our humble address herewith transmit-"ted to be prefented by you, and will appear by the "journal and orders accompanying the fame. We com-"ported with the supplies, in the large demands made "upon us, to the utmost of our power, beyond what we "had at first a reasonable prospect to have provided "timely, having so thort notice, but made our utmost "efforts and happily got through the fame, in which "you are to vindicate and justify the government.

"IT is not our province, nor must you enter there-"into, to fault or impeach others, for want of doing "their duty, or for their conduct in that affair, any fur-"ther than is abfolutely necessary for our own vindica-"tion. If there be just cause therefor, her majesty in "her princely wisdom will direct the enquiry thereinto."

THE pilots waited many months in England, ready to anfwer any queftions, but none were ever afked, nor was any enquiry ever made into the caufe of the failure of the expedition. Upon the whole, it cannot be conceived that the admiral, general and principal perfons employed in the execution of this plan, purfued any particular measures in order to defeat and overthrow it; that those who projected it in England, had not good reason to expect from the infufficient provision made that it must O_{2} fail

† In this addrefs, it is among other things afferted, that one fifth part of the whole inhabitants of the province, capable of bearing arms, were in pay that fummer. The like proportion were employed two or three years facceflively in the late war. This would be thought extraordinary in any flate in Europe.

1711. fail of fuccess and, at best, were well content that it should, is not so certain.*

ALTHOUGH

- * The account which Charlevoix gives of the French pilot does not agree with Walker's. "There was on board the admiral, a French prifoner, one Paradis, an old feaman who was perfectly acquainted with the river St. Lawrence : This man cautioned him, when he was off the feven illands, not to venture too near the land, and he obliged him to make frequent tacks and to keep near the wind, which did not favor him. At length the admiral tired out and, perhaps, fufpecting the pilot only defigned to wear out his men, refued to come to ftays and bordered fo near a little ifland called the ifle of eggs, that he and feven more were driven afhore by a very fudden fquall at fouth eaft, and flove to pieces and but very few people were faved."
- I will add a brief account of the difaster the fleet met with, from a letter of the New England commissary, Sampson Sheaf.
- " When I accepted the employment, of commiffary to the New-England forces on the Canada expedition, it was in hopes of doing fome good fervice; wherein I defigned to do my belt, and hoped with my diligence and best understanding to have been of fome use, but on the 22d of August, our fleet under the command of Sir Hovenden Walker, about 8 or 10 leagues above the entrance of Canada river, about 11 or 12 at night, met with a difmal difaster. Ten or eleven of the British transports run on the north fhore and were dashed to pieces against the rocks. I hear but of one veffel belonging to New-England met with any damage. There is an eminent providence of God therein, which doubtlefs we ought to confider ; but as to the instrumental cause, by whose misconduct. remains to be examined, and I hope will be made evident. The admiral and general were in great danger, they faved themfelves and their thips, by anchoring, but loft feveral anchors. It was lamentable to hear the shricks of the finking, drowning, departing fouls. The ship, wherein I was embarked, with very great difficulty weathered the rocks, but we were in no capacity to fuccour them that were in diffres.
- Admiral Walker, just before our departure from Spanish river, fet up a cross with an inscription, dated 15th of September, In nomine Patris, Ge. the purport of which was, that thereby he took possession of that country for her majesty.
- This will be a bitter pill for New England. The French will now employ their Indians with redoubled rage and malice, to diffrefs and defiroy our exposed frontiers.

Annapolis Royal, Octo. 6. 1711."

ALTHOUGH the principal object of this expedition 1711. was not obtained, yet, in all probability, Annapolis-royal was faved by it from falling into the hands of the French. The garrifon there was reduced to a handful of men. Between two and three hundred of the New-England forces were kept there, after the place was reduced, and four in five were dead, and they were afraid even of the Acadians alone, without any additional ftrength; but the French court, fensible of their miltake in not giving more attention to the prefervation of that country, when it was in their hands, preffed the governor of Canada, in the strongest manner, to exert himself for the recovery of it. A body of troops was raifed and ready to depart from Canada, when the news arrived of the English fleet and other preparations making; and the men which were defigned against Nova-Scotia were detained at home to defend Canada. The French inhabitants of Acadie, having notice of the force intended from Canada, grew infolent, and it was not fafe for an English man to stir out of the fort. Affoon as they heard of the difappointment, they became fubmiffive again and made acknow-ledgment of their faults; but at the fame time let Vaudreuil know, that the French king had no better fubjects, and neceffity alone had brought them to this fubmission. These were the inhabitants round the fort, included in the capitulation. Many of those at a distance had not yet fubmitted to the English, and Capt. Pigeon, an officer of the regulars, was sent up the river to destroy fome of the French houses, as well as to cut timber for the repair of the fort. He was surprized by a great number of Indians, who killed the fort major, the engi-neer and all the boat's crew, and took thirty or forty of the garrifon prifoners. This stroke encouraged the inhabitants again to take up arms, and five hundred of them, with as many Indians as they could collect, were preparing to attack the fort, expecting an experienced officer from Placentia to head them; but the governor not being able to fpare one, they laid down their arms again and dispersed, 1711. To meet the French or Indian enemy, who were expected upon our frontiers, Col. Walton was fent, in the fall, with 180 men, as far as Penobfcot, where he burned two veffels which were defigned for privateers or cruizers, and took fome prifoners.

Q 4

199

THE year 1711 was rendered remarkable by a fire in the town of Bolton, which from that time until the year 1760 was called the great fire. It was fuppofed to have been caufed by the careleffnefs of an old woman in or near what is called Williams's court; all the houfes on both fides of Cornhill, from fchool flreet to what is called the ftone fhop in Dock-fquare, all the upper part of King-flreet on the fouth and north fide, together with the town-houfe, and what was called the old meeting houfe above it, were confumed to afhes.*

EARLY in the fpring, the enemy fell upon us, and $712. made spoil upon Oyster river, Exeter, Kittery, York and Wells. In May, a party of English went up Merrimack river and killed eight Indians, without lofs to themfelves; but the Indians will not reft long without revenge. In June and July, they killed or took prifoners feveral from Berwick, Kittery, Wells, Dover and Kingfton. At Dover, apprehending they were in danger as they were fcalping two children, for greater difpatch they took off both their heads, leaving the bodies a doleful fpectacle to their unhappy parents. In the fall, a great number of people being at a wedding of Capt. Wheelwright's daughter of Wells, the enemy furprized feveral of the company, and among the reft the bridegroom, Mr. Plaifted, fon to a gentleman of Portfmouth. The Indians expected a good ranfom for fuch a prifoner, and, inftead of carrying him to Canada, fent in a flag, and offered, upon payment of three hundred pounds to release him, and the money was paid and the prifoner returned. I am tired tired of relating these inroads of the enemy, many of 1712. which I have given an account of in general terms, and avoided frequently enumerating circumstances which excite horror from the meer relation. This was the last action of any confequence. In the fpring, after the 1713. peace of Utrecht was known in America, the Indians fent in to Major Moodey at Çafco, to pray that there might be peace between the English and them also, and proposed a treaty to be held there; but the governor thought it more for his honor to oblige them to come to Portsmouth, the chief town of one of his governments, than to go to the borders of their usual refidence; and, upon the 13th of July, they entred anew into articles of fubmission and pacification, figned by a number of chiefs of their feveral tribes, wherein they afk pardon for all their past rebellions and violations of former promises, and engage to demean themselves for the future as very obedient faithful subjects of the crown of Great-Britain. An observation occurs to me which I may properly enough bring in at the clofe of this war.

* Col. Tailer arrived in the fall of the year 1711 with her man jefly's commission for ligutenant governor.

NOTWITHSTANDING the inhabitants in the colonies, in general, double their numbers, from their natural growth or increase, in twenty five years at most, yet the growth of the Maffachusets colony and New Hampshire have born no proportion to the rest; and in the year 1713 there was not double the number of inhabitants in the Maffachusets province, which the feveral colonies, of which it was formed, contained fifty years before. During this period, there was no remarkable emigration to other colonies. There was vacant land fufficient, to extend fettlements upon, and as easy to be procured as any where elfe. The heavy taxes may have drove fome to other governments, but the chief reason of the difference is the constant state of war which those two provinces were in, the Maffachusets especially. From 1675, when Philips war begun, to 1713, five or fix thousand of the youth of the country had perished by the enemy, or by differences contrasted in the fervice; nine in ten of these 1713: these would have been fathers of families and, in the course of 40 years, have multiplied to near an hundred thousand souls.

I cannot avoid a reflection also upon the heavy burdens which the province subjected it felf to during this war, I suppose beyond those of any other ten years from the first fettlement. The castle and other fortifications at Boston, the feveral forts in the eastern country, the various expensive expeditions actually profecuted, and the preparations made for others, added to the constant defence of the extensive frontiers and to the support of the civil government, without any relief or compensation from the crown, certainly must have occasioned such an annual burden as was not felt by any other subjects of Great-Britain, and the merit of the people of that day ought not to be forgot.

THE fettlement of the line of jurifdiction between the province and the colony of Connecticut which was accomplifhed in the year 1713, after ineffectual attempts for feveral years before, deferves particular notice. In 1636 the firft fettlers upon Connecticut river removed from the Maflachufets and took poffeffion of the country upon and near the river on both fides, from Springfield as low as Weathersfield, inclusive of both, and managed their affairs by virtue of authority from the general court of the Maflachufets. In 1638 the inhabitants of Springfield, which included what was afterwards called Suffield, below on one fide of the river, and Enfield on the other fide, having no doubt that they were within the limits of the Maflachufets patent, petitioned the general court that they might be feperated from the other towns below, and be received and continued as part of the

† The fame observation may be made from 1722 to 1762. The inhabitants have not doubled their number. The loss of 2 or 3000 young men, at and after the siege of Louisburgh, will go a great way towards accounting for the deficiency. It is probable there would have been 200,000 fouls more than there are at this time in New-England, if the French had been driven from Canada an hundred years 200. the colony, which was granted and jurifdiction exercifed 1713accordingly. In 1642, by order of the general court, two mathematicians, as they are called in the records, Nathan Woodward and Solomon Saffery run a line welt, as they iuppofed, from a flation three miles north of Charles river until they came to Windfor, upon Connecticut river, where it ftruck the house of Biffell who kept the ferry. The people who had settled upon Connecticut river had no better title to land or jurifdiction than possefilion, the grant made them by the Maffachusets general court being a meer nullity.

In 1630, the Earl of Warwick had obtained from the council of Plimouth a patent of the lands upon a ftrait line near the fea fhore towards the fouth weft, weft and by fouth, or weft, from Naraganfet river forty leagues, as the coaft lies towards Virginia, and all within that breadth to the fouth fea, and yet, in 1635, all the lands between Connecticut river and the Naraganfet country were affigned by the fame council to the Marquis of Hamilton. Lord Say and others had purchafed the Earl of Warwick's title, and by their agents built a fort at the mouth of Connecticut river about the year 1635, and four or five years after Mr. Fenwick came over with defign to take poffeffion of the lands upon Connecticut river under lord Say, &c. and remained in poffeffion of the mouth of the river until 1644, when the fettlers purchafed the title of the lords, as it was called, and formed themfelves into, or continued the form they had affumed, of a body politic.

WHEN the line was run by Woodward and Saffery, Fenwick was to have joined, as the Maffachufets commiffioners for the united colonies afterwards affirmed, though Connecticut commiffioners denied it, and in 1648, when a difpute arofe about a duty required of Springfield for the fupport of the fort at the mouth of the river, the Maffachufets offered to run the line anew if Connecticut would be at the charge, the Maffachufets having been at the fole charge before, but this was not agreed to, and the fort 204 1710. fort being burned down, and the controverfy about the duty at an end, this line feems to have been acquiefced in, and, in 1662, Mr. Winthrop obtained from king Charles a charter for the colonies of Connecticut and New-Haven united, the north line whereof is intended to be the fame with the fouth line of Maffachusets. From this time, until after the incorporation of the Maffachufets by a new charter in 1691, we hear nothing about bounds. except fome controverfies between Springfield and Windfor about their towns grants, and letters from the authority of each government relative to it; and, in 1686. many of the inhabitants of Roxbury pitched upon a track of land to fettle upon, which was bounded on the fouth by Woodward and Saffery's line, and it was granted to them by the Maffachufets government and took the name of Woodstock. Grants were also made to particular perfons of tracts of land near to this line.

AFTER the new charter, Connecticut made a more ferious affair of what was called the Maffachufets encroachments, and in 1700, upon the appointment of a committee by Connecticut with a general power to fettle the bounds between the two governments, the Maffachufets appointed a committee* with a special limited power, viz. to find the fouthernmost line of the late colony of Maffachufets-bay as anciently run by Nathanael Woodward and Solomon Saffery, and to make report thereof to the general court. This was not what Connecticut wanted, for they supposed Woodward and Saffery's line to be erroneous, however they appointed a committee + to attend the work, who reported to their conftituents that a line from three miles north of Charles river, or Woodward and Saffery's station, would run fome miles to the northward of John Biffell's houfe, where Woodward and Saffery fuppofed it to run, and in 1702 Mr. Winthrop, the governor of Connecticut, wrote to, governor Dudley and defired that the Maffachufets would would join in afcertaining the difference of latitude be- 1713. tween the Charles river station and Bissell's house. There were other attempts to bring this affair to a conclusion, but ineffectual, and in 1708, by a state of the cafe read in both houfes, it appears that the Maffachufets intended "to rely upon the line formerly run, as it is therein faid, by two skilful artists in the year 1642, and which has continued the stated boundary for 66 years." They add, that Connecticut charter which was granted in 1662 was bounded by the fouth line of the Maffachufets, which was not then an imaginary or untried line, but well known to the gentleman* who follicited that charter, who if he had thought it controvertible would doubtless have obtained an order for rectifying and adjusting it, and fuppoling, which was not granted, that there should be any error or mistake in the line, yet, having been run and stated so long before the grant of Connecticut charter and held by poffeffion for 66 years, and towns and plantations having been granted and fettled upon the fame, it was unreasonable, now, to draw it into question.

* Col. Hutchinfon, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Anthrum, and Mr. Prout. William Pitkin, Efq; and Capt. William Whiting.

205

THERE being fo little prospect of the Maffachusets receding from a line of which they had fo long been in poffession, Connecticut made their application to England, and I find by a letter from governor Saltonstall of Connecticut, in 1710, that he was expecting orders concerning it. If any came, probably they were fuch as repeatedly afterwards were fent to New-Hampshire, viz. to fettle the controverfy by commiffioners appointed of agreed upon by the general courts of each colony. Be that as it may, it is certain that Connecticut renewed their application to the Maffachufets, and at length commiffions paffed the feals of each government with ample powers to fettle the controversy. The Massachufets were intent upon fecuring the property to fuch perfons to whom they had granted lands and the jurifdiction of those towns which had been fettled by them. Suffield, Enfield and Woodftock were the only towns which could be affected. Connecticut was also apprehensive that part of 1713. of the town of Simfbury, which had been fettled by that government, might fall within the Maffachtifets. It was therefore fettled as a preliminary, that the towns fhould remain to the governments by which they had been fettled and the property of as many acres as fhould appear upon a balance to have been gained by one government from the other fhould be conveyed out of other unimproved lands as a fatisfaction or equivalent, only, as there was about two miles which Windfor claimed upon the town of Suffield, there having been long conteft between thefe two towns concerning the validity of the refpective grants, it was agreed the two miles fhould belong to Connecticut if they fell within their line.

* Vol. I. p. 100,

.

NOTHING could be more equitable nor tend more to the future peace and content of the inhabitants of the contested borders.

It appeared, by the report of the commissioners, that 107793 acres of land were due from the Massachusets, who accordingly made a grant thereof to Connecticut. They accepted and made fale of the fame and applied the produce to the fupport of Yale college and other public uses, and the controverted towns for many years after continued without molestation under the jurifdiction by which they were first fettled.

THE affairs of the war had to engaged the attention of all perfons, that we hear little of party disputes and discord, for five or fix years past; but affoon as they were delivered from enemies without, a contention began within, from a new caufe, the effects of which were felt many years together. The paper bills of credit were the caufe of this contention. So many bills had been iffued for the charges of the war, particularly the large fum of forty thousand pounds, iffued for the Canada expedition, that they were become the fole inftrument and measure of commerce, and filver and gold were entirely banished. Of two instruments, one in use in a particular state only, the other with the whole commercial world, it is eafy to determine which must leave that particular state and which remain, The currency of. of filver and gold intirely ceafing, the price of every 1713thing bought or fold was no longer compared therewith, but with the paper bills, or rather with meer ideal pounds, fhillings and pence. The rife of exchange with England and all other countries, was not attributed to the true caufe, the want of a fixed ftaple medium, but to the general bad ftate of the trade. It was thought that increasing the paper bills would enliven and reform the trade. Three parties were formed, one very fmall, which was for drawing in the paper bills and depending upon a filver and gold currency. Mr. Hutchinfon, one of the members for Bofton, was among the most active of this party. He was an enemy, all his life, to a depreciating currency, upon a principle very ancient, but too feldom practifed upon, nil utile quod non honessium.

ANOTHER party was very numerous. These had projected a private bank, or rather had taken up a project published in London in the year 1684; but this not being generally known in America, a merchant in Boston was the reputed father of it. There was nothing more in it, than iffuing bills of credit, which all the members of the company promised to receive as money, but at no certain value compared with filver and gold; and real estates, to a sufficient value, were to be bound as a fecurity that the company should perform their engagements. They were folliciting the fanction of the general court, and an act of government to incorporate them. This party, generally, confisted of perfons in difficult or involved circumstances in trade, or such as were possified of real estates, but had little or no ready money at command, or men of no substance at all; and we may well enough suppose the party to be very numerous. Some, no doubt, joined them from mistaken principles, and an apprehension that it was a fcheme beneficial to the public, and fome for party fake and popular applause.

lic, and fome for party fake and popular applaufe. THREE of the reprefentatives of Boston, Mr. Cooke, fon to the agent, we have so often mentioned, Mr.Noyes, a gentleman in great esteem with the inhabitants in general. 1713. general, and Mr. Payne, were the fupporters of the party. Mr. Hutchinfon, the other (an attempt to leave him out of the houfe not fucceeding) was fent from the houfe to the council, where his opposition would be of lefs confequence. The governor was no favorer of the fcheme, but the lieutenant governor, a gentleman of no great fortune, and whofe ftipend from the government was trifling, engaged in this caufe with great zeal.

A THIRD party, though very opposite to the private bank, yet were no enemies to bills of credit. They were in favor of a loan of bills from the government to any of the inhabitants who would mortgage their effates as a fecurity for the re-payment of the bills, with intereft, in a term of years, the interest to be paid annually; and applied to the fupport of government. This was an eafy way of paying public charges, which, no doubt, they wondered, that in' fo many ages the wifdom of other governments had never difcovered. The principal men of the council were in favor of it, and it being thought by the first party the least of two evils, they fell in with the scheme, and, after that, the country was divided between the public and private bank. The house of representatives was near equally divided, but rather favorers of the private bank, from the great influence of the Boston members in the house, and a great number of perfons of the town, out of it. The controverfy had an univerfal foread, and divided towns, parishes, and particular families.*

1714. At length, after long struggle, the party for the public bank prevailed in the general court, for a loan of fifty thousand pounds in bills of credit, which were put into the hands of trustees \dagger and lent for five years only;

- May 8. 1713. died at Yarmouth John Thacher, Efq; one of the council, in his 75th year.
- In Vol. I. p. 395, it is faid Sir Edmund Andros died in Virginia. but I find by letters from London dated the 24th Feb. 1713-14. that he died there in that week.
- † The trustees were Andrew Belcher, Addington Davenport, Thomas Hutchinson, Edward Hutchinson, and John White.

to any of the inhabitants at 5 per cent. interest, one 1714. fifth part of the principal to be paid annually. This less the number of the party for the private bank, but it increased the zeal, and raised a strong resentment, in those which remained.

A veffel, which arrived at Bolton from Ireland the t 5th of September; brought the first news of the death of the queen, and the accession of king George the first; and two days after, a veffel arrived, from some part of Great Britain, with the printed proclamation in the London Gazette. This, the governor thought fufficient warrant, without express orders, for proclaiming the king in the province. The practice in the colonies has not been uniform on the like occasions. At New-Hampshire, the king was proclaimed from the fame intelligence, the 22d of September; * at Rhode Ifland; the 29th; at New-York, the 11th of October; at New-Haven, in Connecticut, the 14th; at Philadelphia, the 27th; no exprefs orders being received in any of those places; but at Annapolis royal it was delayed until the 2d of December. The propriety of proceeding without express orders has been questioned, but the absurdity of acts of government, in the name and by authority of a prince, for months together, after certain intelligence of their demife, has generally influenced the governors to proceed. The fecret defigns of Queen Ann's last ministry

THE fecret defigns of Queen Ann's last ministry were no where more suspected, nor more dreaded, than in the Massachusets; and the first of August was no where celebrated with greater joy, during the whole of the king's reign:

THE Hazard floop fent express from England, with orders to the government, was lost upon Cohaffet rocks, the 12th of November; the veffel being flove to pieces, Vol. II. P and

* The 23d by fpecial order from the governor the king was proclaimed at Salem, the civil and military officers and principal gentlemen as well as great numbers of other inhabitants attending. This was not the only inflance of respect them, by Mr. Budley to this ancient and reputable town. washed ashore to make certain what vessel it was, and one man had been landed and left at Nantucket. Six months, from the king's acceffion, expired and no orders had arrived for continuing officers in their pofts. The authority of the governor began to be called in queftion. By the charter, upon the death, removal or absence of the governor and lieutenant governor and there being no perfon commissionated as governor within the province, in fuch cafes the government devolves upon the council or the major part of them. The council deriving their authority from charter and not from a royal commission, the act of parliament limiting the continuance in office to fix months after the death of a prince, it was fupposed, could not affect their authority. The advice, of the mifcarriage of the first orders, went the first opportunity to England, and new orders were daily expected, and some were inclined to wait; but, on the 4th of February, the council affumed the government, the lieutenant governor, being of the council, joining with the reft, and iffued a proclamation for all officersto continue in their posts, &c.

An instruction had been given by the queen, in 1767, directing that in cafe of the death or absence of the governor and lieutenant governor, the eldest councellor should prefide in the province; but the charter giving the powers of government to the major part, this inftruction was not regarded.

THE administration of the council was short, and nothing of moment was transacted. On the 21st of March, the king's proclamation was received, and the governor re-affumed with as great parade as if he had been first entering upon the government, but he had His friends in reason to expect his rule would be short. the province were increased. Those who had been his greatest opposers had many of them changed fides and were strongly attached to him, and used what interest they they had with Sir William Afhurst * and others that he 1714. might be continued, and at their request Ashurst appeared for him. The Bankers were the chief of the disaffected, and Col. Byfield, † a gentleman of the council, father in law to the lieut. governor, went over to England to endeavour to supplant him, but wanted interest. In England Mr. Dudley lost his friends by the queen's death. Col. Burges, who had ferved under General Stanhope, was by his interest, in February, appointed to the government, and his commissions passed the feals March the 17th, and Ashurst writes, that the General had promised to be answerable for his good behaviour.

MR. Dudley met the affembly; at the election in May, 1715, but made no speech, though he had never failed of doing it before. The Council and House chose his great adversary Mr. Cooke, ‡ whom he had so often negatived, into the council, and either from indifference, or a spirit of forgiveness before his political departure, he now approved of him.

P 2

* "I am glad to hear of the prosperity of New-England, and that the governor engages the good wifnes of the people for his continuance. I am of opinion you cannot be better than you are at prefent; if you should have a new one you must expect it to be a necessitous perfor.—Certainly you have reason to expect more advantages from one that is born among you than from a stranger to your constitution."—

W. Ashurst to I. Mather, Aug. 10. 1714.

Col. Byfield came from England about the year 1680; and fettiled foon after at Briftol, in the colony of New-Plimouth. His father was Richard Byfield, one of the affembly of divines; his mother, fifter to bifhop Juxon. He had intereft to obtain a commiffion for judge of the admiralty in 1703, which he held until 1715. He complained of being injurioufly reproved by Mr. Dudley in council, for fome alledged errors in judicial proceedings, and was after that always in the oppofition.

‡ Mr. Cooke died the 31ft of October this year, aged 78. He was efteemed as a phylician, but moft remarkable in his political character, having been more than forty years together employed in places of public truft, alway firm and fleady to his principles. I am obliged to Mr. Middlecot Cooke, his grandfon, for many of his papers, which have been of great ufe. The fame day Thomas Oliver, Efq; another of the council, died at Newton. Mr.

CoL.

Col. Burgess intended to flay a short time in England. The bank party were impatient for the removal of Dudley, who did not favor them, and whofe fecond fon William Dudley, who began to have great weight in the houfe of representatives, was a violent opposer. An unufual step was taken, that the governor's commission might be superseded. An exemplification of Burgess's commission was obtained, and that, with the new commiffion or warrant to the lieutenant governor Tailer, were published in Boston, at the same time, the 9th of November ;* and thereupon Tailer took upon him the administration. It was questioned, whether this was regular, the commiffions lay three or four weeks for the council to confider of; but at length they advifed to the publication. I know of no other instance of the publication of a governor's commission in the Massachusets before his arrival in person. In Virginia, it must have been practiled, if a publication has been judged neceffary; feveral of their governors having never been in the colony. The house of representatives, the first day of their fitting (Nov. 23d) appointed a committee to confider of the commissions, but no public exception was taken. Mr. Dudley's friends were fenfible he could continue but a fhort time, for the original commission, with

- Mr. Addington died this year alfo (March 19. 1714-15.) He had been fecretary before the arrival of the charter, and had the character of great integrity and of being in every other respect well qualified for his post. After his death, the governor appointed his fon Paul Dudley and Addington Davenport commissioners for keeping the great feal and the public records and files, until his majesty should appoint a fecretary for the province.
- Samuel Woodward arrived at Bofton, Sept. 22d, 1715, with his majefty's commiffion for fecretary.
- Nov. 16. Ichabod Plaisted, Esq; another of the council, died in his 52d year.
- His commission for lieut. governor under Burgess had been read in council the 24th of September, and he then took the oaths, but no exemplification of Burgess's commission was then arrived.

212

2715.

with the new governor, would remove all doubt; he 1715. himfelf was in advanced life, near feventy, and had felt fo much of the burden of government, that he might well be weary of it and, like his friend Mr. Stoughton, with to retire.

No New-England man had paffed through more fcenes of bufy life than Mr. Dudley. His friends intended otherwise. He was educated for the ministry, and if various dignities had been known in the New-England churches, poffibly he had lived and died a clergyman; but, without this, nothing could be more diffonant from his genius. He foon turned his thoughts to civil affairs; was first a deputy or reprefentative of the town of Roxbury; then an affiftant; then agent for the colony in England, where he laid a foundation for a commission, foon after, appointing him prefident of the council, first for Massachusets bay only, but, under Andros, for all New-England. Upon the revolution, for a fhort time, he was funk in difgrace, but foon emerged, He appeared, first, in the character of chief justice at New-York, then, returning to England, became lieutenant governor of the Isle of Wight and member of parliament for Newtown, both which places he willingly refigned for the chief command in his own country. Ambition was the ruling passion, and, perhaps, like Cæsar, he had rather be the first man in New-England than the second in Old. Few men have been purfued by their enemies with greater virulence, and few have been fupported by their friends with greater zeal. We have feen a fecond generation inherit the fpirit of their anceftors, the descendants, on one fide, preferving an affection for his family and posterity, and on the other, retaining equal difaffection against them. Some of his good qualities were fo confpicuous, that his enemies could not avoid acknowledging them. He applied himfelf with the greatest diligence to the business of his station. The affairs of the war and other parts of his administration P. 3 WEFE 1715. were conducted with good judgment. In conomy he excelled both in public and private life. He supported the dignity of a governor without the reproach of par-fimony, and yet, from the moderate emoluments of his post, made an addition to his paternal estate. The visible increase of his substance made some incredible reports of grofs bribery and corruption to be very eafily received; but, in times when party fpirit prevails, what will not a governor's enemies believe, however injurious and abfurd ? At fuch a time, he was charged with difpenfing fummum jus to Leisler, and incurring an aggravated guilt of blood, beyond that of a common murderer. The other party, no doubt, would have charged the failure of justice upon him, if Leisler had been acquitted. His cringing to Randolph, when in his heart he despised him, was a spot in his character; and his fecret infinuations, to the difadyantage of his country, was a greater; both being for the fake of recommending himfelf to court favor. I think it is no more than justice to his character, to allow that he had as many virtues as can confift with fo great a thirst for honor and power.

His life would afford convincing evidence, if there was any doubt, that an humble culm mind enjoys more happinefs in private life than an ambitious anxious mind in the higheft flation. No man in our hiftory had feen more of the temporum varietates fortuneque vicifitudines which Cicero, in one of his epiftles to Lucceius, fays afford a pleafing narration, however irkfome to the man who has the experience of them.

COL. TAILER's ftrong attachment to the bank party procured him the administration, for a few months; but was the cause of his losing his commission for lieutenant governor immediately after. It was supposed, I know not upon what grounds, that Col. Burgess would favor the same party, and his arrival was every day wished for by them; whils the other party dreaded it, and labored to prevent it. It was faid alfo, that, in other respects, 1715. he would by no means be agreeable to the country; a gentleman of a more grave ferious turn of mind would be more likely to be happy here himfelf and to render the people fo. Mr. Belcher, afterwards governor, who was very opposite to the bank party, was then in London, he joined with Mr. Dummer, the agent, and they engaged Sir William Ashurst with them, and prevailed upon Burgels for a thouland pounds sterling, which Belcher and Dummer advanced equally between them, to refign his commission, that Col. Shute might be appointed in his stead. Col. Tailer's friends had endeavoured to engage Ashurst in his favor, but to no purpole; + the fame interest obtained the lieutenant governor's commission for Mr. William Dummer, a New-England gentleman, who had married a daughter of Mr. Dummer, one of the commissioners at Plimouth, and was in fome post there himself; but, his wife dying, he had returned to his native country.

COLONEL SHUTE's family were, generally, differters: His father an eminent citizen in London; his mother, daughter of Mr. Caryl, a differting minister of great note. His brother, afterwards lord Barrington, was then a member of parliament, and at the head of the differting interest. The colonel began his education under Mr. Charles Morton, who about the year 1684, came to New-England and was minister of Charlestown. After tuition under him, he was fent to Leyden. He went after that into the army under king William, who made P 4

* " I have no defign to leffen Col. Tailer's merit, but I mult obferve on this article, that you feem knowingly and industrioully to suppress the true reason of his popularity, which is his being at the head of the private bank, and which I take to be a new and strong reason for putting him out of his employment; and, in this, I do not rely upon my own judgment, but upon the judgment of many principal gentlemen in the bank of England, who condemn it as mischievous to the country, and calculated to ferve private, finister views," Afburff's let. to Mather. 1715. him a captain, ferved under the duke of Marlborough, was a lieutenant colonel and wounded in one of the principal battles in Flanders. He had a good acquaintance, and was well effeemed at court; had the character of a friend to liberty, and was of an open, generous and humane difposition. A governor of his character might be fuppofed to be welcome to New-England men, but the interest of party prevails over all other confiderations, and virtue, religion, private friendship and public good are all facrificed to promote it.*

CHAP.

- Feb. 14. 1715-16. died at Salem William Browne, Efg; in his 78th year, an affiftant under the old charter and one of Sir Edmund Andros's council, which feems to have been the reafon of his not being nominated by Mr. Mather, and appointed by king William under the prefent charter. This neglect naturally procured him fome votes at the first election afterwards, and he was brought into the council and continued many years.
- Jan. 14th, the fame year, died at Salem Elizabeth Patch, the first born female in the old colony of Massachusets-bay, fo that the must have lived 86 or 87 years, and April 14th following, died at Newport Mary Godfrey, aged about 87, being the first child born there. The longævity of the first born in each of the three colonies is worth noting. See p. 148.

MASSACHUSETS-BAY.

217

1718.

CHAP. III.

From the arrival of Governor Shute, in 1716, to the arrival of Governor Belcher, in 1730.

OLONEL SHUTE arrived at Bofton, October the 4th, 1716, in a merchant ship, and was received with usual parade. He made the oppofers of the bank his first acquaintance, the old governor's family in particular, and took his lodgings at Mr. Paul Dudley's. He had received very unfavor-able impressions of the other party, from Mr. Belcher and Mr. Dummer, in England, and was confidered, from his first arrival, as an enemy to the scheme, and the heads of the party were the heads of an opposition, during the whole of his administration. In his first speech to the general court, November 7th, he puts them in mind of the bad state of the trade of the province, an important article of any people's happiness, owing, as he fuppofed to the great fcarcity of money, and recommends the confideration of fome effectual measures to supply this want and thereby to reftore trade to a flourishing condition. This was pointing out to them a further emiffion of government's bills, and the reprefentatives, pleafed with fo eafy a method of obtaining money, foon determined upon a fecond loan, of one hundred thousand pounds for ten years, to be put into the hands of com-miffioners appointed for each county in proportion to their taxes. This provision being made by the govern-ment, there was the lefs pretence for private perfons or companies iffuing their bills; but it gave no relief to the 1716. the trade, the whole currency foon depreciating to that degree, as, with this addition, to anfwer the purpofes of money very little more than if it had not been made. The governor became fenfible of it and recommended to them to provide against it, which they were not able to do, and many of them would not have been willing if they had been able, being in debt, and by means of the depreciation difcharging their debts by a nominal fum, perhaps of not more than one half the real value of the debts. He foon found the effects of it upon his own falary, which they refused to advance as the bills funk, and having recommended this measure in a public speech it became more difficult afterwards to refuse repeating it.

218

THE province had been at war with the eaftern Indians, except some short intervals, for about forty years. The prospect of a long peace between Great Britain and France encouraged us to hope for the like with the Indians, who had always been under French influence, but their father, Rallé a jesuit, was constantly instigating them to infult and annoy the new fettlers who, he pretended, encroached upon the lands of the Indians, and by fupplying them with ftrong drink debauched their morals and prevented the progress of the good work he had began among them. A treaty or conference was thought expedient to confirm them in their friendship with the English, and, if possible, to draw them from the roman catholic to the protestant religion. The governor, 1717. therefore, the first fummer after his arrival, in August, attended by feveral of the council both of Maffachufets and New-Hampshire and other gentlemen, met the Indians at Arowfick ifland.

At the beginning of the conference, he delivered them an English and an Indian bible, which he told them contained the religion of the English; and at the same time recommended to them Mr. Baxter, a minister who went down as a missionary, and told them he would explain the bible and instruct them in the principles of religion. They were at no loss for an answer. "All people,

MASSACHUSETS-BAY. 219

ple, they faid, loved their own ministers; and as for 1717. the bible, they defired to be excufed from keeping it, God had given them teaching, and if they should go from that they should displease God." They were fixed in their religion and it would have been a loss of time to attempt to move them. The reft of the conference was upon the right of the English to settle in that part of the country. Upon complaint made, by the Indians, of encroachments upon their lands, the governor produced one of the original deeds which had been given by their fachems. They acknowledged the lands, to the west of Kennebeck, belonged to the English, but they were fure no fale had ever been made of any lands to the east. The governor told them, the English would not part with an inch of the land which belonged to them. The Indians were fo offended that they rofe immediately and, without any ceremony, took to their canoes and went to another island where they had their head quarters, leaving behind an English flag which the governor had given them.* In the evening, feveral of them

- Wiwurna. We are willing to cut off our lands as far as the mills and the coafts to Pemaquid.
- Governor. Tell them we defire only what is our own, and that we will have. We will not wrong them, but what is our own we will be mafters of.
- Wiw. It was faid at Cafco treaty that no more forts fhould be made.
- Gov. Tell them the forts are not made for their hurt, and that I wonder they fhould speak against them, when they are for the fecurity of both, we being all subjects of king George.
- Wiw. We cannot understand how our lands have been purchafed, what has been alienated was by our gift.
- His excellency hereupon ordered that a deed of fale of lands on Kennebeck river, made by fix Indian fagamores to Richard Wharton, fhould be opened and exhibited to them, which was done and partly read and interpreted to them.
 Wiw. As for the weft fide of Kennebeck river I have nothing to fay, but am fure nothing has been fold on the eaft fide.
- Gov. I expect their politive anfwer and compliance in the matter, that the English may be quiet in the possession of the lands they have purchased.

Wiw.

THE HISTORY OF

220

1717. them returned to Arowfick with a letter from Rallé to the governor, acquainting him, that the French king did not allow, that in any treaty he had given away the land of the Indians to the English, and would protect the Indians against the English encroachments. The governor let them know, that he highly refented the infolence of the jefuit, and the next morning ordered the fignal for failing. Rallé, in his letters, often laments the unsteadiness of the Indians. They were afraid at this time, of a new war. The old men were loth to quit their villages at Norridgewock and Penoblcot, where they lived at eafe, and encamp in the woods or, which was much worfe, depend upon the French who, they would often fay, treated them like dogs when there was no immediate occasion for their fervice. This confideration induced them to fend two of their number with a meffage to the governor, acknowledging that yesterday they had been rude and unmannerly and earneftly defiring to fee him again. He let them know he would fee them upon no terms, unless they quitted their pretenfions

Wiw. We don't know what to think of new forts built.

- Gov. I have fpoke to that already and told them they are for our mutual defence.
- Wiw. We should be pleased with king George if there was never a fort in the eastern parts.
- Gov. Tell them that wherever there is a new fettlement I shall always order a fort, if I think it proper, and that it is for the fecurity of them and us; and fo do the French. Are any people under the same government as a fraid of being made too strong to keep out enemies?
- Wiw. We are a little uneafy concerning these lands, but are willing the English shall posses all they have excepting forts.
- Gov. Tell them we will not take an inch of their land, nor will we part with an inch of our own.
- Wiw. We shall have fishing and fowling where we will.
- Gov. It is freely confented to and they are affured of it.

Then the Indians rofe up at once and withdrew in a hafty abrupt manner, without taking leave, and left behind them their English colours, returning to the head quarters at Puddlettone's island.

Conference at Arowfick, 1717.

Hons to the lands which belonged to the Englifh. This 1717. the meffengers promifed fhould be done, and defired that the Englifh colours which they had flighted might be returned them. In the evening, they came again to the conference and appointed a new fpeaker as a mark of refentment against the former who, they faid, had behaved ill the day before, and, without entring into any dispute about particular limits or bounds, declared they were willing the English should fettle where their predeceffors had settled, defired to live in peace and to be supplied with necessaries, in a way of trade, confessed that fome of their inconfiderate young men had offered injuries to the English and violated the treaty of Portfmouth in 1713. After renewing that treaty, the conference ended.

THE beginning of an administration in the colonies is generally calm and without ruffle. Several months passed, after Col. Shute's arrival, without open opposition to any measures. The town of Boston at the first election of their reprefentatives, left out fuch as had been bank men, and chofe fuch as were of the other party, but Mr. Cooke, who was at the head of the first party, had interest enough to obtain a place in council. It was, foon after, infinuated that the governor, was a weak man, eafily led away, and that he was in the hands of the Dudleys, men of high principles in government, and it behoved the people to be very careful of their liber-Mr. Cooke, who had the character of a fair and ties. open enemy, was free in expressing his fentiments, and the governor was informed of fome contemptuous language in private company, with which he was fo much offended as to procure Mr. Cooke's removal from the place of clerk to the fuperior court. A dispute hap-pening about the same time between Mr. Bridges f surveyor John Bridges came to New-England by way of New-York in 1698, in the fame fhip with Lord Bellamont. He was commillioned, 1717. veyor of the woods, and the inhabitants of the province of Maine, concerning the property of the white pine trees within that province. Mr. Cooke immediately inferted himfelf in the controverfy, publickly patronized the inhabitants, and in a memorial to the houfe of reprefentatives charged the furveyor with male conduct in threatning to profecute all who without licence from him fhould cut any pine trees in their own ground, which Mr. Cooke alledged they had good right to do, and he further charged the furveyor with permitting, fuch perfons as would pay him for it, to cut down the trees which were faid to belong to the king.

> THE furveyor thereupon prefetred his memorial to the governor and council, juftifying himfelf in the difcharge of his truft, and complaining of Mr. Cooke, one of the members of the council, for officioufly concerning himfelf with the affairs of the furveyor's office, and obftructing his measures for the fervice of the crown. Mr. Cooke had many friends in the house ready to support him, and this dispute was the beginning of the public controvers which continued until the end of Col. Shute's administration; parties were formed, new subjects for contention from time to time were furnished, until at length the governor was forced to leave the province.

I DO not find any vote of council upon this memorial, but the governor efpoufed the caufe of the furveyor, and, to fhew his refertment against Mr. Cooke, when the 1718. lift of councellors was prefented at the next election, directed his speech to him in particular, and let him know > miffioned, together with Benja. Furzer, by the commiffioners of the navy, to enquire into the flate of the country and its capacity for producing naval flores, and they were to furvey all the woods, not meerly for mafts, but for oak timber for fhipbuilding, for trees for tar, pitch and turpentine, and for land fuitable for hemp. There being no hopes of fuccefs from the other parts of the commiffion, it was foon confined to the prefervation of mafts and, fo far only, ferved as a precedent for fucceeding furveyors of the woods.

222

know he would excufe him from attending at the board 1718. for the enfuing year.*

223

MR. Cooke, foon after, prefented his memorial to the council, in which he justified his own conduct and charged Mr. Bridges with "using his utmost efforts to invade the rights and properties of the people in the province of Main by his exorbitant actions, as well as basely betraying the trust the crown had invested him with, by daily felling and bartering the very logs and timber which he gave

- * The form of proceeding has always been for a committee of the houfe to lay before the governor a lift of the councellors elect, upon which he fignifies his confent or refufal and fends back the lift by the fecretary, which is read in council and then in the houfe.
- In the month of April 1717, a pirate fhip, the Whidah, of 23 guns and 130 men, Samuel Bellamy commander, ventured upon the coaft of New-England near to Cape Cod, and after having taken feveral veffels feven of the pirates were put on board one of them, who foon gat drunk and went to fleep. The mafter of the veffel which had been taken run her afhore upon the back of the cape and the feven men were fecured. Soon after, the pirate fhip, in a ftorm, was forced afhore near the table land and the whole crew, except one Englifhman and one Indian, were drowned. Six of the company, upon trial by a fpecial court of admiralty, were pronounced guilty and executed at Bofton, November 15th.
- The year 1717 was remarkable for a greater mortality among aged people than had at any time been known. Five of the council died within the compass of a year, all of them well effeemed. John Hawthorn at Salem, May 10th, aged 76. Andrew Beicher, October 31ft, aged 71. Wait Winthrop, November 7th, - 76. Elisha Hutchinfon, December 10th,-77, and Eliakim Hutchinfon, April 22, - 78. The last four of Boston. Henry Dering and his wife, in one grave, and another inhabitant of Boston, Robert Winfor, and his wife in another, were buried the fame evening, all above 70.
- The famous Indian warrior Benjamin Church, who had escaped the enemy's bullets in a great number of encounters when in the most imminent hazard, met death this year by a fall from his horse, at the age of 78.
- Mr. Woodward, fecretary of the province, tired of a post of much labour and little emolument, disposed of it to Josiah Willard, Esq; who obtained the royal commission and arrived at Boston from London December the 12th, 1718. gave out was the king's, his master, whose bread he then eat." The council fuffered the memorial to lay upon their table; but acted nothing upon it. Afterwards, upon the appointment of a committee by the houfe, they joined a committee of council to confider in general of Mr. Bridges's conduct. This committee; in their report, justified Mr. Cooke, and condemned the proceedings of the furveyor. The council put off the confideration of this report alfo, but the houfe voted their acceptance of it. The governor, of course, transmitted to the board of trade an account of all these proceedings and very foon received an anfwer, cenfuring the houfe of reprefentatives for countenancing and encouraging Mr. Cooke. This being laid before the house, they by a vote declared that the cenfure of the board of trade was occasioned "by fending home the papers on one fide only, whereby their lordships were informed ex parte." The house had avoided any direct attack upon the governor, until this vote, many of the principal members this year being well affected to him, but the party, without doors, especially in Boston, had been increasing against him, and, at the next election for that town; they fent all new members + and a change was made in many other towns. unfavorable to the governor's intereft.

THE famous projector Captain Coram, in the year 1718, was buly in a fcheme for fettling Nova-Scotia and the lands between Nova-Scotia and the province of Main, and a petition was preferred by Sir Alexander Cairnes, James Douglafs and Jolhua Gee, in behalf of themfelves and others, praying for a grant upon the fea-coaft five leagues fouth weft and five leagues north eaft of Chibuctow harbour, where they proposed to build a town, and to improve the country round it in raising hemp, in making pitch, tar and turpentine, and they undertook to fettle a certain number of families to confiss of 200 perfons in three years, the rest of his majesty's subjects not to be prohibited fishing on the coasts under regulations.

+ Elisha Cooke, Oliver Noyes, Isaiah Tay and William Clark.

To this petition, Mr. Dummer the Maffachulets agent 1718. objected, becaufe of the last claufe, which laid a restraint upon the fishery. The lords of trade, however, reported in favor of it, but it stopped in council.

ANOTHER petition was preferred by William Armftrong and others who had been officers and foldiers in the army, "praying for a grant of the lands between Nova-Scotia and the province of Main, the faid tract of land having been conquered by the French in 1696 and possefied by them until 1710, when it was recovered by the English and, by the treaty of Utrecht, was with Nova-Scotia given up by France to the British crown." The conquest in 1696 was the taking Pemaquid fort and holding polleffion of the harbour two or three days. This, however, was made a ferious affair and the agent, Mr. Dummer, was feveral times heard before the lords of trade. The general court being restrained from conveying these lands without consent of the crown, it was proposed, that if they would confent to refign the jurifdiction between Kennebeck and Penoblcot the crown fhould confirm the property of the foil, but upon the propofal's being communicated to the court they inftructed their agent to make no concellions.

ONE Sarah Watts, fetting forth that the was heir at law to Thomas Goffe, deputy governor and one of the 26 patentees of the old colony, claimed a 26th part of the colony, and the iffues and profits for 80 or 90 years. She filed a bill of complaint in chancery against the province, and there was a commillion of fequeltration for feveral New-England thips in the river, which cost the owners feveral guineas, each, to the fharpers who had urged the woman to the fuit. The agent was required to answer the bill, which he did by declaring that it the complainant could make it appear that Thomas Goffe was once feized of a 26th part of the colony, and that the was heir at law to him, which he did not believe the was able to do, yet he verily believed that when the patentees, with others, were incorporated into a body Vol. II. politic 19.18. politic their respective rights ceased and passed to the corporation, who had granted the lands away. The poor woman was at last arrested for debt and sent to Newgate, where she perished.

THE governor, in the beginning of the year 1718, $719. had confented to an impost bill which laid a duty not only upon West-India goods, wines, &c. but also upon English manufactures and a duty of tonnage upon Englifh fhips. Before the feffion in May, the next year. he had received an instruction from the king to give all encouragement to the manufactures of Great Britain. The house, however, passed a bill of the fame tenor with that of last year,* and fent it to the council for their concurrence. An amendment was proposed, viz. to leave out the duty upon English veffels and goods, but the house adhered to their bill. A conference ensued, for the house were not, then, so exact as they have been fince, in refuling to confer upon money bills. This produced nothing more than a propofal from the house to alter the word English to European, which, being trivial, was refused. It feems, the governor, a little out of time, had taken the opinion of the council upon this question, whether, confistent with his instruction, he could give his confent to the bill, which they determined he could not, if it fhould be offered to him. The house then tried the council with the following refolve, " The houfe infift on their vote, forafmuch as the royal charter of this province gives power to the government to impofe and levy proportionable and reafonable affeffments, rates and taxes upon the eftates and perfons of all and every the proprietors and inhabitants of the fame, which this government has been in the free and uninterrupted exercife of ever fince the enjoyment of the faid charter. Sent to the upper house for their concurrence." The upper house was a new name for the council, and defigned as a fleer and to intimate that they might confider themfelves felves in another capacity, than as a privy council.* Per- 1719. haps if Cromwell's epithet for his houfe of lords had come into their minds, it would have been the other houfe. Taunts and language which tends to irritate, can upon no occasion be justifiable from one branch of the legislature to the other. Upon an agreement and harmony the interest of the people depends. Upon different apprehensions of this interest, if it be the real object, the several branches, by the persuasive voice of reason, will strive to convince each other; and be willing to be convinced as truth schall appear.

> The house never pass an impost bill or bill for the general tax for the support of government for a longer term than one year.

THE council thought themfelves unkindly treated and; by a meffage, defired the houfe to alter their vote, but they refused to do it and gave their reasons for the new form. " The house have received new and unufual treats ment from the board. 1st, It is new and unufual for the council to give his excellency their advice upon a bill, till they have acted in concert with the house in concurring or non-concurring. 2d, It is likewife new and unufual for the council to defire a free conference, upon a fubject matter, and then, at the management; to inform the houfe that by a previous vote they had fo far engaged themselves that they could not recede from it. 3d, It is likewife a new and unufual method for the honorable board, after a meffage to the house defiring feveral amenda ments to a bill of rates and duties which were in a great measure agreed to by the house, immediately to non-concur the bill. 4th, It is likewise new and unusual for the honorable board to intermeddle for much with the grants and funds, which this house take to be their peculiar province."

THE house having in this manner, expressed their refentment returned to their old stile, and then the council, by message, let them know that they would not give their concurrence to any bill laying a duty upon european O_2 goods.

* Whatever the ill is, the upper house is the cause of it, that being the true name of it; a grand jury being peers as well as they. Mr. Vaughan in Grey's debates of the house of commons.

227

^{1719.} goods, denied the charge made against them by the house; of innovations, and intimated that any further meffages would only tend to increase the misunderstanding and retard the affairs of the government and defired the house; rather to join with them in a diligent endeavor to bring the fession to such a conclusion, as should promote his majesty's honor and the interest of the province.

SEVERAL weeks having been fpent in these altercations, the governor thought it time to interpose and, fending for the house to the council chamber, he made the following mild and healing speech to them.

" Gentlemen,

" My defign in fending for you up at this time, is to let you know how concerned I am at the unhappy mifunderstandings, that have been for many years between the council and your house relating to the impost bill, and to affure you that no perfon here prefent can be more defirous of preferving the privileges of this people than my felf, fo far as is confistent with the late instructions I have received from my royal master, which have by his special direction been laid before this court. I am fully perfuaded, that to act any way contrary thereto, after the many debates and votes which have been upon that head, would rather deftroy than preferve those privileges we justly prize. Gentlemen, I defire your ferious confideration of what I have hinted, that fo the important affairs of the province yet lying before you may have a fpeedy and happy conclusion."

THIS fpeech which, a year or two after, when the prejudices against the governor were at the heighth, would have been excepted to as irregular and anticipating matters, which it would have been time enough for the governor to have declared his fense of when they came to be laid before him, had now a good effect, and the house, the fame day, resolved that a new imposs bill should be brought in and that the controverted clause in the former bill should be left out, but in the preamble to their resolve they make a heavy charge against the souncil for not concurring their former bill.

" WHREEAS

"WHEREAS this house have voted and passed a bill 1719 granting to his majefty feveral rates and duties of impost and tonnage of shipping, in which was included one per cent. on European merchandize, for which article or clause the honorable council have feveral times nonconcurred the faid bill, notwithstanding all proper endeavors have been used by this house to attain the same which have hitherto proved fruitles, whereby a confiderable part of the revenue, which would have accrued to this province, is for this present fession foregone, which also tends to the depriving this government of their just rights, powers and privileges granted by the royal charter, Resolved," &c.

THE council were fond of peace and, affoon as this refolve came to their knowledge, they fent a meffage to the houfe defiring they would not print the refolve in their votes, as it would have an ill effect and would oblige the council, in their own vindication, to reply, although they wished that all controvers, between the two houses, might cease. The house printed it, notwithstanding, and the next day the council sent the following answer.

"THE board are very much concerned to find, among the votes of the honorable house, a declaration as if the council, in nonconcurring the bill of impost as it was first framed, had done that whereby a confiderable part of the revenue, which would have accrued to this province, is for this present session foregone, which also tends to the depriving this government of their justrights, powers and privileges granted by the royal charter. "THIS declaration contains, or implies, such a charge:

"THIS declaration contains, or implies, fuch a charge as the council can, by no means, fuffer themfelves to lie under, without afferting and folemnly declaring theirintegrity, and they are more furprized, at the imputation of doing a thing which tends to deprive this government of their just rights, powers and privileges granted by the royal charter, because on the 23d current the board fent down a message to the honorable house, that they were always ready and defirous to concur-

Q.3

with

1719. with the honorable houfe of reprefentatives in fuch propofals relating to an impost, as may not tend to alter or expose our prefent happy constitution under the royal charter;' fo that it was from a fincere and just regard to the rights, powers and privileges of this government granted by the royal charter, that the council chose rather to omit the duty of one per cent. on English goods for this feffion.

> "THAT the council apprehended the duty of one per cent. on English goods affected the trade of Great-Britain and so came within the meaning of his majesty's late additional instruction, is certain : And, being of that opinion, it would have been inconfissent for the board to concur the bill of impost as it was fent up, however, they can boldly and truly fay, they have acted from a principle of duty to his majesty, love and fidelity to their country, and have nothing more at heart than the just, wife and careful prefervation of those invaluable rights, powers and privileges granted by the royal charter which God long continue."

This controverfy being over the court was proregued.

BEFORE the next feffions in November, the governor received a reprimand from the lords juffices, the king being abfent, for confenting to the duty on Englift goods, &c. by the impost act in 1718. This he laid before the court. The fame house, which had so long contended with the council, the feffion before, for this clause in the bill, now "readily acknowledge the exceptions taken to it are just and reasonable." An inftruction to the governor to support the surveyor of the woods in the execution of his office, which was communicated to the house at the fame time, was not so favorably received, and in an answer or remonstrance occassioned by the governor's speech they charge the furveyor with instances of very gross male conduct. What evidence they had of it does not now fully appear. The governor, by a message, defired they would not print their remonstrance. They They fent a committee to acquaint him, they must infift 1719. upon the right they had to make it public. He made a very great mistake and told the committee, that his majesty had given him the power of the press and he would not suffer it to be printed. This doctrine would have done well enough in the reigns of the Stuarts In the present age it is justly exceptionable; although by the liberty of the press we are not to understand a liberty of printing every thing, however criminal, with impunity. The house had no opportunity to take notice of this declaration. Upon another occasion they let him know they had not forgot it. The governor was fo difpleafed with the proceedings of the house that he put an end to the fession and they never met again.

WE are now arrived to the memorable year 1720. 1720. The contests and diffentions in the government role to a greater height than they had done fince the religious feuds in the years 1636 and 37. THE public affairs, in general, were in a very indifferent flate. The Indians upon the eaftern frontiers were continually infulting and menacing the English inhabitants, so that but little progress had been made in fettling the country fince the peace and, this year, molt of the fettlements which had been begun were deferted. and a new war was every day expected.

THE trade of the province declined. There was a general cry for want of money, and yet the bills of credit, which were the only money, were daily depreciating. The depreciation was grievous to all creditors, but particularly diffreffing to the clergy and other falary men, to widows and orphans whole estates confisted of money at interest, perhaps just enough to support them, and, being reduced to one half the former value, they found themfelves on a fudden in a flate of poverty and want. Executors and administrators, and all who were posses of the effects of others in trust, had a strong temptation to retain them. The influence a bad currency 1720. rency has upon the morals of the people is greater than is generally imagined. Numbers of ichemes, for private and public emiflions of bills, were proposed as remedies, the only effectual one, the utter abolition of the bills, was omitted.

By these calamities, the minds of the people were prepared for impressions from pamphlets, courants, and other news papers, which were frequently published. in order to convince them, that their civil liberties and privileges were ftruck at and that a general union was neceffary. These did not pass without answers, attributing all the diffrefs in public affairs to the wrath and refentment, the arts and finister views of a few particular perfons, but the voice of the people in general was againft the governor. In our mother country, when difputes arife between the branches of the legislature upon their respective rights, parties are formed and the body of the people are divided; for in a well constituted government it is of importance to the people that the fhare even of the popular part of the constitution should not be unduly raifed to the suppression of the monarchical or aristocratical parts. From a regard to the common intereft, therefore, in a difpute concerning prerogative and privilege, the people, ordinarily, are divided in fentiment. The reason is obvious why it is less frequently to in a colony. There, the people, in general, confider the prerogative as an interest, without them, seperate and diftinct from the interior interest of the colony : This takes their attention from the just proportion of weight due to each branch in the conftitution and caufes a bias in favour of the popular part. For the fame reason, men fond of popular applause are more fure of fuccess, with lefs degree of art, in a colony, than in a state not fo connected and, confequently, men who with unbiaffed judgments difcern and have virtue enough to purfue the real interest of their country, are more likely to be reproached and vilified.

THE

232

THE first act of the house of representatives was the 1720. choice of Mr. Cooke for their speaker. A committee was fent to the governor, at his houfe, to acquaint him with the choice. They reported, at their return, that his excellency faid, 'it was very well.' In the afternoon, the governor, being in council, fent the fecretary to acquaint the house, that he was now in the chair and ready to receive their message, respecting the choice of a speaker. They sent back an answer that his excellency, upon being informed of the choice in the morn-ing, had faid ' it was very well' and they had recorded his answer in the books of the house. The governor replied, that he would receive no meffage from the house but when he was in the chair.* The house then proposed, by message, to the council, to join with them in the business of the day, the choice of councellors ; but upon the governor's telling their committee, who carried up the meffage, that no election should be made until he was acquainted who was chosen speaker, the house fent a new committee to acquaint him with the choice they had made. The governor replied to this committee, that Mr. Cooke had treated him ill as the king's governor and therefore, according to the power given him by the royal charter, he negatived the choice and defired they would proceed to chufe another perfon. They fent back their answer, that they had chosen a fpeaker, according to their known and legal privileges, and therefore infifted upon the choice, and at the fame time they renewed their motion to the council to join with them in the election. The governor told the committee, that he had received a meffage from the house, acquainting him with the choice they had made of a speaker, which choice had been negatived and he was no speaker. Upon this, the house fent their committee to the board to acquaint them, that two meffages having

• The journal of the houfe adds " and that he had received no fuch meffage from the houfe and given no fuch anfwer," but the general court's records take no notice of this. having been fent to propofe to the board to join in the choice of councellors and no answer having been given, they now defired to know whether the board would join in the election or not.

If there had been any further delay on the part of the board, it is very probable, the houfe would have proceeded without them, which mult have increafed the perplexity. The governor, therefore, left the board, having first charged the fecretary with the following meffage to the house, "His excellency orders me to acquaint you, he is informed that governor Dudley did, in the time of his government, difallow of a speaker chosen by the house, and that his proceedings therein were approved by the commissioners of trade and plantations and that he was thereupon directed by the faid commisfioners to acquaint the council, that it would not be thought fit that her majesty's right of having a negative upon the choice of a speaker be given up, which was referved to her majesty, as well by the charter, as by the constitution of England."

NOTWITHSTANDING the warm difputes, in the preceding year, between the two houfes, only one new councellor was chosen, John Burrill, Efq;* of Lynn, who had been many years speaker of the house, but this year was sent to the board, in the room of Mr. Higginson. The house had been as fond of this Mr. Burrill as of their eyes. His temperate spirit, until now, had engaged the

* This Mr. Burrill bore a very fair character. I have often heard his contemporaries applaud him for his great integrity, his acquaintance with parliamentary forms, the dignity and authority with which he filled the chair, the order and decorum he maintained in the debates of the houfe, his felf denial in remaining in the houfe, from year to year, when he might have been chofen into the council and faw others, who called him their father, fent there before him; to fay a great deal of him in one word, there was as much likenefs in his character to that of the right honorable perfon who fo many years filled the chair in the houfe of commons, with fuch applaufe, as well can be between finall and great. Mr. Burrill died of the fmall pox at Lynn, December 10th 1721.

E720.

the whole house in his favor and, from year to year, 1720. procured him a general vote, but this year the house were willing to part with him for a gentleman obnoxious to the governor, which measure, it was easy to foresee, must give a further occasion of controversy.

must give a further occasion of controversy. Two of the new elected councellors were negatived, Nathanael Bysield, who had been folliciting in England for the government when Col. Shute was appointed, and John Clark, who was a perfon of many valuable qualities, and obnoxious, only, for being strongly attached to Mr. Cooke and having been a great supporter of the cause.

AFTER the election, the governor made a further attempt to bring the house to a compliance by the fol-lowing speech. " Gentlemen. At the opening of this fellion you thought fit to make choice of Elisha Cooke, Esq; for your speaker, and upon your reporting of it to me, I did declare my disacceptance of that election, and am firm in my opinion that I had good right fo to do, by virtue of his majefty's commission and the powers referved by the royal charter, and am also confirmed in it, by what I find transacted by the late governor Dudley, during his administration, and also by the opinion of the right honorable the lords of trade and plantations in that matter. I must further observe to you, that the person you have chosen had invaded the king my master's rights in the woods of the province of Main, though confirmed to his majesty by an act of the British parlia-ment, and I have received the thanks of the right honorable the lords of trade and plantations for removing him out of the council. He has ill treated me, who am the king's governor, and has been cenfured by the council for it which ftands upon record in the council books.* How acceptable this matter will be, at home, confidering the warning we have lately had from the court of Great-Britain upon the account of paffing the impost bill, will be worthy of your ferious reflection. Thefe

* The council books from the charter were burnt in the court house in the year 1747 and this censure does not appear any where but in this speech. 1720. These things I thought necessary to acquaint you with and advife you to return to your house and chuse some other person speaker, with a refervation of your own rights, until you shall fend to the court of Great-Britain for the explanation of that part of your charter, relat-ing to the affair of a speaker."

THE house, immediately upon their return to their chamber, entered into a debate upon this fpeech and the question being put, whether, for the reasons affigned by his excellency, the houfe will proceed to the choice of a new speaker it passed in the negative, nemine contradicente.

THE governor gave them no opportunity to proceed on any other business, for the next day he sent for them up again and after another fhort speech diffolved the court. " Gentlemen. Out of a tender regard I have for the welfare of this province, I shall give you the following advice before we part; that when it shall please God we meet again in a general affembly, which shall be affoon as possible, you will not let this province suffer by the perverse temper of a particular person, but that you will chuse one for a speaker that has no other view but that of the public good, one that fears God and honors the king. It is irkfome and difagreeable to me, to diffolve an affembly, but as matters now ftand, I am forced to do it or must give up the king my master's prerogative, which nothing shall ever oblige me to do, who am the king's governor. Gentlemen, I do not think it for the honor of his majefty's government that this affembly should fit any longer and therefore I shall diffolve you."*

WRITS were issued for a new affembly, to meet the 13th of July. The governor had no great reason to, hope for a more favorable house. The people, in general, thought their privileges were attacked. The charter.

* Neither of these speeches are printed in the journal of the, house. The charges upon their speaker seem to have been the reafon.

tharter indeed was filent upon this point. In a dispute, 17202 between the crown and the houfe of commons in the reign of king Charles, the 2d an expedient was found which feemed to avoid the acknowledgment of the right of the crown to refuse a speaker, but a provincial law was principally relied upon which declares " that the representatives affembled in any great and general court shall be the fole judges of the elections and qualifications of their own members and may from time to time fettle, order and purge their own house and make such necesfary orders for the 'due regulation thereof as they shall fee occasion." Whether the legislators had in contemplation the right of the houfe to chufe a fpeaker, exempt from the governor's negative, might well be questioned, but it was urged that the due regulation of the house might very well include this right.

THE towns, in general, fent the former members, Bolton difcovered how they ftood affected by leaving out Mr. Tay who was one of those perfons who ferve upon a pinch, when a favorite cannot be carried by a party; to ftop the gap and prevent an opposite candidate, and he came in feveral times upon fuch occasions. In his room, the town now chose Mr. Clark, the negatived councellor.

THE houfe was willing to fit and do bufmefs, which the choice of the former speaker would have prevented. They therefore pitched upon a perfon lefs attached to party, Timothy Lindall, one of the representatives of Salem, to whom no exception was taken. The governor, in his speech, recommended a peaceable selfion, but the house could not forget the late diffolution. They began with a warm meffage or remonstrance to the governor, in which they tell him, " the last affembly took no great pleasure in being diffolved, before they had gone through the usual necessary business; their afferting and maintaining their just right and ancient privilege of chusing their speaker, and not owning his excellency's power to negative him, was nothing but what they were spliged 1720. obliged to, and the new house are humbly of opinion, that whoever was of advice to his excellency, in the matter, did not confult his majesty's interest, nor the public weal and quiet of the government, but officiously endeavoured to beget unhappy misunderstandings between his excellency and the house and break off that defirable harmony which every one ought to keep up; we earnessly hope and defire the province may never have an affembly, that will willingly forego such a valuable privilege as K. William and Q. Mary of ever blessed memory graciously favoured the province with, when they gave their royal affent to a law directing and governing that affair."⁴

ALL the fublequent proceedings of this fhort feffion fhew how much the houfe was out of temper. An Indian war ufed to be univerfally dreaded. To prevent it, the governor and council had been treating with three of the Penobfcot tribe, who were fent for or came to Bofton; and the houfe were defired to make a grant for a prefent to them, but by a vote they refufed to do it. Some time after, they ordered a fmall fum, ten pounds only. To the controverfy with the governor and the oppofition made to the propofals which came from him, the war, which foon after broke out, was, by the governor's friends, attributed.

THERE had been no public notaries in the province; except fuch as derived their authority from the archbishop of Canterbury. The house, now, first observed, that a notary public was a civil officer, which by the charter.

★ In this controverfy the house feem to have misapprehended their own cause and to have laid most fires upon the weakest argument. The analogy between the governor and a provincial house of representatives, and the king and the commons of Great-Britain, they leave out of the question. By charter, or commissions, the form of government is settled, the governor representing the king's person, the lower house representing the people. I see no arrogance, whatever disproportion there may be between Britain and her colonies, in supposing an analogy between the constitutions, except where peculiar rights or powers are otherwise settled in the respective branches. charter, was to be chosen by the general court, and fent 1720. a meffage defiring the council to join with the boufe in the choice of fuch an officer in each port of the province. To all inftruments which were fent abroad, not only the attestation of the notary himfelf would be neceffary, but a certificate under the province feal; to shew the authority to attest; the council therefore took time to confider of the expediency of appointing such an officer, and referred the matter to the next fession,* but the house immediately proceeded and chose the officers by their own votes. The arguments, to prove that an officer to be chosen by the whole court could derive an authority from the majority of the members of the house of representatives have not been preferved. †

BEING offended with the council, the house fent a meffage defiring "that confidering the low circumstances of the province no draught be made upon the treasury for expences at times of public rejoicing t for the future."

It had been usual to make a grant to the governor, for the falary of half the year, at the beginning of the feffion. The house deferred it until the close, and then reduced it from fix to five hundred pounds, although the currency was depreciated. To the lieutenant governor, they used to make a prefent, once a year, never less than fifty pounds, they now reduced it to thirty five. Mr. Dummer had so much spirit, that he inclosed the vote in a letter to the speaker acquainting him that "having the honor to bear the king's commission for lieutenant governor of the province, and having been annually more than fifty pounds out of pocket, in that fervice, he did not think it for his honor to accept of their grant."

- As a public notary, in the feveral ports was judged to be a neceffary officer, the council afterwards concurred, with the house, and a choice has been ever fince annually made by the general court.
- They fent a meffage the next day to the governor, to defire him to approve of the choice, but he gave them for anfwer that as the council did not join he did not fee how they could be fworn.
- I The king's birth day, accession, coronation, &c.

THE governor took no public notice of the proceedings of the house. On the 23d of July he put an end to the selfion.

DURING the recess of the court (August 7th) a party of the eastern Indians fell upon Canfo, within the province of Nova Scotia, but peopled every fummer from the Maffachusets. The Indians furprized the English in their beds and ftripped them of every thing, telling them they came to carry away what they could find upon their own land. Three or four of the English were killed. Some of the French of Cape Breton were in confederacy and came with their veffels, the next hight, and carried off the plunder, together with about 2000 quintals of fifh. The English veffels in the harbour were not attempted. A floop happening to arrive the next day, the master offered his fervice to go out and make reprifals, and being furnished with a number of men and two or three smaller vessels for his conforts; for want of more ample authority, he took a commiffion from one Thomas Richards, a Canfo juffice, and went after the French and foon brought in fix or feven final fishing vessels, having all of them more or lefs of the English property aboard:

MR. HENSHAW, of Bofton, a principal merchant at Canfo, went to Louifbourg with a complaint to the French governor, who excufed himfelf from intermeddling, the Indians not being French fubjects, nor under his controul. The French prifoners were fent to Annapolisroyal. The lofs, fuftained by the Englifh, was effimated at twenty thousand pounds currency.

THE fears of the people, in the eaftern parts of the Maffachufets, were increafed by this ftroke upon Canfo. In a fhort time after, the cattle were deftroyed and the lives of the owners threatned. The governor was still defirous of preferving peace and, by the advice of council, fent orders to Col. Walton, the commanding officer of fuch forces, as upon the alarm had been fent there, to inform the Indians, that commiffioners should be fent to treat freat with them. The Indians liked the proposal and 1720, promised to attend the treaty.

$720.

240

BEFORE the time appointed, the general court met* and the house passed a resolve, " that 150 effective men; under fuitable officers, be forthwith ordered to march up to Norridgewock and compel the Indians that shall be found there, or in other those parts, to make full fatiffaction for the damage they have done the English, by killing their fwine and fheep or carrying them away, or ftealing provisions, cloathing, or any other way wronging them. And that a warrant be directed to Capt. John Leighton, high theriff of the county of York, who is to accompany the forces, for the apprehending and fafe bringing Mr. Rallé to Boston, who is at present refident at or near Norrigewock in Kennebeck river in this province, and, if he be not to be found, that then the fheriff direct and command the Indians there, or in the parts adjacent, to bring in and furrender up the jefuit to him the fheriff; and, upon their refufal to comply with either of the faid demands, that the commanding officer is to take the best and most effectual way to apprehend and secure the Indians, fo refufing, and fafe conduct them to Bofton."

THE governor looked upon this refolve to be, in effect, a declaration of war and an invalion of the prerogative; it neceffarily prevented a treaty he had agreed to hold with the Indians, and a new war must be the confequence of fuch a measure. The council were fond of peace and, when the refolve was fent to them for concurrence, they rejected it. The house were less averfe to war. The charge of carrying it on, it was faid, would be no burden to the province, the French, now, durft not join the Indians and this would be the most favorable opportunity which could be expected to fubdue or utterly extirpate them. That the charge fhould be no burden feems to be a paradox, but a wild opinion had filled the minds of great part of the people of the province, that if bills of credit could be iffued, the advantage to trade would be fo great, that the taxes 57

VOL. II.

* Moy. 2d.

R.

1720. by which, at diftant periods, they were to be drawn in again would not be felt. Many schemes of public ex-pence were projected, and, among the rest, a bridge over Charles river broader and much deeper than the Thames at London or Westminster.

I shall take no pleasure in relating the proceedings of the general court, in this and the two next years. The best excuse I can make for the house is, that the attempt made to deprive them of the exclusive right of choosing their own speaker was deemed by them a grievance, that the royal governments infift upon this right and there was nothing in Maffachufets charter which took it from them, that this attempt raifed in their minds a jealoufy of a defign against their privileges in general and, in this ftate of mind, they were more eafily prevailed upon by their principal directors, whole principal views were to distress the governor, to agree to fuch measures as under other circumstances they must have disapproved. The rule, perhaps, holds ftronger with political bodies than with individuals, that when just bounds are once exceeded, the fecond step is as easy as the first, and so on, until at length they are drawn by degrees to fuch exceffes as, per faltum, they would have been incapable of.

THE public records of the general court are always open to the infpection of any of the members, but, that the houfe might have them under their more immediate view and charge, they paffed a vote, that the fecretary fhould make duplicates of all public records, and that one fet should be lodged in such place as the house should appoint. The council, willing to have duplicates for greater fecurity, concurred with an amendment, viz. in fuch place as the general affembly floudd direct, but this amendment the house rejected.

THE house, finding the council a bar to their at-tempts, refolved, in one instance, to act by themselves. There was a complaint or fuggestion, that false musters were made by fome of the officers in the pay of the province. The house taking the affair into confideration tion refolved, "that one or more meet perfons be ap- 1720. pointed by this house clerk of the check, who shall, from time to time, have an infpection into the fores, garrifons and forces, and take care that every one have their compliment of men, and the better to enable them to execute the trust reposed in them, that when and to often as they shall fee reason, the commanders of the forts, garrifons and captains of any of the companies, in the pay of this government, shall call forth their men before them, and, if any do not appear, the commanding officer to give the reason of such absent men, and that no muster roll shall be accepted, and paid by the treafurer, unlefs approved of by the clerk of the check." The governor did not intend to admit this officer, appointed by the hotife, into the forts, garrifons, &c. which by the charter the crown had referved to the governor, but he kept filent.

242

To another act of the house the council took exception. A meffage was fent by the houfe to the council to let them know they had appointed a committee to prepare a bill for levying foldiers, " taking it to be their peculiar care." Left it should be understood that this was to exclude the council from concurring or non-concurring fuch bill, or from advising to the levying foldiers upon an emergency in the recess of the court, the council defired the house to withdraw those words, " taking it to be their peculiar care," which they agreed to.

AT this feffion, the houfe, again, withheld one hundred pounds from the governor's usual half year's falary. He had passed it over without notice before, but now he thought it proper to lay before them a royal instruction to recommend to the affembly to establish a sufficient allowance for him by a fixed falary. They fent him a reply, " that they humbly conceived what was granted him was an honorable allowance, and the affair of fettling falaries being a matter of great weight and wholly new to the house and many of the members absent, they did not think it proper to enter upon the R 2 confideration 1.720. confideration of it, but defired the court might rife." The governor complied with their request.*

243

244

- The Maffachulets province afforded fubject for fome part of the madnefs of the people of England in this remarkable year. Walte lands have an imaginary value fet upon them, fometimes higher, fometimes lower, and continually afford fubject for bubbles among ourfelves. Mr. Dummer raifed a bubble from the eaftern lands, but had not time for any very great fuccefs.
 It remains now that I give an account to the general court of a very confiderable undertaking which I fet on foot and have been carrying on for feveral months pall in hopes to procure thereby many great advantages to the province. I have projected a fchame to raife hemp and flax in the eaftern frontiers of the province of Main for the fupply of this kingdom. In order to accomplift this defign, I propofed that the lands between St. Croix and Penobfcot fhould be granted to the undertakers and - their affigns by the crown, and that they fhould also have a charter of incorporation, with all reasonable privileges and advantages allowed them. "I fet my felf heartily to work and, that I might lay a good foun- · dation, I chole 17 managers for the carrying it on, who are all perfons of great diffinction and attend diligently upon the bufinefs at every meeting. My Lord Barrington is one, and Col. Bladen of the board of trade is another, and Alderman Bailis a commissioner of the customs is a third. The rest are either men of note and figure in parliament, as Mr. Young first commissioner for stating the accounts of the army, or eminent citizens, as Sir Juftus Beck, who is one of the greatest merchants in the kingdom. Being thus ftrong, I had no reafon to take notice of Coram and friends or to have any apprehenfions of what they were doing or capable of doing against me, yet, for quietness fake, I fent them word that, if they would withdraw their petition and give me no more trouble, they fhould find an account of profit from this undertaking beyond what they could ever expect if it were to be under their own conduct. Coram immediately fubmitted to my petition, but when he afterwards was told that I had left out of my petition the tract of land between Kenebeck and Penoblcot, he ran about in a mad rage declaring he would rather starve than come into it, and that the whole defign was only a trick in me to fave that fine country for the villainous people of New-England -I have therefore fince treated and agreed with his partners and patrons by whofe interest he was supported, fo that Coram is now intirely dropped and I have no opposition.
- ⁴⁹ Neverthelefs, it is the opinion of the managers to reft a little till the miniftry has quelled the great number of companies that are

At the opening the next fession (March 15th) the 1721. governor in his speech recommended measures to prevent the depreciation of the currency, to suppress a trade carried on with the French at Cape Breton and to punish the authors of factious and feditious papers, to provide a present for the five nations and to enlarge his falary.

THEY refufed, directly or virtually, every propofal. To the first the house tell him, in their answer, "they had passed a bill for issuing one hundred thousand pounds more in bills of credit." This, alone, had a direct ten-R 2 dency are erected every day in defiance of the late act of parliament, and are fo offenfive to the government that the best fcheme in the world would fuffer fome difgrace by appearing at this time. I have only to add, that I have referved twenty thousand pounds of the fubfcription for the use and benefit of the province, which, when the time comes, I will put in the name of proper trustees for that end." Dummer's letter Sept. 17. 1720.

- The time never came for appointing truftees for the province. The great bubble was breaking, which no doubt inclined the managers of this finall one to ftop a little. The capital was to be one hundred thousand pounds fterling. Query, Whether there are no bubbles rifing in England, from the walle lands of America, at this day ?
- † Fifty thousand pounds had been issued the last year, 1720, and distributed to the feveral towns in proportion to their taxes, the bills to be repaid at a limited time, and the governor feemed to approve of and encourage this way of issues bills at his first arrival, but was afterwards convinced of their mischievous effects. Having about this time received an instruction laying him under a restraint in issues of credit except for necessary charges, unless by such acts or orders as should not have effect until his majesty's pleasure was known, he chose to found his objection to the bill upon his instruction.
- This infruction was not occafioned by the bad effect of bills upon the currency as later infructions and acts of parliament have been, but by a complaint from merchants trading to New-York of an act of affembly there for iffuing bills equal to forty' thousand ounces of plate which were all applied, to the governor as a gratuity over and above his flated falary, to the council for pretended fervices at the revolution near 30 years before, and to the house of representatives for their fervices. After the bills were in private hands, to revoke the act would work injustice, but to prevent fuch acts in any colony for the future, circular infructions were ordered to the feveral governors.

THE HISTORY OF

1721. dency to increase the mischief, but they add that " to prevent their depreciation they had prohibited the buying, felling and bartering filver, at any higher rates than fet by act of parliament." This certainly could have no tendency to leffen it. Such an act can no more be executed than an act to ftop the ebbing and flowing of the fea. It would probably carry away and keep out all filver and gold. The depreciation of their currency, would, notwithftanding, have been as visible by the rife of exchange with foreign countries and have been as fenfibly felt by every creditor among themfelves. To his other propofals they fay, " they know of no trade carried on by any people of the province with Cape"Breton and do not think any law to prevent a trade there is neceffary ; and for feditious and fcandalous papers, the best way to fupprefs or prevent them is, for the executive part of the government to bring the authors to condign punifiment, and if proper measures had been taken to difcover and punish the authors of a libel called News from Robinfon Crufoe's ifland, wherein the members of the house are grofly reflected upon, few or none would have dared, afterwards, to publish any thing of that nature or tendency, but to fuffer no books to be printed without licence from the governor will be attended with innumerable inconveniencies and danger; * as to the five nations, the house do not know enough of their number, nor what the other governments intend to give, and, therefore, cannot judge what is proper for them to do; and for the allowance to the governor, they think it as much as the honor and fervice of the government calls for, and believe the inhabitants of the feveral towns through the province are of the fame mind."

THERE never had been an inftance of any governor's refufing or neglecting, at the beginning of the year, to appoint a faft, in conformity to the practice of the country, but the house now endeavoured to anticipate the governor governor and appointed a committee to join with a 1721. committee of council to prepare a proclamation for a public fast. The council refused to join and acquainted the house they could find no precedent, but the house replied that, if such days had not the fanction of the whole court, people would not be liable to punifhment for working or playing. The governor, willing to conform to the house fo far as would confist with maintaining his right of iffuing proclamations, mentioned in the proclamation which he foon after published, that the appointment was, by advice of council and upon a motion from the house of representatives, but the house refused to meet him and declared they had never made any fuch motion, and ordered that no members of the house should carry any proclamations to their towns, for the prefent. The day was, however, obferved as ufual, except that one + of the representatives of Boston would not attend the public worship but opened his warehouse as upon other days.

This was a just return to the governor's declaration, that the king had given him the power of the prefs.

CERTAIN perfons had cut pine trees, upon that part of the province of Main which had not been granted by the general court as private property. A deputy to the furveyor of the woods gave licence to cut the trees, as belonging to the king. The houfe appointed a committee to join with a committee of council, which joint committee were to feize and fecure, for the province, the fame logs which had been cut by licence. The council concurred with a "faving to his majefty all fuch rights as are referved by the royal charter and acts of parliament to trees for the royal navy."

THE houfe defired this faving might be withdrawn, not that they apprehended the refervation made in the charter or the provision by act of parliament were of no force, but they alledged that the trees they defigned to feize were cut by one deputed by the deputy of the furveyor of the woods, and cut, not for the royal navy, but for other uses, and therefore they did not come within reason of the refervation or provision.

R 4

FINALLY,

f Mr. William Clark,

FINALLY, upon the council's refufing to join, the houfe appointed a committee of their own to feize the logs, and directed the attorney general to profecute those who had trespassed and made spoil upon the province lands. After they were feized, the house again defired the council to concur a vote or order for securing and converting the logs to the benefit of the province. This, without any judicial determination, was still more irregular and the council declined meddling with them.

As the time approached for iffuing writs for a new affembly, the governor made the following fpeech to them, before their diffolution.

"GENTLEMEN of the house of representatives. In my speech at the beginning of this fession, I gave you the reasons of my meeting you at this time. I have fince received your answer, which I shall take care to transmit, by the first conveyance, that his majesty may fee, not only how his governor of this province is treated and supported, but what fort of regard is paid to his own royal instructions. I shall also lay before the right honorable the lords commissioners of trade and plantations, the bill for prohibiting a trade to Cape Breton, which I recommended to you several sessions and which had twice the concurrence of his majesty's council, but was as often thrown out in your house, notwithstanding the message that accompanied that bill.

"I am very much furprized your fhould refufe two other bills, which came down from the council, the one to prevent riots, the other to prohibit the making and publifhing libels and fcandalous pamphlets, the paffing of which would, in my opinion, have tended both to the honour of the government and the public peace.

"BUT what gives me the greatest concern is, that the proceedings of your house, with respect to the woods in the province of Main, are directly contrary to the reservation of his majesty's right in the royal charter and an act of parliament, which were both set forth in .

my 1721.

my proclamation, dated the 1st of November 1720, for 1721, preventing the destruction and spoil of his majesty's woods. "I could heartily with, that instead of obliging me to

" I could heartily with, that inftead of obliging me to make fuch reprefentations to the lords of trade, as I fear will not be to your advantage, you had acted with that calmnefs and moderation, which becomes the fubjects of a prince, who posses the qualities in an eminent degree, and, which becomes the reprefentatives of a province, that, without any encroachment on the royal prerogative, enjoys as many and as high privileges, as the greatest advocates for liberty can defire or expect.

"I must therefore recommend to you a loyal and peaceable behaviour and to lay aside those misunderstandings and animosities that of late prevail so much among you, which you will find to be your truest and best interest."

DOCTOR Noyes, one of the reprefentatives of Bofton, died whilft the court was fitting (March 16th) after a fhort illnefs. He was very ftrongly attached to the popular party, and highly efteemed by them, was of a very humane obliging difpolition and, in private life, no man was more free from indelicacies. Mr. William Hutchinfon who fucceeded him was alfo a gentleman of a very fair character, fenfible, virtuous, difcreet, and of an independent fortune. He began his political life at a time when perfons, thus qualified, were wanted for the fervice of their country, to moderate the paffions of thofe who were lefs temperate and who had the lead in the houfe. In general, he adhered to the popular party alfo, but lived but a little while. Longer experience might probably have convinced him, that he would have fhewn his gratitude to his conflituents more, by endeavoring to convince them that they were running to an extreme, than by encouraging the fame extremities himfelf.

THE seffion of the general court, in May, this year, began as unfavorable as any former seffion. The house chose for their speaker John Clarke, Esq; who 1721. the year before had been negatived by the governor as a councellor. To prevent a negative, as speaker, they projected a new form of message directed to the governor and council jointly, to acquaint them "that John Clarke, Esq; is chosen speaker of the house and is now fitting in the chair." This was undoubtedly a very extraordinary contempt of the governor. Mr. John White,* a gentleman of unspotted character, had been clerk of the house for many years. He was no zealous party man, but his most intimate friends, who esteemed him and fought his company for the sake of his valuable accomplishments, were strongly attached to the governor. This, alone, was enough to difmiss him and Mr. William Payne, brother by marriage to Mr. Cooke, and who had formerly been of the bank party, was appointed clerk in his stead.

the

THE governor was more wroth than upon any occas fion before. He came to council, in the afternoon, and fent immediately for the house, no doubt, with an intent to diffolve the court. He had feveral faithful advifers about him and, whilst the house were preparing to come up, he fent a meffage to ftop them and to let them know he accepted their choice of a speaker. This was giving a construction to their message, which they did not intend, and it was-giving his confent before it was asked, but it was to be preferred to a diffolution; for a diffolution of the court, before the election of councellors, according to the conftruction the houfe have fometimes put upon the charter, would have been a diffolution of the government, for one year at least, because the time mentioned for the first election was the last Wednesday in May. The councellors named in the charter were to continue until others were cholen and appointed in their stead. I do not know of any words in the charter which would make the choice upon another day invalid, although that be the day more particularly defigned for that business.

* He died before the year was out (Dec. 10.) of the fmall-pox by inoculation. bufinels. The house shewed their refertment against 1721, the lieutenant governor and Mr. Belcher, who were both left out of the council. The rest were continued.

THE next ftep was the appointing a committee to earry a lift of the new elected councellors to the governor; but the committee was not to defire his approbation, though this form had never been omitted in any one inftance. The governor fent the lift back and took notice of the omiffion. The houfe thereupon refolved, "that confidering the fmall-pox was in Bofton and they were very defirous the court fhould be removed to Cambridge they would fend the lift in the ufual terms, faving their right to affert their privileges at a more convenient time." What privileges they had in their minds it is difficult now to difcover. Surely they could not imagine the election would have been valid without his confent. The governor negatived Col, Byfield, the reft he confented to. $\frac{1}{2}$

THE court was adjourned to Cambridge. The governor, in his fpeech, took no notice of paft differences. All was fair and fmooth, and all was fair in the houfe alfo, the firft fortnight, but, on the 19th of June, the governor's fpeech at the diffolution of the laft affembly was ordered to be read and a committee was appointed " to vindicate the proceedings of the houfe from the infinuations made by the governor of their want of duty and loyalty to his majefty." This committee made a report, not in the form of an addrefs or meffage to the governor, but of a narrative and juftification of the proceedings of the laft affembly and the houfe accepted it and ordered it to be printed.

To vindicate the past proceedings about the pine trees, a full confideration was now had of the feveral acts

† An odd affair happened in the houfe, this fitting of the court. One of the members fat down in prayer time. The fpeaker, after prayers, alked him the reafon of it. He faid he could not join with them in calling God "our father." The house immediately refolved "that Philip Tabor be expelled this house as not worthy to continue a member thereof." 252

1720. acts of parliament and the refervation to the crown in the province charter. The house did not deny a right in the crown to the trees, whilft they were flanding and fit for masts, but supposed that, assoon as they were felled and cut into lengths fit for boards or timber only, the right of the crown ceased and the owners of the foil recovered or acquired a new property in them. This, it was faid, would render the provision made for the prefervation of the trees, which at best is infufficient, to be of no effect, nothing being more easy than for the owners of the foil to procure the trees to be felled and cut into fhort logs, without poffibility of discovery. However, they came to the following refolution, viz. " That inaf-much as a great number of pine trees have been cut in the province of Main which, when flanding, were fit for masts for the royal navy, but are now cut into logs of about 20 feet in length, and 'although the cutting them should be allowed to be an infringement of his majefty's rights referved in the charter,' yet in the condition they are now in, being no longer capable of being ufed for masts, it is lawful for and behoves this government to caufe fuch logs to be feized and converted to their own use and to bring the persons who cut down the trees to punishment." In confequence, and for the purposes, of this refolve a committee was appointed.

THE refervation in the charter is in these words, "for the better providing and furnishing of masts for our royal navy we do hereby referve to us, our heirs and fucceffors all trees of the diameter of 24 inches, and upwards of 12 inches from the ground, growing upon any foil or tract of land not heretofore granted to private perfons. And we restrain and forbid all perfons whatstoever from felling, cutting or destroying any such trees without the royal licence of us, our heirs and fucceffors first had and obtained, upon penalty of forfeiting one hundred pounds sterling unto us, our heirs and fucceffors, for every such tree," It was faid further upon this occasion that although 1721. the crown referved the trees and reftrained all perfons from cutting them, which the necessity of the trees for national use and fervice might be fufficient to justify, yet it was not equitable to take them without a valuable confideration. The crown had made an abfolute grant of the province of Main to Gorges, from whom the Maffachusets purchased. The Maffachusets charter indeed was declared forfeited. Where the right was, after thar, might be disputed, but this was a hard judgment, and it was the plain intent of the charter, in general, to reftore rights, except that of the form of jurifdiction or administration of government, to the former state.

BE this as it may, it has however been thought, by fome judicious perfons, that confidering the extreme difficulty, at prefent, of convicting trespaffers of cutting the king's trees and, by fuch conviction, putting a ftop to the fpoil and havock continually making, it would be good policy to allow the owners or proprietors of thefe lands a fum for every tree, felled for a mast, equal to what it would be worth when cut into logs for boards or timber. This would be fcarce a tenth part of the value of the tree for a mast, and yet would take away the temptation to cut it for logs, and would encourage the preferving and cultivating the young trees, which are at prefent of lesser dimensions. Trees that are incapable of ever ferving for masts, either from decay or other defects, although of fufficient diameter, might alfo be allowed to be cut for logs and it would be no prejudice to the crown, At present, the trespassers make no distinction, and trees are continually cut worth twenty pounds sterling, for a mast, which, when cut into logs, are fcarce worth twenty shillings. Very few trees are cut for masts by trefpaffers. The notoriety of halling, felling and shipping masts will render it very difficult, when the burden of proof where the mafts were cut 'fhall lie upon the perfon who claims the property, to escape discovery and conviction, whereas, among the multitude of logs which are 5721. are continually let loofe to float down rivers to faw-mills, the greatest part of the trespasses will escape notice.

254 THE HISTORY OF

THERE are great numbers of white pines, growing in parts of the country fo remote from the fea or any river by which they can be floated to the fea, that the expence of bringing them thither would be twenty times the value of a maft in England. It feems unneceffary to deprive the inhabitants of fuch places from making use of the trees for timber and boards, when they must infallibly decay and die in the ground, if they are to ferve for no other purpose but masts.

But to return.

THE house neglected making any provision for the fupport of the governor, or the other officers of the government who depend upon the court for their falaries. They waited to fee how far the governor would confent to their feveral acts and votes. On the other hand, the two houfes having chofe the treasurer, impost officer, and other civil officers, the governor laid by the lift, and neither approved nor difapproved. When the house fent a meffage to the council, to enquire whether the governor had paffed upon the lift, he directed the committee to tell the house that he should take his own time for it. This occasioned a reply from the house, and divers meffages and answers passed upon the subject. At length the house, by a vote, determined they would not go into the confideration of grants and allowances before his excellency had paffed upon the acts, refolves and elections of that feffion. This was in plain terms avowing what the governor at first charged them with tacitly intending. To have recurred to this inftance would have laid the house under difadvantage in the dispute, some years after, about a fixed falary. To compel the governor to any particular measure, by making his support, in whole or in part, depend upon it, is faid to be inconfistent with that freedom of judgment, in each branch of the legislature, which is the glory of the the English constitution. This was not all. The house withheld the support of all the other falary men, because the governor would not comply with the measures of the house.

RESENTMENT was shewn against some of the governor's friends. The agent in England, Mr. Dummer, in fome of his letters, had informed the court of the fentiments of the ministry upon the proceedings of the house of representatives, and of the general approbation in England of the governor's conduct. A faithful agent would rather tell them the truth, than recommend hintfelf to them by flattery and falfe reprefentations. He loft the favor of the house, who, upon the receipt of these letters, voted, that it was not for the interest of the province Mr. Dummer should be continued agent any longer, and therefore, it was ordered that he fhould be difmissed.* This vote they fent to the council for concurrence who defired the house to inform them of the grounds and reafons of this difmiflion. The house voted the meffage to be unprecedented, and infifted, that the council

- ^{*} Mr. Dummer was publishing his defence of the charters when this vote passed for his difinition. "I think it now passed all doubt that a bill will be brought into the house of commons at their next fession to disfranchife the charter governments and therefore I have printed a manufeript which has lain by me some time in defence of our charters. I have dedicated it to my lord Carteret one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state and who has the plantations under his care, for which I had his Lordship's permission. It will come out to morrow and I will put up a few of them under cover to you for the use of any members of the general court who may have a defire to fee what I have wrote on the subject.

1721.

1721. council had nothing elfe to do but to concur or nonconcur, and then they non-concurred the vote; but this was much the fame, with a difmiffion, at least for a time, for an agent having no fixed falary depends upon temporary grants which the house refused to make, after this vote.

PAUL DUDLEY Efg; another of the governor's friends had the misfortune also of falling under the difpleasure of the house. He had been chosen, by a small majority, councellor for Sagadehoc. By the charter, it was necessary for him to have been an inhabitant or proprietor of that part of the province for which he was chofen. He dwelt in the old colony of Maffachufets. It was fuggested, in the house, that he had no lands at Sagadehoc, and they appointed a committee to enquire into this fact. Upon their applying to Mr. Dudley for evidence of his title, he told them it was too late, they fhould have enquired before the election. Perhaps he was in an error. He went on and told the committee, he had a deed which he would not expose to the house but he would shew it to two or three of the members. Upon this they fent another committee to inform him it was expected he flould produce his deed, the next morning, to be laid upon the speaker's table. He replied that he would not produce his deed before the houfe, for they. might possibly vote it infufficient. In this part of the province there are fcarce any lands which have not more than one claimer, and it is not improbable fome of the members of the house claimed the lands in Mr. Dudley's deed. The vote of the house would not have determined his title, but might have undue influence upon a jury in a judicial proceeding.

MR. Dudley's anfwer was unfatisfactory, and the houfe voted that it was an affront, that his declining to produce his deeds gave fufficient grounds to believe that he was no proprietor and it was therefore refolved that his election be declared null and void. This vote being fent to the council was by them unanimoufly non-concurred.

No

No grants had been made and no officers for the 1721. enfuing year had been conftituted ; the houfe, notwithstanding, fent a meffage to the governor to defire the court might rife. He refused to gratify them. Thurfday the 13th of July had been appointed for a public fast. The members defired to be at home with their families and, on Wednesday, by a vote, they adjourned themfelves to Tuesday in the next week. The House of commons adjourn for as long time, without any immediate act of royal authority, but, I prefume, never contrary to a fignification of the mind of the king; and the adjournments over holidays are as much established; by ancient usage, as the ordinary adjournments from day to day, and, being conformed to by both houses of parliament; no inconvenience can arife. But the charter was urged, by the governor, to be the rule in this affembly, not the analogy between a Maffachufets houfe of reprefentatives and the commons of Great-Britain. The governor, by charter, has the fole power of adjourning, proroguing and diffolving the general court. Taken strictly, it would be extremely inconvenient, for the act of the governor would be neceffary every day. Upon a reafonable construction, therefore, the house had always adjourned from day to day, but never for fo great a number of days. The council; who were obliged to fpend near a week without bufinefs, unanimoufly voted, upon hearing the house had adjourned, that fuch adjournment, without his excellency's knowledge and confent, was irregular and not agreeable to the charter.

THE governor, afterwards, made this adjournment one of the principal articles of complaint against the house.

UPON Tuesday, like the first day of a session, therewas scarcely a house for business. The next morning some votes passed; which were offered to the governor, and which he would not suffer to be laid before him, until he had sent for the house and told them they had made a breach upon his majesty's prerogative, which he Vol. II. 1721. was under oath to take care of, and he infifted upon an acknowledgment of their error before they proceeded to bulinefs.

THE houfe, by a vote or refolve, declared they had no defign to make any breach upon the prerogative, but acknowledged, they had made a miftake in not acquainting his excellency and the board with the adjournment.

THE governor obferved to them, that they had, induftrioufly, avoided acknowledging that the fole power of adjourning, as well as proroguing and diffolving the general affembly, is vefted in his majefty's governor, by the royal charter. They thereupon agreed to the following meffage. "The houfe of reprefentatives do truly acknowledge, that by the royal charter your excellency and the governor for the time being have the fole power and authority to adjourn, prorogue and diffolve the general court, and the houfe further acknowledge, that your excellency ought to have been acquainted with the defign and intention of the houfe in their adjournment from Wednefday the 12th to Tuefday the 18th inftant, before they did adjourn, and that it was fo defigned and cafually omitted."

THE houfe carefully diftinguished between the power of adjourning the general court and adjourning the houfe of reprefentatives, one branch only, and feem to suppose, that their only miftake was their not acquainting the governor and the board with their intention, which was, by no means, fatisfactory to the governor, and he immediately ordered the houfe to attend him in the council chamber. The speaker ordered all the members of the house to be called in and, expecting a diffolution, they refolved, "that all the votes of the house in the prefent feffion, more efpecially relating to any mifunderstanding or difference that hath arifen between his excellency and the houfe, shall be prepared to be fent home and that the speaker transmit them to William Tailer, Esq; now refident in London, or, in his absence, to such meet perfons · 11 perfons as he shall think fit, defiring them to lay the 1722; fame before his majesty in council, or any where elfe, if need require, to obviate any complaint that may be made by his excellency the governor against the pro-ceedings of this house for their just and necessary vindication.", So much time was taken up in this vote, or refolve, that the governor was highly offended and fent a fecond time, requiring them to attend him forthwith. It has always been the practice of the houfe, before and fince, upon a meffage from the governor, to ftop all bufinefs and go up without delay. The speaker, at thistime, was among the forwardest in the opposition. There was no need of four or five members to hold him, as the fpeaker of the house of commons was once held, in the chair, until a number of ftrong refolutions had paffed the house.

258

THE governor directed his speech to the house only. "Gentlemen of the house of representatives. I am very much concerned to find in the printed journal of the house, first, an order to appoint a committee to draw a memorial upon, or reprefentation of, my speech, made before the diffolution of the affembly in March last, and, atterwards, the memorial itfelf, figned by Mr. Cooke, in the name of the committee.

"THIS treatment is very furprizing, from a house of representatives that profess fo much loyalty and re-spect to his majesty's government. It appears to me to be very irregular, that the prefent house of representatives, whereof John Clarke, Esq; is speaker and which confiss of a majority of new members, should take upon them to answer my speech made to a former house of reprefentatives, whereof Timothy Lindall, Efq; was fpeaker. These proceedings are not only improper, but without precedent from any former affembly.

" I must also observe to you, that you have not shewn that refpect which is due to me as governor of this province, by fuffering this order or memorial to go into the prefs, before it was communicated to me, which, if VOU 1721. you had done, I could have convinced you, that it would have been very much for the fervice of your conftituents; that neither the order nor the memorial should have appeared in print.

"It is my opinion; that you will quickly be convinced how much you have been wanting in your duty and intereft, by difowning the authority of the right honorable board, which his majefty has constituted to superintend the affairs of the province and all the other plantations.

"For these reasons, I should have diffolved the general court when the memorial first appeared, but I was in hopes the house might have been brought to correct or expunge it. Instead of making this use of my tendernefs, you have gone on in the most undutiful manner to withdraw from his majesty's and your country's fervice, by adjourning yourfelves for near a week, without my knowledge or confent, contrary to the royal charter, which absolutely vests in the governors of this province the power of adjourning, proroguing and diffolving, and that at a time when I thought it for the interest of the colony to adjourn you for two days only, having an affair of the greatest confequence to communicate to the house, which was to perfuade you to take fome effectual meafures to prevent the plague coming among us, there being nothing fo likely to bring it in as the French filk and stuffs which are constantly brought into this province.

"THESE your unwarrantable proceedings oblige me to diffolve this affembly."

THIS fpeech, and the diffolution which followed, further alienated the minds of the people from the governor. Some of his friends withed he had carried his refentment no farther than putting an end to the feffion and giving time to deliberate. There was no room to expect a change for the better, upon a new election.

THERE was yet no open war with the Indians, but they continued their infults. The French inftigated them and furnished them with ammunition and provisions. Governor

260

Governor Shute published a proclamation requiring the 1721. inhabitants to remain upon their estates and keep poffession of the country. No wonder the proclamation was not obeyed. I know no authority he had to require them to remain. If the prefervation of their own property was not sufficient to keep them there, it could not be expected they would remain meerly as a barrier for the rest of the province.

In the month of August, two hundred Indians with two French jesuits came to George town upon Arowsick island, armed and under French colours, and, after some parley with the inhabitants, left a letter to be delivered to the governor, in which they make a heavy charge against the English for unjustly invading the property of the Indians and taking from them the country which God had given them, RALLE, their fpiritual father, was their patron alfo in their temporal concerns. Either from a confcioufnefs of their having conveyed the country to the Englifh, or from a defire of peace and quiet they were averfe to engaging in war. When they were at their villages, the priefts were continually exciting them to act vigoroufly and drive all the Englifh to the weftward of Kennebec, and fuch was their influence over them that they would often fet out from home, with great refolution to perfift in their demands, and in their parleys, with the commanders of forts, as well as at more public treaties, would appear, at firft, to be very flurdy, but were foon foftened down to a better temper and to agree that the Englifh fhould hold the lands without moleftation. When they returned home, they gave their father an account of great firmnefs they had fhewn in refufing to make any conceffions, and to this we are to impute the erroneous relation of thefe treaties by Charlevoix and others.

But about this time Toxus, the Norridgewock chief, died. When they came to chufe another Toxus, the old men who were averfe to war, contrary to Ralle's S 3 mind 1721. mind pitched upon Ouikouiroumenit, who had always been of the pacific party. They took another very difagreeable ftep and fubmitted to fend four hoftages to Boston, furcties for their good behavior and for the payment of the damages the English had sustained. Vaudreuil, the governor of Canada, was alarmed and thought it neceffary to exert himfelf upon this occasion. He writes to father Ralle, of the 15th of June, "I was at Montreal, my reverend father, when your letters of the 16th and 18th of May came to my bands, informing me of the bad step taken by the Norridgewocks, in chufing Ouikouiroumenit fucceffor to the deceafed Toxus, of the great lofs which the whole Abenakis nation hath fultained by his death, and the divisions prevailing among the Norridgewocks, many of whom, and efpecially their chiefs, have betrayed the interest of their tribe in openly favoring the pretentions of the English to the country of Norridgewock. The faint hearts of your Indians in giving hoftages to the English, to fecure payment of the damage they have fustained, and the audacious language which they have used to the Indians, in order to keep poffeffion of their country and to drive you out of it, fully convinced me that every advantage would be taken, of the present state of affairs, to subject them to the English, if the utmost care should not be immediately taken to prevent so great a misfortune. Without a moment's delay, I set out, in order to apply myfelf to the business at Montreal and from thence to St. Francois and Becancour, where I prevailed with the Indians of those villages vigoroully to support their brethren of Norridgewock and to fend two deputies for that purpose, to be prefent at the treaty and to let the English know, that they will not have to do with the Norridgewocks alone if they continue their injuries to The intendant and I have joined in a letter, to them. desire father le Chase to take a journey to Norridge. wock, in order to keep those Indians in their prefent disposition and to encourage them to behave with firmnefs nels and refolution. He will alfo go to Penobfcot, to 1721. engage them to fend fome of their chiefs alfo, to be prefent on this occasion and to strengthen their brethren."

BEGOIR, the intendant, writes at the fame time to Rallé, "I wrote, my reverend father, to Monf. de Vaudreuille, who is at Montreal, the fentiments of father de la Chafe and my own, viz. what we think convenient to be done, until we hear from the council of the marine whether the French shall join the Indians to support them openly against the English, or shall content themselves with fupplying ammunition, as the council has advifed that M. Vaudreuil might do, in cafe the English should enterprize any thing against them. He thought it more proper to fend the rev4. father la Chafe, than Monf. de Croifil, lieutenant, &c. becaufe the English can have no room to except to one missionary's viliting another, the treaty of peace not forbidding it, whereas, if a French officer was fent, they might complain that we fent French men into a country, which they pretend belongs to them, to excite the Indians to make war upon them.

" It is to be wifhed that you and your Indians may be fuffered to live in quiet until we know the king's intentions whether we fhall openly join the Indians if they are attacked wrongfully; in the mean time we fhall affift them with ammunition which they may be affured they fhall not want.

"P. S. Since I wrote the foregoing the Indians of St. Francois and Becancour have defired M. Vaudreuil that M. de Croifil may go with them to be a witnefs of their good difpolition, and he has confented to join him with father de la Chafe."

THE Maffachufets people made heavy complaints of the French governor, for fupporting and ftirring up enemies against them in time of peace between the two crowns, but he justified himfelf to his own master. Ralle was ranked by the English among the most infamous villains, and his fcalp would have been worth an hundred fcalps of the Indians. His intrepid courage and fervent zeal to promote $ 4 264

1721. the religion he professed and to fecure his neophytes or converts to the interest of his sovereign were the principal causes of these prejudices. The French, for the same reafons, rank him with faints and heroes. He had been. near forty years, a miffionary among the Indians, and their manner of life had become quite eafy and agreeable to him. They loved and idolized him, and were always ready to hazard their own lives to preferve his. His letters, upon various subjects, discover him to have been a man of fuperior natural powers, which had been improved by an education in a college of jefuits. The learned languages, he was master of. His latin is pure, claffical and elegant. He had taught many of his converts, male and female, to write, and corresponded with them in their own language, and made fome attempts in Indian poetry. When he was young he learned to speak dutch and so came more easily to a smattering of english, enough to be understood by traders and tradefmen who had been employed in building a church and other work at Norridgewock. He corresponded, in latin, with one or more of the ministers of Boston and had a great fondnefs for shewing his talent at controversy. Pride was his foible and he took great delight in raillery. The English idiom and the flat and bald latin, in some of his correspondents letters, afforded him subject. Some of his contemporaries, as well as Cotton, Norton, Mitchel, and others of the first ministers of the country, would have been a match for him. He contemned and often provoked the English, and when threatened with destruction by them, if they should ever take Norridge-wock, he replied —if—. We shall fee, by and by, that he met with the fame fate with others long before him, who by the like laconick and infulting anfwers had unneceffarily provoked their enemies.

THE" English charge the Indians with perfidy and breach of the most folemn engagements. The jefuit denies it and justifies their conduct, from their being under dureffe, at such times, and compelled to agree to whatever' whatever terms are proposed to them; particularly, 1721. when they met governor Shute, at Arowfick, in 1717, he fays, the body of the Norridgewocks had fully determined, that the English should settle no farther upon Kennebeck river than a certain mill; for all the pretence they had to go beyond that, was a bargain of this fort, made by fome Englishman with any Indian he happened to meet with, "I will give you a bottle of rum if you will give me leave to fettle here, or if you will give me fuch a place; give me the bottle, fays the Indian, and take as much land as you have a mind to: The Englishman asks his name, which he writes down and the bargain is finished. Such fort of bargains being urged against the Indians, at the treaty, they role in a body and went away in great wrath, and, although they met again the next day and fubmitted to the governor's terms, yet when they came home all they had done was difallowed by the body of the nation and rejected." Whilst the English kept within the mill the jesuit forbad the Indians molesting them, but if any fettled beyond those bounds he allowed and encouraged the Indians to kill their cattle and to make other fpoil.

THE confideration made by the purchafers of Indian lands was not always fo inconfiderable as the jefuit mentions, and the purchafes were from chiefs or reputed chiefs or fachems, and pofferfion had been taken and improvements made fcores of miles beyond the limits he would reftrain the Englifh to, more than fixty years before.

THE French governor, Vaudreuil, in his manufcript letters, and the French hiltorian, Charlevoix, in print, fuppofe the English fettlers to be meer intruders, and charge the English nation with great injustice in dispoffession the Abanakis of their country. The European nations, which have their colonies in America, may not reproach one another upon this head. They all took possible possible to the minds of the natives, who would gladly have been rid of their new guests. The bost 1721. best plea, viz. that a small number of families laid claim to a greater part of the globe than they were capable of improving, and to a greater proportion than the general proprietor defigned for fo few people, who therefore had acquired no fuch right to it as to exclude the reft of mankind, will hold as well for the English as any other nation. The first fettlers of the Maffachusets and Plimouth were not content with this, but made confcience of paying the natives to their fatisfaction for all parts of the territory which were not depopulated or deferted and left without a claimer. Gorges the original patentee of the province of Main made grants or conveyance of great part of the fea coast and rivers of that province without purchase from the natives, other parts had been purchased from them by particular perfons and the remaining part, as well as the country east of it, the government claimed by conquest, but it must be confessed that in the feveral treaties of peace this right had not been acknowledged by the Indians nor infifted upon by the English, this controversy being about those parts of the country which the English claimed by purchase and no mention made of a right to the whole by conquest.

THE governor, immediately after the diffolution of the general court, iffued writs for a new houfe of reprefentatives and the court met, the 23d of August, at the George tavern, the extreme part of Boston, beyond the isthmus or neck, the small pox then prevailing in the town. The house chose Mr. Clarke, their former speaker, and informed the governor of it by message, and he sent his approbation, in writing, to the house. They passed a resolve, that they intended no more by their message than to inform the governor and council of the choice they had made and that they had no need of the governor's approbation.

THE first act of the house gave new occasion for controversy. They were so near the town as to be in danger and, instead of defiring the governor to adjourn or prorogue the court to some other place, they passed a vote vote for removing the court to Cambridge and fent it 1721. to the council for concurrence. The council nonconcurred the vote, The governor let the houfe know, that he should be very ready to gratify them if he was applied to in fuch manner as fhould confift with the fole right in him of adjourning, proroguing and diffolving the court. They replied, that they were very willing to acknowledge his right, fo far as refpected time, but as to place, by the law of the province the court was to be held in Boston, and therefore an act or order of the three branches was neceffary to remove it to any other place. They let the governor know further, that although they had convened in confequence of his fummons yer, as many of the members apprehended their lives in danger, they would leave the court and go home. There was a quorum, however, who chose to risque their lives rather than concede that the governor had power, by his own act, to remove the court from Boston to any other town in the province, or rifque the confequence of refuling to remain a fufficient number to make a houfe.

266

THE governor had received from England the opinion of the attorney general, that he had good right to negative the speaker, and the lords commissioners of trade and plantations had wrote to him and fignified their approbation of his proceedings. These papers he caused to be laid before the house. The house drew up a remonstrance in which they justify their own conduct and that of former assemblies, in their controversies with the governor, and with a great deal of decency declare. that, with all deference to the opinion of the attorney general, they must still claim the right of folely electing and conflituting their speaker, and they humbly prefumed that their fo doing could not be construed a flight of or difrespect to his majesty's instructions, or bearing upon the royal prerogative. The governor gave them a fhort and very moderate answer; that he had made his majefty's instructions and the royal charter the rule of his administration, that he did not defire to be his OWD 1721. own judge, the former houfe had voted to fend an account of their proceedings to England and it would be very acceptable to him, if the prefent houfe would flate the cafe and fend it home to perfons learned in the law, and give them directions to appear for the houfe, that his majefty might judge between his governor and them, but in the mean time it was his duty to follow his inftructions until they were countermanded.

HERE feems to have been a calm interval. The fiame was abated but the fire not extinguished. Fresh fewel foon caused a fresh flame. The grant to the governor, afforded proper matter. It was faid the house were bad æconomists. To fave an hundred pounds in the governor's falary they put their conftituents to the expence of five hundred pounds for their own wages. If the governor's demand was unreasonable, the houfe may be justified although the wages of the members for the time spent in the debate amounted to much more than the fum in difpute. The currency also continued to depreciate, but this is a confideration which never had its just weight. Twenty fhillings one year, must be as good as twenty shillings another. They received and paid their private dues and debts in bills of credit according to their denominations, why should not the government's debts be paid. in the fame manner? A majority of the house were prevailed upon to vote no more than five hundred pounds, for half a year's falary, equal to about an hundred and eighty pounds sterling.

THE governor was irritated, inflead of obtaining an established falary of a thousand pounds sterling per annum, which he had been instructed to insist upon, his whole perquisites from the government would not afford him a decent support, and they were growing less every day by the finking of the currency in its value.

THE house, from an expectation that the governor would, from time to time, make complaints to the miniftry, voted $\mathcal{L}.500$ fterl. to be paid into the hands of fuch perfons as fhould be chosen to defend their rights 1721. in England, but the council refused to concur the vote, because it was not expressed by whom the perfons should be chose.

fuch

AT the close of the fession, the house and council came into a vote, and the governor was prevailed with to confent to it, " that 300 men should be fent to the head quarters of the Indians, and that proclamation thould be made commanding them, on pain of being profecuted with the utmost feverity, to deliver up the jesuits and the other heads and fomenters of their rebellion and to make fatisfaction for the damage they had done, and, if they refused to comply, that as many of their principal men as the commanding officer should judge meet should be feized, together with Rallé, or any other jefuit, and fent to Boston, and, if any opposition fhould be made, force fhould be repelled by force." Judge Sewall,* one of the council, fcrupled the lawfulnefs of this proceeding against the Indians and entered his diffent. After the general court was prorogued, the governor, notwithstanding he had confented to the vote, fuspended the profecution until the Indian hostages escaped from the castle, but a war being then deemed inevitable, orders were given for raifing the men: The holtages were taken and fent back to their confinement and then the orders were recalled.

A promife had been made, by the governor, to the Indians, that trading houfes fhould be built, armourers or fmiths fent down, at the charge of the province, and that they fhould be fupplied with provisions, cloathing; &c. for their furs and skins.⁺ The compliance with this

- * This gentleman was a good friend to the aboriginals of every tribe, not from meer humanity and compaffion, but he was much inclined to think they were part of the ancient people of God, and that the ten tribes, by fome means or other, had ftrolled into America. He was a commiffioner from the corporation for propagating the gofpel among them, and with his own fubltance built them a fynagogue and did many other charitable acts.
- + Treaty at Arowfick.

1721. this promife was expected from the general court, and, at any other time, it would have been thought a well judged measure, but the unhappy controvers with the governor would not fuffer any thing, from him, to be approved of, and the private traders provoked the Indians by their frauds and other injuries and, it feems, the governor, as well as good Mr. Sewall, fcrupled whether a declaration of war against them was just or prudent. This house and council chose to call the proceedings against them a profecution for rebellion but, if a view be taken of all the transactions between the English and them from the beginning, it will be difficult to fay what fort of subjects they were, and it is not certain that they understood that they had promised any subjection at all.

THE house, diffatisfied with the governor for not carrying into execution a vote of the whole court, refolved at the beginning of the next feffion, " that the government has still sufficient reason for prosecuting the eastern Indians for their many breaches of covenant." The vote being fent up for concurrence, the council defired the houfe to explain what they intended by profecution, but they refufed to do it and defired the council either to concur or non-concur. The house refusing to explain their meaning, the board undertook to explain it and concurred the vote with a declaration that they understood it to be fuch a profecution as had been determined the former fession. This no doubt was irregular in the council and left room to queftion whether it was a vote of the court, the houfe not having agreed to it as the council qualified it. However, in confequence of it, a party of men were ordered up to Norridgewock, and returned with no other fuccefs than bringing off fome of Rallé's books and papers, his faithful disciples having taken care to fecure his perfon and to fly with him into the woods. This infult upon their chief town and the fpoil made upon their prieft will not long remain unrevenged.

THE feffion began at Boston the 3d of November. 1721. The governor prorogued the court to meet at Cambridge, the 7th; and before they proceeded to business, to avoid any dispute about the place of meeting, which would have obstructed the important affairs of the province, he gave his confent to a vote of the two houses, that by this inftance of the governor's adjourning the court no advantage should be taken in favor of his fole power of removing the court from place to place. In his speech, he had taken no notice of party disputes and only recommended to them to raise money for the fervice of the government and particularly of their exposed frontiers.

THE house, in their vote for supply of the treasury, brought in a claufe which had not been in former votes and which the council fuppofed would lay fuch reftraint upon the money in the treasury, that it would not be in the governor's power, with their advice and confent fo much as to pay an express without a vote of the whole court ; they therefore non-concurred the vote, and the house refused any provision without that clause. In the midst of the dispute, Mr. Hutchinson, one of the members for Bofton, was feized with the fmall pox and died in a few days.* The speaker, Mr. Clarke, was one of the most noted physicians in Boston and, notwithstanding all his care to cleanfe himfelf from infection after vifiting his patients, it was supposed, brought the diftemper to his brother member, which fo terrified the court, that after the report of his being feized, it was not poffible to keep them together and the governor found it neceffary to prorogue them.+ At the next feffion in March, the house infifting upon the form of supply which they had voted in the last fession, the council concurred.

An affair happened, during this feffion, which fhewed the uncertainty of the relation the Indians flood in to the English. Castine, fon by an Indian woman to the Baron de St. Castine, who lived many years, in the last century, at Penobscot, had appeared among the Indians, who 1721. who were in arms at Arowfick. By an order of court, he had been afterwards feized in the eastern country and brought to Bofton and put under close confinement.

* Nov. 30. + Nov. 17.

THE house ordered, that he should be brought upon trial in the county of Suffolk, before the fuperior court, and that the witneffes who faw him in arms should be fummoned to attend. This, no doubt, would have been trying in one county a fact committed in another. The council non-concurred and voted to fend for witneffes, that the court might judge in what manner to proceed against him, but this was not agreed to by the house. Some time after, a committee was appointed to examine him. Castine was a very subtle fellow and made all fair with the committee. He professed the highest friendthip for the English and affirmed that he came to Penobcot to prevent the Indians from doing mischief, and promifed to endeavour to influence all that tribe to keep peace. The committee, therefore, reported and the two houses accepted the report, that he should be fet at large. The governor approved of this proceeding. He had yet hopes of preferving peace. To have punifhed him as a traitor, would have deftroyed all hopes of an accommodation. It might alfo very well be queftioned whether it would have been justifiable. The tribe or nation, with which he was mixed, has repeatedly, in words of which they had no adequate ideas, acknowledged themfelves fubjects; but, in fact, in concomitant as well as precedent and fubfequent transactions with them, had always been confidered as free and independent, and, although they lived within the limits of the charter, the government never made any attempt to exercise any civil authority or jurisdiction over them; except when any of them came within the English settlements and difputes had arifen between them and the English subjects.

THE house who, the last session, were for profecuting the Indians and could not reafonably have supposed that they would bury, as they express themselves, the late late march of the English to Norridgewock, seem, not- 1721. withstanding, to be suddenly changed from vigorous measures for bringing them to terms, to schemes for appealing and softening them; and a present was ordered to be sent to Bomaseen, the Norridgewock captain, to engage him in favor of the English.

272

THE small pox, this year, made great havock in Bofton and some of the adjacent towns.* Having been prevented spreading for near 20 years, all born within that time, befides many who had escaped it before, were liable to the diffemper. Of 5889 which took it in Boston 844 died. Inoculation was introduced upon. this occalion, contrary to the minds of the inhabitants in general, and not without hazard, to the lives of those who promoted it, from the rage of the people. Doctor C. Mather, one of the principal ministers of Boston, had observed, in the philosophical transactions, a letter of Timonius from Constantinople, and a treatife of Pylarinus, Venetian conful at Smyrna, giving a very favorable account of the operation, and he recommended a trial to the phyficians of the town, when the fmall pox first began to fpread, but they all declined it except Doctor Boylston, who made himself very obnoxious. To shew the confidence he had of fuccefs, he began with his own children and fervants. Many fober pious people were struck with horror and were of opinion that, if any of his patients fliould die, he dught to be treated as a murderer. The vulgar were enraged to that degree, that his family was hardly fafe in his houfe and he often met with affronts and infults in the ftreets.

THE faculty, in general, difapproved his conduct, but Doctor Douglafs made the most zealous opposition. He had been regularly bred in Scotland, was affuming even to arrogance, and in feveral fugitive pieces, which he published, treated all who differed from him with contempt. He was credulous and easily received idle reports, of T perfons,

* It was brought into the harbour of Bolton about the middle of April by the Saltortugas fleet. 1721. perfons who had received the fmall pox by inoculation taking it a fecond time in the natural way, of others who perifhed in a most deplorable manner from the corrupt matter which had fo infected the mass of blood as to render the patient incurable. At other times, he pronounced the eruption from inoculation, to be only a pussed the eruption from inoculation, to be only a pussed to the fmall pox and that the patient, therefore, had not the least fecurity against the small pox, afterwards, by ordinary infection.

ANOTHER practifer, Lawrence Dalhonde, who had been a furgeon in the French army, made oath that at Cremona, about the year 1696, the operation was made upon 13 foldiers, 4 of which died, 3 did not take the diftemper, the other 6 hardly efcaped and were left with tumors, inflammations, gangrenes, &c. and that, about the time of the battle of Almanza, the fmall pox being in the army, two Muscovians were inoculated, one without any immediate effect, but fix weeks after was feized with a frenzy, fwelled all over his body and was fuppofed to be poifoned, and, being opened after his death, his lungs were found ulcerated, which it was determined was caufed by inoculation.

THE justices of the peace and felectmen of the town called together the phylicians who, after mature deliberation, came to the following conclusions. "That it appears by numerous inftances, that inoculation has proved the death of many perfons, foon after the operation, and brought diftempers upon many others which, in the end, have proved deadly to them. That the natural tendency of infusing fuch malignant filth in the mass of blood is to corrupt and putrify it, and if there be not a fufficient difcharge of that malignity, by the place of incision or elfewhere, it lays a foundation for many dangerous difeases. That the continuing the operation among us is likely to prove of the most dangerous confequence." The practice was generally condemned.

THE

MASSACHUSETS-BAY. 2

THE common people imbibed the ftrongest prejudices, 1721. and fuch as died by inoculation were no more lamented than felf murderers. Doctor Mather, the first mover, after having been reproached and vilified in pamphlets and news papers, was at length attacked in a more violent way. His nephew, Mr. Walter, one of the ministers of Roxbury, having been privately inoculated in the doctor's houfe'in Bofton; a villain, about three o'clock in the morning, fet fire to the fuze of a granado shell, filled with combustible stuff, and threw it into the chamber where the fick man was lodged. The fuze was fortunate= ly beat off by the paffing of the fhell through the window, and the wild fire fpent itself upon the floor. It was generally supposed* that the burfting of the shell by that means was prévented. A' fcurrilous menacing writing was fastened to the stiell or fuze.

THE moderate oppofers urged, that the practice was to be condemned as trufting more to the machination of men, than to the all wife providence of God in the ordinary courfe of nature, and as tending to propagate diftempers to the deftruction of mankind, which proved it to be criminal in its nature and a fpecies of murder. The magistrates, I mean those in Boston, supposed it had a tendency to increase the malignity and prolong the continuance of the infection, and that therefore it behoved them to difcountenance it.

AT length, the house of representatives laid hold of it, and a bill was brought in and passed to prohibit all perfors from inoculation for the small pox, but the council were in doubt and the bill stopped.

SUCH is the force of prejudice.—All orders of men, in that day, in greater or leffer proportion, condemned a practice which is now generally approved and to which many thousands owe the prefervation of their lives.

BOYLSTON continued the practice, in fpite of all the opposition. About 300 were inoculated, in Boston and T_2 the

* 1 remember to have feen the shell, which was not filled with powder but a mixture of brimstone with bituminous matter.

and the as y part have and ching a decourse

276 THE HISTORY OF

1721 the adjacent towns. It is impossible to determine the number which died by it. Douglass would have it there was one in fourteen, whilst the favorers of the practice would not allow more than one in feventy or eighty. It was evident, from the speedy eruption, that many had taken the distemper before they were inoculated. Indeed, where perfons have continued in an infected air for months together no true judgment can ever be made of the experiment. $\frac{1}{2}$

1722. The new house of representatives, in May, chose the former speaker and the governor declared his approbation in the same manner he had done before. He negatived two of the councellors elect, Col. Bysield and Mr. William Clark. Mr. Clark, being a member of the house for Boston. had ever adhered closely to Mr. Cooke. The governor shewed his refertment by refusing to admit him to the council, but did not ferve his own interest, Mr. Clark's opposition being of greater confequence in the house.

THE Indians were meditating mifchief, from the time the English were at Norridgewock, but committed no hostilities until June following. They came then with about 60 men, in twenty canoes, into Merrymeeting bay and took prisoners nine families, but gave no marks of their usual rage and barbarity. Some of their prisoners they released immediately and others in a short time after. Enough were retained to be a security for the return of their hostages from Boston. Another small party of Indians made an attempt upon a fishing vessel belonging to Ipswich, as she lay in one of the eastern

† It happened that in the fame month in which inoculation began in Bofton, two children, a daughter, I fuppofe, of lady Mary W. Montague and a fon of doctor Keith, were inoculated in England. Then an experiment was made upon 6 condemned criminals. After that, 3 or 4 children were inoculated, and the fpring following feveral children in the hofpitals. The fuccefs of thefe attempts encouraged the like with two of the princeffes, which fucceeded very favorably. eastern harbours, but the fishermen being armed they 1722 killed two or three of the Indians and the reft retreated. The collector of the customs at Annapolis-royal, Mr. Newton, with John Adams, fon of one of the council for Nova-Scotia, were coming from thence, with captain Blin, to Boston, and, putting in to one of the Passimaquadies, went ashore, with other passengers, and were all feized and made prisoners, by about a dozen Indians and as many French; the people left on board the sloop cut their cables and fled to Boston.

ANOTHER party of Indians burned a floop at St. Georges river, took feveral prifoners and attempted to furprize the fort.

INTELLIGENCE of these several hostile acts came to Boston, whilit the general court was sitting, but there seemed to be no disposition to engage in war. Instead of the former vigorous resolves, upon leffer provocations, the house proposed that a message should be sent to the Norrigewock Indians to demand the reasons of this behavior, restitution of the captives, and fatisfaction for damages, and acquaint them that, if they resulted, effectual methods would be taken to compel them. The hostages, given by the Indians, were sent down to the eastward and, upon the restoring the English captives, they were to be set at liberty.

THE friends of the English captives were importunate with the government to take measures for their redemption, and a view to effect this seems to have been the chief reason which delayed a declaration of war. But, soon after the prorogation of the court, news came that the Indians had burnt Brunswick, a village between Casco bay and Kennebeck, and that Capt. Harman, with part of the forces posted upon the frontiers, had purfued the enemy, killed several and taken 15 of their guns. Immediately after this news (July 25) the governor, by advice of council, caused a declaration of war to be published.

T.13. I. C. FORELON

278

1722. FOREIGN wars often delivered Greece and Rome from their inteftine broils and animolities, but this war furnished a new subject for contention. The governor often charged the party in the house, with affuming the direction of the war and taking into their hands that power, which the charter gives to the governor. He gave them a hint in his speech (August 8th) at the opening the next feffion. "One thing I would particularly remark to you, which is that, if my hands and the council's be not left at a much greater liberty than of late they have been, I fear our affairs will be carried on with little or no fpirit. Surely, every perfon who wifnes well to his country will think it high time to lay afide all animolities, private peeks and felfinterest, that so we may unanimously join in the vigorous prosecution of the weighty affairs which are now upon the carpet."

THE house, in an address to the governor, signified their fentiments of the necessity of this declaration of war and promifed "all neceffary and chearful affiftance." A committee, of the two houses, settled the rates of wages and provisions for the forces, to which no exception was taken, but they went further and determined the fervice in which they were to be employed, 300 men to be fent upon an expedition to Penobscot, and the rest to be posted at different places on the frontiers, and qualified their report, by defiring the governor to give orders accordingly. He let them know, that the king his master and the royal charter had given him the fole command and direction of the militia and all the forces, which might be raifed on any emergency, and that he would not fuffer them to be under any direction but his own and those officers he should think fit to appoint. The house made him no answer. The destination of the military forces in this manner and making the establishment of their wages depend upon a compliance with it, had not been the practice in former wars and administrations, but the governor found he

27.9

mann'er

he must fubmit to it, or the frontiers would be without 1722. defence. He gave up his own opinion with respect to the Penobscots and had laid the fame plan which the committee had reported and he intended to profecute it, which made his compliance more easy. The house, being diffatisfied with Major Moody, who had the command of the forces, passed a vote defiring the governor to difinifs him. The council non-concurred this vote, " because he was condemned unheard," and substituted another vote to defire the governor to fend for him, that he might attend the court, but this the house would not agree to and fent a seperate message to the governor to defire him to suspend the major from his post. The governor told them he was susprized they should defire so high a piece of injustice as the punishing a man without hearing what he had to fay for himsfelf, and let them know he would enquire into the grounds of their complaint. Several other votes passed, relative to the forces, which the governor did not approve.

AT the next feffion, November 15th, he recommended a law to prevent mutiny and defertion, for want of which the men were daily running away. The house thought it neceffary to be first fatisfied, whether the defertion in the army was not owing to the unfaithfulnels of the officers and appointed two committees, one to repair to the head quarters on the eastern, and the other on the western frontiers, with powers to require the officers to muster their companies, when an exact lift was to be taken of the men that appeared, an account of all deferters and of all fuch as were absent upon furloe, or had been difmiffed or had been exchanged, together with divers other powers. They then applied to the governor to give orders to all in command to pay a proper deference to the vote and order of the house respecting repeated abuses and mismanagements among the forces, &c.

THIS the governor thought he had good right to except to, and he made the vote itfelf, as well as the 1722. manner in which it was to be executed, an article of complaint against the house to the king, but he was prevailed upon to confent to it, and either made or intended to make this condition, that the committees should make report to him. The house urged this confent against him but, in England, it was not thought a sufficient justification.

280

THE conceding in one point naturally led to a demand of the like conceffions in others.

IT was thought a falutary measure to fend for delegates from the Iroquois, who were in friendship with us, and to defire them to use the influence they had over the eastern Indians, in order to their making fatisfaction for the injuries done and to their good behavior for the time to come. When the delegates came to Bofton, the house voted that the speech to be made to them by the governor should be prepared by a committee of the two houses. The governor had prepared his speech and he directed the fecretary to read it to the house of reprefentatives, but this was not fatisfactory and they fent a meffage, to defire that what the fecretary had read might be laid before the house. The governor refused, at first, but, upon further confideration confented, defiring they would fpeedily return it. They fent it back to him and let him know they could not agree to it, unless he would fpeak in the name of the general court, and the house of representatives might be present when the speech was delivered. This was disagreeable to him, and a novelty to the Indians, who had always confidered in their treaties, the governor of Pennfylvania, as well as the governor of New-York, to be treating with them in their own names, or the name of the king, and not of their respective affemblies, but he submitted.

IN confequence of the vote of the house, in the last feffion, the governor had directed an expedition to Penobscot, although it was not altogether agreeable to his own judgment. It seems he had hopes of an accommodation, with that tribe at least. Col. Walton, who had the command on the eastern frontiers, felected forces 1722. proper for the purpose, and they had actually begun their march, when intelligence arrived to the colonel that Arowfick was attacked, by a great number of Indians. He immediately fent an express with orders to the forces to return, and acquainted the governor with his proceedings. The council advised to keep the whole forces for the defence of our own inhabitants, and to fuspend acting upon the offenfive until winter, which they judged a more proper feafon for the expedition; and the men, in consequence of this new advice, were employed in marches upon the back of the frontiers. But the house were disfatisfied, and fent a meffage to the governor " to defire him to order, by express, Col. Walton to appear, forthwith, before the houfe, to render his reasons why the orders relating to the expedition had not been executed." This was not only to take Walton from the command, as long as the house should think fit to detain him, but the orders, ' relating to the expedition,? might be understood to mean the orders which had been given by the house and not what he had received from the captain general. The governor told the committee that he would take no notice of the meffage from the houfe unlefs it was otherwife expressed, befides, he and the council were well fatisfied and he thought every body elfe was. He added, that he intended the officers should give an account 'to him' of their conduct. The next day (Nov. 20th) they fent another meffage to him to defire him to inform the houfe, whether he would fend for Walton as they had defired. He then told the committee, he would fend his answer to the house when he thought proper. Upon this, they seem to have appointed a meffenger to go to the eastward, upon what occasion does not appear, and the next day paffed the following extraordinary vote. "Whereas this housedid on thursday last appoint a committee to wait on his excellency the governor, praying his orders for Col. Walton's appearance before the house, and renewed their request 10

had

1722. to him yesterday, and his excellency has not yet feen caufe to comply with that vote, and the denial of Col. Walton's being fent for has extremely difcouraged the house, in projecting any future schemes for carrying on the war, under any views of fuccefs. And this houfe, being zealoufly inclined to do what in them lies to bring this people out of the calamities and perplexities of the prefent war, and to fpare no coft and charge to effect fo great a good, were fome things at prefent remedied; we do therefore, once more, with the greatest fincerity raiid concern for our country's good, apply to your excellency for your speedy iffuing your orders concerning Col. Walton, to be difpatched by the meffenger of this house going into those parts." The governor did not like to be fo clofely preffed, and when the committee "came to his house he told them, he would not receive the vote and, as it is inferted in the report and journal of the houfe "he went his way." They then appointed their speaker and eight principal members, a committee to wait upon the governor and defire him to return to the chair, " on fome important affairs which lay before the house," but he refused to see the committee and directed his fervant to tell them he would not then be fpoke to by any body.

WALTON was a New-Hampfhire man at the head of the forces, a fmall part only of which were raifed in that government. This might prejudice many, but there was a private grudge against him, in some of the leading men of the house, and they never left pursuing him until they effected his removal.

THE houfe, finding the governor would not comply, all their meffages to him being exceptionable, as founded upon a fuppofed right in the houfe to call the officers out of the fervice to account before them whenfoever they thought proper, and alfo to order the particular fervices in which the forces flould be employed without leaving it in the governor's power to vary, they made fome alterations in the form of their requeft and and (Dec. 4th) paffed the following vote, "Whereas this 1722. houle have been informed of divers milcarriages in the management of the war in the eaftern country, voted that his excellency the governor be defired to express Col. Walton, that he forthwith repair to Bofton and, when he hath attended upon his excellency, that he would pleafe to direct him to wait on this houfe, that they may examine him, concerning his late conduct in profecuting the war, more effectially referring to the late intended expedition to the fort of Penobfcot." This being more general and not confined to the laying afide the expedition, which was known to be in confequence of orders, the governor was willing it fhould be conftrued favorably and fent for Walton. THE council having fteadily adhered to the governor, he took this opportunity to recommend to the houfe to act jointly with the council in meffages to him of general concern, and at the fame time, in a verbal meffage by the fecretary endeavored to fosten the temper of the house. " Mr. speaker, his excellency commands me to acquaint this honorable house that he has taken into confideration the feveral meffages relating to Col. Walton, and thinks it most agreeable to the constitution and what would tend to keep up a good agreement between the council and house of representatives for all their messages, of a public nature and wherein the whole government is concerned, to be fent up to the council for their concurrence and not immediately to himfelf ; however, that he will give order for Col. Walton's coming up to town and, when he has received an account of his proceedings, the whole court shall have the hearing of him if they defire it." In this way, the governor intended to guard against any undue proceeding, there being no danger of the council's condemning a measure to which a little while before they had given their advice and consent, but the house improved the hint to a very different purpofe, and on the 5th December voted " that a committee, to confift of eleven members of the two houfes iever.

282

284

1722. feven of the house of representatives and four of the council, shall meet in the recess of the court, once in 14 days, and oftener if occasion should require to concert what steps and methods shall be put in practice, relative to the war, and having agreed upon any projections or defigns, to lay them before his excellency for his approbation, who is defired to take effectual care to carry them into speedy execution."* In affairs of government, of what nature foever, this was an innovation in the conftitution, but in matters relative to the war it was taking the powers from the governor, which belonged to him by the constitution, and vesting them in a committee of the two houfes. The council unanimoully nonconcurred the vote, and altercation enfued, between them and the houfe, but the council perfevered. In the mean time the governor was engaged with the house in fresh disputes.

THE committee of the house, which had been sent to the eastern frontiers, returned and, instead of making their report to the governor, which was the condition of his confent to their authority and of his orders to the officers to submit to them, they made their report to the house. This was difingenuous. It would not do to urge that he had no right to make conditions to their votes, for he had given no confent, unless it was conditional,

* This was unprecedented, and had it been only a devolving the powers, by the conftitution intrufted with the whole legiflature, could not be juftified, but it was an affuming the power given to one branch only, the governor, and then devolving it to a few of their own number. Such innovations are dangerous. They may be improved to ferve the purpofes of an arbitrary prince or governor, as well as those of a popular faction. When Richard 2d had a packed parliament devoted to his will and pleasure he procured an act or order, under colour of dispatching business, which invested the whole authority of parliament in the king, with twelve peers and fix commoners. On the other hand, in 1641, the lords and commons having determined to adjourn from the 9th of September to the 20th of October, appointed committees, viz. feven of the lords and forty three of the commons, to take care, during the specific of the most weighty and urgent affairs.

M ASSACHUSETS-BAY.

conditional, and without his confent they could have no 17223 authority.¹ Affoon as he heard of the report, he fent to the houfe for his original order, which he had dellvered to the committee. They answered that they were not possefield of it, but the chairman of the committee had left an attested copy on their files, which he might have if he pleafed, but he refused the copy and infisted upon the original. He then fent for John Wainwright, the chairman of the committee, to attend him in council and there demanded the return of the original order. Wainwright, in general, was what was called in the first year of the reign of the late King William, a motion was made in the house of commons for an address to his majesty to fend performs into Ireland to take account of the numbers of the army and the provisions, which the king assured them he would do. Afterwards, a motion was made that the commons should fend fome of their members and of their own nomination. The king being informed of it fent the following message.

" William R.

- ⁴⁴ His majelty having already declared his refolutions to profecute the war in Ireland with the utmost vigor, and being defirous to use the means that may be most fatisfactory and effectual in order to it, is graciously pleased, that this house do recommend a number of persons, not exceeding seven, to be commissioned by his majesty, to take care of the provisions and such other preparations as shall be necessary for that service.
- "His majefty is further pleafed to let the houfe know that, upon confideration of the address of the 11th of November, he gives them leave to nominate fome perfons to go over to Ireland, to take an account of the number of the army there and the flate and condition of it, who fhall receive his majeftys orders accordingly."
- This is called a condescending meffage. It is certain the house of commons did not think fit to take these powers upon them, but, after a vote of thanks to his majesty,
- ⁴⁴ Refolved, that this houfe doth not think to recommend any member of this houfe to be employed in the fervice of Ireland, for the purpoles expressed in his majesty's gracious message of Saturday last.
- " Refolved, that this houfe doth humbly defire to be excuted from recommending any perfons to his majefty to be employed in the fervice of Ireland; but humbly leave it to his majefty's great wildom to nominate fit perfons for that fervice."

THE HISTORY OF

1722. a prerogative man, but the houfe had enjoined him not to return the order. He acknowledged he had the order in his possession, but defired to be excused from delivering it, the house having directed him to deliver no original papers. The original vote of the house and the governor's order in consequence of it came to my hands by accident.

286

"In the house of representatives, Nov. 11, 1722.

"WHEREAS this house have been informed of repeated abufes and mismanagements among the officers now in pay, tending greatly to the dishonour and damage of the government, and are desirous to use all proper and fuitable methods for the full discovery thereof.— And, to effect the same, have fent a committee from the house to enquire into these rumors and report how they find things.— We the representatives do most earness do most earness of the commanding officer and all others in command there, to pay all proper deference to the vote and order of this house respecting that matter.

John Clarke, speaker."

"BOSTON, Nov. To the officer commanding in the 17. 1722. Schief at the eaftward.

"I do hereby give orders to the commanding officers and all other inferior officers to pay deference to the committee, and do expect that the committee lay first before me their report as captain general and, afterwards, upon the defire of the house of representatives, it shall be laid before them.

Samuel Shute."

THE house expected the governor would complain of them for usurping a military power, and might refuse to part with the original votes or orders by which he had fignified his confent to it, the condition not preceding the exercise of such power.

SOON

SOON after (Dec. 18th) Col. Walton came to town: 1722, and the house fent their committee to defire the govers nor to direct him to attend the house, the next morning, but the governor refused to give such orders, and told the committee that, if his officers were to answer for their conduct, it should be before the whole court. They then fent their door keeper and meffenger to Walton, to let him know the house expected his attendance. He went immediately, but refused to give any account of his proceedings, without leave from the governor. The next day, Walton was ordered to appear before the. whole court, and the governor fent a meffage by the fecretary, to acquaint the house, that they might then afk any questions they thought proper, relative to his. conduct, but they refolved, that their intent, in fending for him, was that he should appear before them. The next day, he fent another meffage to acquaint the houfe that Walton was then before the governor and council, with his journal and if the house inclined to it he defired them to come up, and ask any questions they thought proper. They returned for answer, that they did not think it expedient, for they looked upon it not only their privilege, but duty, to demand, of any officer in the pay and fervice of the government, an account of his management, while employed by the publick.

THIS perhaps, in general, was not the caufe of difpute, but the queftion was, whether he was culpable for obferving the orders which the governor had given contrary to the declared mind and order of the houfe. They then paffed an order for Walton, forthwith to lay his journal before the houfe. This was their laft vote relative to this affair, whilft the governor was in the province. He had, without making it public, obtained his majefty's permiffion to leave the province and go to England. The prejudice, in the minds of the common people, increased every day. It was known to his friends, that as he fat in one of the chambers of his houfe, the window and door of a closet being open, a bullet entered, through 288

1722. through the window and door paffages, and paffed very near him. If fome thought this a mere accident, yet. as he knew he had many virulent enemies, he could not be without fufpicion of a wieked defign, but his principal intention, in going home, was to reprefent the conduct of the house, to call them to answer before his majesty in council, and to obtain a decision of the points in controverly, and thereby to remove all occasion or pretence for further disputes. His departure was very fudden. The Seahorfe man of war, Captain Durell, lying in Nantasket, bound to Barbados to convoy the Saltortugas fleet, the governor went on board her Dec. 27th intending to go from Barbados, the first opportunity, for London. Not one member of the court was in the fecret, nor indeed any perfon in the province except two or three of his domefticks. The wind proved contrary, for three or four days, during which, the owners of the ship Ann; Capt. Finch; which was then loading for London, by employing a great number of hands, had her fitted for the fea and fent her to Nantasket and offered the governor his paffage in her and he went on board and failed the first of January. UPON a review of this controversy with governor Shute, I am apprehensive some of my readers will be apt to doubt the impartiality of the relation. Such steps and fo frequent by one party, without fcarce any attempts by the other, are not usual, but I have made the most diligent fearch into the conduct of the governor, as well as the house, and I am not fensible of having omitted any material fact, nor have I defignedly given a varnish to the actions of one party, or high colouring to those of the other. Some will fay, it was unneceffary to publish to the world transactions which tend to fet the country in an unfavorable light. I profess to give a true relation of facts. I see no difference between publishing false facts for truth and omitting any which are material for the forming a just conception of the reft. Col. Shute had the character of being humane.

humane, friendly and benevolent, but somewhat warm 1722. and fudden upon provocations received, was a lover of eafe and diversions, and for the fake of indulging his inclinations, in those respects, would willingly have avoided controverfy with particular perfons or orders of men in the government; but it was his misfortune to arrive when parties ran high and the oppolition had been violent. With great skill in the art of government, it might not have been impossible for him to have kept both parties in suspence, without interesting himself on either fide, until he had broke their respective connections or the animolity had sublided; but, void of art, with great integrity, he attached himfelf to that party, which appeared to him to be right, and made the other his irreconcilable enemies. His negativing Mr. Cooke, when chose to the council, was no more than what he had an undoubted right to do by charter, but the refufal to accept him as speaker, perhaps, was impolitic, the country in general fuppoling it to be an invalion of the rights of the house and it would have been less exceptionable to have diffolved them immediately, which he had a right to do, than to diffolve them after an unfuccessful attempt to enforce his negative when his right was doubtful in the province, although not fo with the attorney and follicitor general, who supposed the house of reprefentatives claimed a privilege which the house of commons did not. The leading men in the house of representatives did not think fo. That point had not been in question in England fince the reign of King Charles the fecond, when it was rather avoided than determined, and it was not certain that the house of commons in the reign of King George the first would more readily have given up the point than their predeceffors in the time of King Charles. The house, in the other parts of the controverfy, had lefs to fay for themfelves, and, with respect to the attempts upon his military authority, were glad to be excufed by an acknowledgment of their having been in the wrong. The clipping YOL. II. LI his 1722 his falary which, at the higheft, would no more than decently fupport him, was highly refented by him, and I have heard his friends fay, that he would have remained in the government and waited the decifion of the other points, if the two hundred pounds, equal to about fifty pounds sterling, the deduction made, had been reftored.*

I muft acquaint you that another thing, that gives great offence to the minifity, is that they hear the governor is made uncafy in his government and yet they receive no complaints of his mifconduct or male adminification. Colonel Shute is known at court and at the offices of flate under the character of a very worthy gentleman, and one of a fingular good temper, fitted to make any people happy that are under his command. When therefore they find the contrary in New England, they conclude from it that we would have no governor at all from hence, but want to be independent of the crown. Now though this be a firained and moft injurious inference, yet they won't eafily be perfuaded out of it. I could not fatisfy my conficience without mentioning this article, though I am fentible it will afford a handle to my enemies to reproach me as minding the governor's intereft more than the country's."

Dummer's letter 23d April 1721.

" The affairs of the country are, in the opinion of all men here, in desperate circumstances. I was last night in company with the governor who has laid his memorial before the board of trade, where it was maintained that the conduct of the allembly in the affair of the militia was no lefs than high treafon by the laws of England, as appeared to them by their own printed votes. Their report will in a day or two be laid before the regency, and what iffue it will have there I will not prophefy. The governor shewed me the printed votes with regard to the dedication of the thefes of Harvard college, at which I could not but stand amazed. I fee no hopes of faving the country unless the next general affembly will difavow the proceedings The cry of the city here runs exceedingly against of the last. you, and they revive the ftory of 1641. The governor, I affure you, grieves and pities you, but knows not how to help you. The blame of this whole affair is laid here to Mr. C---- and one or two more who, under the notion of patriots, are like to be the inflruments of the loss of that which is one of the dearest things to you in the world. In what light they will appear to posterity they will do well to confider. What remains is only to condole with you the dark state of your affairs."

Extract of a letter from AIr. Neale author of the hiftory of New-England.

UNDER an absolute monatch the people are without 1722; fpirit, wear their chains despairing of freedom. A change of masters is the sum of their hopes and, after insurfections and convulsions, they still continue flaves. In a government founded upon the principle of liberty as far as government and liberty can confiss, such are the sweets of liberty, that we often see attempts for a greater degree of it than will confiss with the established conflication; although anarchy, the greatest and worst bf tyrannies may prove the confequence, until the eyes of the people are opened and they fee the necessity of returning to their former happy state of government and order.

THE lieutenant governor took the chair, under the difadvantage of being obliged to maintain the fame caufe which had forced his predeceffor out of it. Perfonal prejudice against the governor was the cause of affuming rights referved by charter to the crown. The caule now cealed, but power once affumed is not willingly parted with. Mr. Dummer had demeaned himfelf very difcretely. His attachment to the caufe of the governor loft him fome friends and proved a prejudice to him and to his fucceffors, for it had been usual to make an annual grant or allowance to the lieutenant governor, in confideration of his being at hand, or as they expressed it, ready to ferve the province, in case of the governor's absence, but, after the two or three first years from his arrival, they withheld it. Without any mention of the unhappy flate of affairs, in a flort speech to the two houles, he let them know that he would concur with them in every measure for his majesty's fervice and the good of the province. An aged fenator, Mr. Sewall, the only perfor alive who had been an affiftant under the old charter, addreffed himfelf to the lieutenant governor with great gravity and fimplicity, in primitive file, which, however obfolete, may be worth preferving. " If your honor and the honorable board pleafe to give me leave I would speak a word or two, upon this solemn. H 2 occalion. 1922. occasion. Although the unerring providence of God has brought your honor to the chair of government, in a cloudy and tempestuous feason, yet you have this for your encouragement, that the people you have to do with are a part of the Ifrael of God, and you may expect to have of the prudence and patience of Mofes communicated to you, for your conduct. It is evident. that our almighty faviour counfelled the first planters to remove hither and fettle here and they dutifully followed his advice, and therefore he will never leave nor forfake them, nor theirs; fo that your honor must needs be happy in fincerely feeking their happiness and welfare, which your birth and education will incline you to do. Difficilia que pulchra. I promise my self, that they who fit at this board will yield their faithful advice to your honor, according to the duty of their place." THE house thought it neceffary to take immediate measures for their defence and vindication in England. The governor had mentioned nothing more to the lieut. governor than, that he was embarked and intended to return to his government early in the fall. This, the lieutenant governor communicated to the council and the council to the houfe. They fent a committee immediately to the lieutenant governor, to pray him to inform them what he knew of the governor's intended voyage; but he could tell them no more. They then appointed another committee " to prepare and lay before the houfe what they think proper to be done in this critical juncture, in their just and necessary vindication at the court at home," and a ship, Capt. Clark, then ready to fail for London, was detained until the difpatches were ready. Anthony Sanderfon, a merchant of London, had been recommended by Mr. Ropple, of the plantation office, in a letter to the speaker; as a proper person for the province agent. To him the house sent their papers, to be improved as they should order.* THE

In November 1722 died at Salem Daniel Epps, Elq; of the council.

THE house was loth, fuddenly, to recede and, the 1723. day after the governor failed, they appointed a committee, to join with a committee of council, to confider of proper ways, for carrying into execution the report of a committee of war. This was the province of the captain general and the council refused a concurrence. The house then passed another vote, protesting against carrying on an offensive war unless Walton, the colonel, and Moody, the major, should be removed and other fuitable perfons appointed. Before the council paffed upon this vote, the two obnoxious perfons were prevailed upon to write to the lieutenant governor and defire a difmission, provided they might be paid their wages, and, the letters being communicated to the council, they paffed another vote defiring the lieutenant governor to difmifs the officers, agreeable to the letters received from them. This vote, the house non-concurred and infisted upon their own vote, which the council then non-concurred. The house then passed a resolve, that, unless Walton and Moody were difmiffed, they fhould be ne-ceflitated to draw off part of the forces, and fent their refolve 'to be laid upon the council table.' The lieutenant governor, by a meffage, let the house know, that the king had appointed him general of the forces and that he, only, had the power to draw them off, and added, that he expected all meffages from the house should be properly addreffed to him, otherwife he should pay no regard to them. The house were fensible they had goue too far and appointed a committee to wait upon the goue too far and appointed a committee to wait upon the lieutenant governor, to defire they might have leave to withdraw their refolve and declared that, however expreffed, they intended only that they would not vote any further pay and fubfiftence. They perfifted, however, in their refufal to provide for the pay of the two officers, whole difmiffion they required, nor would they make provision for further carrying on the war until other officers were appointed.

Ų 2

AMONG

THE HISTORY OF

294

1723. AMONG the other inftances of additional power to the house they had, by degrees, acquired from the governor and council the keys of the treasury and no monies could be iffued without the vote of the house for that purpofe. This is no more than fome colonies, without charters claim and enjoy, but by the charter, all monies are to be paid out of the treasury 'by warrant? from the governor with advice and confent of the council. The right of the house to originate all acts and orders for raifing monies from the people and to appropriate fuch monies to fuch fervices as they thought proper, was not difputed, but they went further and would not admit that payment flould be made for fuch fervices until they had judged whether they were well performed and had paffed a special order for such payment. Thus they kept every officer dependent, and Walton, becaufe he had not observed their orders to go to Penobscot, but had conformed to the governor's orders, from whom he derived all the authority he had to march any where, was denied his pay. Other matters were alledged against Walton in the course of the dispute, but this feems to have been the principal.

THE exposed state which the frontiers must have been in, if the forces had been drawn off, and they could not be kept there without pay, induced the lieutenant governor to difmifs Walton and to appoint Thomas Westbrooke colonel and commander in chief, whereupon an establishment was settled by the house, præmiums were granted for Indian fealps and prifoners, and an endwas put to the feffion.

THE Indians, we have observed, were instigated by the French to begin the war. The old men were averfe Rallé, with difficulty, prevailed upon the to it. Norridgewocks. The Penoblects were still more difinclined and, after hostilities began, expressed their defires of an accommodation. The St. Francois Indians, who lived upon the borders of Canada, and the St. John's as also the Cape-Sable Indians were fo remote as not to fear the destruction of their villages by the 1723. English. They mixed with the Norridgewocks and Penobscots and made the war general. In the latter part of July the enemy surprized Canso and other harbours near to it and took 16 or 17 fail of fishing veffels, all belonging to the Maffachufets. Governor Phillips happened to be at Canfo and caufed two floops to be manned, partly with volunteer failors from merchants veffels which were loading with fifh, and fent them, under the command of John Eliot of Boston and John Robinson of Cape Ann, in quest of the enemy. Eliot, as he was ranging the coast, espied seven vessels in a harbour called Winnepaug and concealed all his men, except four or five, until he came near to one of the veffels, which had about 40 Indians aboard who were in expectation of another prize falling into their hands. Affoon as he was within hear-ing, they hoifted their pendants and called out, ftrike English dogs and come aboard for you are all prifoners. Eliot anfwered, that he would make all the hafte he could. Finding he made no attempt to escape, they began to fear a tartar and cut their cable, with intent to run ashore, but he was too quick for them and immediately clapped them aboard. For about half an hour they made a brave refistance, but, at length, some of them jumping into the hold, Eliot threw his hand granadoes after them, which made fuch havock, that all which remained alive took to the water, where they were a fair mark for the English shot. From this or a like action, probably took rife, a common expression among English foldiers and fometimes English hunters who, when they have killed an Indian, make their boaft of having killed a black'duck. Five only reached the fhoar.

ELIOT received three bad wounds and feveral of the men were wounded and one killed. Seven veffels, with feveral hundred quintals of fifh, and fifteen of the captives were recovered from the enemy. They had fent many of the prifoners away and nine they had killed in cold blood. The Nova-Scotia Indians had the character of being more favage and cruel than the other nations. ROBINSO 1723 ROBINSON retook two veffels and killed feveral of the enemy. Five other veffels the Indians had carried fo far up the bay, above the harbour of Malagash, that they were out of his reach and he had not men sufficient to land, the enemy being very numerous.

THE loss of fo many men enraged them and they had determined to revenge themfelves upon the poor fifthermen, above twenty of whom yet remained prifoners, at Malagash harbour, and they were all destined to be facrificed to the manes of the flain Indians. The powowing and other ceremonies were performing, when Capt. Blin, in a floop, appeared off the harbour and made the fignal or fent in a token which had been agreed upon between him and the Indians, when he was their prisoner, should be his protection. Three of the Indians went aboard his veffel and agreed for the ranfom both of veffels and captives, which were delivered to him and the ranfom paid. In his way to Bofton he made prifoners of three or four Indians near Cape-Sables and, about the fame time, Capt. Southack took two canoes with three Indians in each, one of which was killed and the other five brought to Bofton.

THIS Nova-Scotia affair proved very unfortunate for the Indians. The Maffachufets frontiers afforded them lefs plunder, but they were in lefs danger. On the 16th of September, between four and five hundred Indians were difcovered upon Arowfick ifland, by a party of foldiers employed as a guard to the inhabitants while at their labour. They immediately made an alarm, by firing fome of their guns, and the inhabitants of the ifland, by this means, had fufficient notice to fhelter themfelves in the fort or garrifon houfe and alfo to fecure part of their goods, before the enemy came upon them.

THEY fired, fome time, upon the fort and killed one man, after which they fell to deftroying the cattle, about 50 head, and plundering the houses, and fet fire to 26 houses, the flames of which the owners beheld from the fort, lamenting the infufficiency of their numbers to fally out and prevent the mischief.

THESE were the Indians which put a ftop to the 1723. march to Penobfcot. + There were in the fort about 40 foldiers, under Capt. Robert Temple and Capt. Penhallow. Capt. Temple was a gentleman, who came over from Ireland with an intent to fettle the country with a great number of families from the north or Ireland, but this rupture with the Indians broke his measures and, having been an officer in the army, Col. Shute gave him a command here. Walton and Harman, upon the first alarm, made all the dispatch they could and, before night, came to the island in two whaleboats with 20 men more. With their joint force the English made an attempt to repel the enemy, but the difproportion in numbers was fuch that, in a bush fight or behind trees, there was no chance and the English retreated to the fort. The enemy drew off the fame night and, paffing up Kennebeck river, met the province floop and firing upon her killed the master, Bartholomew Stretton, and then made an attempt upon Richmond fort, and from thence went to the village of Norridgewock, their head quarters. A man was killed at Berwick, which was the last mischief done by the enemy this first year of the war.

WHEN the general court met in May,* next year, no advice had been received of any measures taken by the governor in England. The houfe chofe their fpeaker and placed him in the chair without prefenting him to the lieut. governor, which he took no notice of. They continued their claim to a share in the direction of the war and infifted, that if any propofals of peace fhould be made by the Indians, they should be communicated to the house and approved by them. They repeated also a vote for a committee of the two houses, to meet in the recess of the court and to settle plans for managing the affairs of the war, which the lieut. governor was to carry into execution, but in this the council again nonconcurred.

Page 281.
Col. Byfield, who had been repeatedly refused by Gov. Shute.
being this year again chosen to the council, the lieut. governor thought fit to refuie his confent allo.

$723. curred. The lieutenant governor's feal being affixed to a belt given to the delegates from the Iroquois, who came to Bofton to a conference, the house passed a refolve " that the feal be defaced and that the feal of the province be affixed to the belt, as the committee of the two houses have agreed," and fent the refolve to the council for their concurrence. The council, inftead of concurring, voted, as well they might, that the refolve contained just matter of offence and therefore they defired the houfe to withdraw it. This produced another refolve from the house still higher, " that the affixing a private feal, + contrary to the agreement of a committee, was a high affront and indignity to them, and therefore they very justly expected the advifers and promoters thereof to be made known to the house. There was a double error in this transaction of the house. the lieutenant governor having the unquestionable right of ordering the form of proceeding in treaties or conferences of this kind, and the house having no authority to direct the king's feal to be applied to any purpofe, the governor being the keeper of the feal, and although in common parlance, called the province feal, which I fuppose led to the mistake yet is properly speaking the king's feal for the use of the province.

THE lieutenant governor took no publick exception to any votes of the houfe this feffion, which we muft prefume to be owing to his apprehensions that, in a short time, a full consideration would be had in England of matters of the same nature during Col. Shute's adminifiration. Before the next fession of the general court (Oct. 23d) the agent Mr. Sanderson transmitted to the speaker,

† This was an equivocal expression. It might be called the governor's private seal in contradistinction to the king's seal, of which he is the keeper, but it was used by the governor as a public person, all military commissions, treaties, &c. being in the name of the governor and under his own seal, by virtue of authority derived from the crown. Civil commissions and other infiruments, in the king's name and with the governor's test, have the king's seal, appointed by him for the provinces while do them.

ipeaker, copy of the heads of complaint exhibited against 1723. the house for encroaching upon his majesty's prerogative in seven instances.

" 1st, IN their behaviour with respect to the trees referved for masts for the royal navy.

2d, FOR refufing to admit the governor's negative upon their choice of a speaker.

3d, Assuming power in the appointment of days for fasting and thankfgiving.

4th, ADJOURNING themselves to a distant day by their own act.

5th, DISMANTLING forts and directing the artillery and warlike flores to other than the cuftody of the captain general or his order.

6th, SUSPENDING military officers and refufing their pay.

7th, APPOINTING committees of their own to direct and muster his majesty's forces."

THE house voted the complaint groundless, and ordered one hundred pounds sterling to be remitted Sanderson, to enable him to employ council to justify the proceedings of the house. The vote being sent to the council was unanimously nonconcurred.

THE house then prepared an answer to the feveral articles of complaint and an address to the king, to which they likewise defired the concurrence or approbation of the council, but they were disapproved and fent back with a vote or message that " in faithfulness to the province and from a tender regard to the house of repretentatives, the board cannot but declare and give as their opinion, that the answer is not likely to recommend this government and people to the grace and favor of his majesty, but on the contrary, has a tendency to render us obnoxious to the royal displeas further."

THE houfe, however, ordered the answer and address to be figned by the speaker and forwarded to Mr. Sanderson, to be improved as they should order.

THE

THE council, thereupon prepared a feperate addrefs to his majesty and transmitted it to the governor, The nonconcurrence of council, with these measures of the house, was refented and the house defired to know what part of their anfwer had a tendency to render the government and people obnoxious. Here the council, very prudently, avoided engaging in controverfy with the house. " It was not their design to enter into a detail, but only to intimate their opinion, that confidering the present circumstances of affairs, some better method might be taken than an abfolute justification." They had shewn their dissatisfaction with the conduct of the house, in every article which furnished matter for the complaint, except that of the fpeaker, and did all in their power to prevent them, but, now this conduct was impeached, the arguments used by the council in a dispute with the houle might be fufficient to justify the council and fet their conduct in an advantageous light, but they would strengthen and increase the prejudice against the country in general. This was an instance of public spirit worthy of imitation.

THE house then refolved "that being apprehensive that the liberties and privileges of the people are ftruck at by governor Shute's memorial to his majefty, it is therefore their duty as well as interest to fend fome fuitable perfon or perfons from hence, to use the best method that may be to defend the constitution and charter privileges." They had no power over the treasury, without the council, and therefore fent this vote for concurrence, but it was refused and the following vote paffed in council inftead of it. " The liberties and privileges of his majefty's good fubjects of this province being in danger, at this prefent critical conjuncture of our public affairs at the court of Great-Britain, and it being our duty as well as interest to use the best methods that may be in defence of the fame, and whereas Jeremiah Dummer, Elq; the agent of this court, is a perfon ot of great knowledge and long experience in the affairs of the province, and has greatly merited of this people, by his printed defence of the charter, and may reasonably be fupposed more capable of ferving us, in this exigence, than any perfon that may be fent from hence, voted, that the faid Mr. agent Dummer be directed to appear in behalf of the province, for the defence of the charter, according to fuch instructions as he shall receive from this court." This vote plainly intimated, that by the late conduct of the houfe the charter of the province was in danger, but the house feem to have overlooked it and concurred with an amendment, " that Mr. Sanderford and a perfon fent from hence be joined with Mr. Dummer." The council agreed, that a perfon should be fent home, but refused to join Sanderson. Before the houfe paffed upon this amendment, they made a further trial to obtain an independency of the council and voted, that there should be paid out of the treasury, to the fpeaker of the house, three hundred pounds fterling, to be applied as the house should order. Near three weeks were fpent in altercations upon this fubject, between the council and the houfe, at length it was agreed that one hundred pounds should be at the disposal of the house and two hundred to be paid to fuch agents as fhould be chosen by the whole court. The house were in arrears to Sanderfon, which they wanted this money to discharge, and then were content to drop him.*

1723.

* I have a paper which I fuppofe was given to the lords chief juffices and the attorney and follicitor general, before the draught of the province charter was fettled, and which contains a variety of propofals for alterations and additions, each of which are marked in the margin with a hand that refembles Sir George Treby's, fome are faid to be already done, others marked Qu. fome intended and fome to be propofed, among the latter I find the following. "The affembly or reprefentatives of the people to have power to appoint and maintain agents on their behalf in England, allowing them fix hundred pounds per annum, though the governor fhould not confent thereunto."

THE

1723:

THE manner of chufing civil officers had been by a joint vote or ballot of council and houfe. This gives a great advantage to the houfe who are four times the number of the board. But to be more fure of the perfon the majority of the houfe were fond of, they chofe Mr. Cooke for agent and fent the vote to the board for concurrence. The council non concurred and infifted on proceeding in the ufual way, which the houfe were obliged to comply with. The choice, however, fell upon the fame perfon and he failed for London the 18th of January.

Col. Weltbrook with 230 men fet out from Kenebeck the 11th February this year, with fmall velfels and whale-boats, and ranged the coaft, as far eaft as Mount Defart. Upon his return, he went up Penobfcot river where, about 32 miles from the anchoring place of the transports, he discovered the Indian caltle or fortress, walled with stockadoes, about 70 feet in length and 50 in breadth, which inclosed 23 well finished wigwams. Without, was a church 60 feet long and 30 broad, very decently finished within and without, also a very commodious house in which the priest dwelt. All was deferted, and all the fuccess attending this expedition was the burning the village. The forces returned to St. Georges the 20th of March.

CAPTAIN Harman was intended, with about 120 men, for Norridgewock, at the fame time, and fet out the 6th Feb. but the rivers were fo open and the ground fo full of water, that they could neither pass by water, nor land and, having with great difficulty reached to the upper falls of Amascoggin, they divided into scouting parties and returned without seeing any of the enemy.

AN attempt was made to engage the fix nations and the Scatacook Indians in the war, and commissioners^{*} were fent to Albany impowered to promife a bounty for every fealp if they would go out against the enemy, but they had no further fuccess than a proposal to fend a large number of delegates to Boston.

" William Tailer and Spencer Phips, Elg'rs.

$723.

THE

THE commissioners for Indian affairs in Albany had 1723. the command of the fix nations and would not have fuffered them to engage in war if they had inclined to it. The Maffachusets commissioners were amused and a large fum was drawn from the government in valuable prefents. to no purpole. No lefs than fixty three Indians came to-Bolton, August 21st, the general court then sitting. A very formal conference was held with them, in the prefence of the whole court, but the delegates would not involve their principals in war; if any of their young men inclined to go out, with any parties of the English, they were at liberty and might do as they pleafed. Twoyoung fellows offered their fervice and were fent downto fort Richmond on Kenebeck river. Capt. Heath the commander ordered his enfign (Coleby) and three of the garrifon to go up the river with them. After they had travelled a league from the fort they judged by the fmell of fire, that a party of the enemy must be near. The Mohawks would go no further until they were ftrengthened by more men and fent to the fort for a whaleboat, with as many men as fhe could carry. Thirteen men were fent and, foon after they had joined the first party, about thirty of the enemy appeared and, after a fmart skirmish, fled to their canoes, carrying off two of their company dead or fo badly wounded as to be unable to walk, and leaving their packs behind. Coleby. who commanded the party, was killed and two others' wounded. The Mohawks had enough of the fervice and could not be prevailed on to tarry any longer and were fent back to Boffon.

SMALL parties of the enemy kept the frontiers in conftant terror and now and then met with fuccefs.

IN April, they killed and took eight perfons at Scarborough and Falmouth. Among the dead, was the ferjeant of the fort, Chubb, whom the Indians took to be capt. Harman and no lefs than 15 of them aimed at him, at the fame time, and lodged eleven bullets in his body. This was lucky for the reft, many more efcaping to the fort 1723. fort than would otherwife have done. In May; they killed two at or near Berwick, one at Wells and two travelling between York and Wells. In: June, they came to Roger Dering's garrifon, at Scarborough, killed his wife and took three of his children, as they were picking berries, and killed two other perfons. In July, Dominicus Jordan, a principal inhabitant and proprietor of Saco, was attacked in his field, by five Indians, but keeping his gun constantly presented, without firing, they did not care to clofe in with him and after receiving three wounds he recovered the garrifon. In August, the enemy appeared westward and, the 13th killed two men at Northfield and, the next day, a father and four of his fons, making hay in a meadow at Rutland, were furprized by about a dozen Indians. The father escaped in the bushes, but the four sons fell a prey to the enemy. Mr. Willard, the minister of Rutland, being abroad, armed, fell into their hands alfo, having killed one and wounded another before he was flain himself. The last of the month, they killed a man at Cochecho and killed or carried away another at Arundel. The eleventh of October, about 70 of the enemy attacked the blockhouse above Northfield and killed and wounded four or five of the English. Col. Stoddard marched immediately with 50 men from Northampton to reinforce Northfield, 50 men belonging to Connecticut having been drawn off the day before. Justice should be done to the government of Connecticut. Their frontiers were covered by the Maffachusets and, if they had not contributed to the charge of the war, it was not probable that the Maffachufets people would have drawn in and left Connecticut frontiers exposed. Nevertheless, they generally, at the request of the Massachusets, sent forces, every year during the fummer, in this and former wars, and paid their wages, the provisions being furnished by this government.

304

IN October, the enemy furprized one Cogfwell and a boat's crew which were with him at Mount Defart.

December

December 25th, about fixty Indians laid fiege to the 1723. fort at Mufcongus or St. Georges. They furprized and took two of the garrifon, who informed them the fort was in a miferable condition, but the chief officer there, ______ Kennedy, being a bold refolute man, the garrifon held out until Col. Weftbrook arrived, with force fufficient to fcatter the beliegers and put them to flight.

THIS fummer alfo, July 14th, the Indians furprized one Capt. Watkins, who was on a fifthing voyage at Canfo, and killed him and three or four of his family upon Durell's island.

Douglàss and other writers applaud the adminifiration for conducting this war with great skill. The French could not join the Indians, as in formers wars. Farties of the English kept upon the march, backwards and forwards, but faw no Indians. Capt. Moulton went up to Norridgewock and brought away fome books and papers of the jesuit Rallé, which discovered that the French were the instigators of the Indians to the war, but he faw none of the enemy. He came off without destroying their houses and church. Moulton was a discreet, as well as brave, man, and probably imagined this instance of his moderation would provoke, in the Indians, the like spirit towards the English.

VOL. II.

X

† Doctor Increase Mather, who made a confiderable figure in the first part of our history, died at Boston August 23d, 1723, in the 85th year of his age. He had been a preacher 66 years, and a minister of the same church 62 years together, was many years president of Harvard college, but rendered himself most confpicuous in the character of agent for the province in England, where his labours and services for several years were very great and his reward very finall.

August 25. A Nipmug Indian, John Quittamug, came to Boston and was entertained by feveral gentlemen who accounted him a great prodigy. Forty years before, he had been remarked as an old Indian and mug now have been above 112 years of

THE

THE next year was unfavorable to the English in 1724. the former part of it, and our loffes, upon the whole, exceeded those of the enemy; but a fuccessful stroke or two against them, in the course of the year, made them weary of war and were the means of an accommodation. The 23d of March they killed --- Smith, ferjeant of the fort at Cape Porpoile. In April one Mitchell was killed at Black-point and two of his fons taken, and about the fame time John Felt, William Wormwell and Ebenezer Lewis were killed at a faw mill on Kennebeck river, and one Thomfon at Berwick met with the fame fate in May, and one of his children was carried into captivity, another child was fealped and left on the ground for dead, but foon after was taken up and carried home alive. In the fame month, they killed elder Knock, at Lamprey river, George Chapley and a young woman at Oyster-river, as they were going home from public worship, and took prifoners a man and three boys at Kingston. The beginning of June a fcout of 30 men, from Oyster-river, were attacked before they left the houses, and two men were shot down. The rest ran upon the Indians and put them to flight, leaving their packs and one of their company who was killed in the skirmish. One Englishman was killed and two taken prifoners at Hatfield, another, with a friend Indian and their horfes, were killed between Northfield and Deerfield.

THIS

age. He conflantly affirmed that in the year 1630, upon a' meffage from the English that they were in want of corn, foonafter their arrival, he went with his father to Boston and carried from the Nipmug country a bushel and an half of corn all the way upon his back, that there was then only one cellar began in the town and that fomewhere near the common. He was in good health, his understanding and memory intire, and travelled on foot 10 miles a day. He lived near the town of Woodstock. His journey to Boston proved as fatal to him as old Thomas Parr's journey to London, furviving it a very short time after his return home, having been feasted by fome of the principal gentlemen here as Parr had been at London:

.

THIS month, news was brought to Bofton of the lofs 1724. of Capt. Josiah Winflow* and 13 of his company, belonging to the fort at St. George's river. There went out 17 men in two whaleboats, April 30. The Indians, it feem!, watched their motions and waited the most convenient time and place to attack them. The next day, as they were upon their return, they found themselves, on a sudden, surrounded with 20 canoes, whofe complement must be an hundred Indians. They attempted to land, but were intercepted, and nothing remained but to fell their lives as dear as they could. They made a gallant defence, and the bravery of the captain was, in an especial manner, applauded. Every. Englishman was killed. Three Indians, I suppose of those called the Cape-Ann Indians, who were of the company, made their efcape and carried to the fort the melancholy news.

ENCOURAGED by this fuccefs, the enemy made a full greater attempt, by water, feized two fhallops at the files of Shoals and, afterwards, other fifting veffels in other harbours and, among the reft, a large fchooner with two fwivel guns, which they manned and cruized about the coalt. A fmall force was thought fufficient to conquer thefe raw failors and the lieutenant governor commiffioned Doctor Jackfon, of the province of Main, in a fmall fchooner with 20 men, and Silvanus Lakeman, of Ipfwich, in a fhallop with 16 men, to go in queft of them. They foon came up with them and, not long after, returned with their rigging much damaged by the fwivel X z guns:

* Capt. Winflow was a young gentleman who had just left the college, but having a mind formed for action engaged in the fervice of his country and lost his life. His father was then of the council. His grandfather, for many years, and his great grandfather for two years, were governors of Plimouth colony. The latter, as we observed in the first part of our history, died a commillioner under Cromwell. General Winflow, who had the command of the provincial forces at Fort Edward in 1757, is younger brother to Capt, Winflow and posseful fains martial fairit. 1724 guns, and Jackfon and feveral of his men wounded, and could give no other account of the enemy than that they had gone into Penobscot.

THE Seahorfe man of war Capt. Duvrell, being then upon the Bofton flation, the lieutenant, mafter and mafter's mate, each of them took the command of a fmall veffel with 30 men each, and went after the Indians, but, it's probable, they were foon tired of this new bufinefs, for they were not to be found, nor do we meet with any further intelligence about them. They took 11 veffels, with 45 men, 22 of whom they killed, and carried 23 into captivity.

AT Groton they killed one man and left dead one of their own number. August 3d, they killed three, wounded one and made another prisoner at Rutland. The 6th, four of them came upon a small house in Oxford, which was built under a hill. They made a breach in the roof and, as one of them was attempting to enter, he received a shot in his belly, from a courageous woman, the only perfon in the houfe, but who had two mulkets and two piftols charged and was prepared for all four, but they thought fit to retreat carrying off the dead or wounded. The 16th a man was killed at Berwick, another man. wounded and a third carried away. The 26th, one was killed and another wounded at Northampton and the 27th, the enemy came to the houfe of John Hanfon, one of the people called quakers, at Dover, and killed or carried away his wife, maid and fix children, the man himfelf being at the friends meeting.*

DISCOURAGED with the ineffectual attempts to intercept the enemy, by parties of our forces marching upon the back of the frontiers, another expedition was refolved upon, in order to furprize them in their principal village at Norridgewock.

* Hanfon went afterwards to Canada and redeemed his wife, three of his children and the maid. Two of his fons were killed, a daughter of 17 years of age he was obliged to leave in their hands. The Indians would permit him to fee and converfe with her, but would not part with her upon any terms. Diffrefling enough !

FOUR companies, confifting in the whole of 208 men, 1724. were ordered up the river Kenebeck, under Capt. Harman, Captain Moulton, Captain Bourn and lieutenant Bean. Three Indians, of the fix nations, were prevailed with to accompany our forces. The different accounts given by the French and English of this expedition may afford fome entertainment. Charlevoix, who I suppose was about that time in Canada and might receive there or from thence the account given by the Indians themfelves. relates it in this manner. " The 23d of August, + 1724. eleven hundred men, part English, part Indians, came up to Norridgewock. The thickets, with which the Indian village was furrounded, and the little care taken by the inhabitants to prevent a furprize, caufed that the enemy were not discovered, until the very instant when they made a general discharge of their guns and their shot had penetrated all the Indian wigwams. There were not above fifty fighting men in the village. Thefe took to their arms and ran out in confusion, not with any expectation of defending the place against an enemy who were already in possession, but to favor the escape of their wives, their old men and children, and to give them time to recover the other fide of the river, of which the English had not then poffeffed themfelves.

"THE noife and tumult gave father Rallé notice of the danger his converts were in. Not intimidated, he went to meet the enemy, in hopes to draw all their attention to himfelf and fecure his flock at the peril of his own life. He was not difappointed. Affoon as he appeared, the Englifh fet up a great fhout, which was followed by a flower of flot, and he fell down dead near to a crofs which he had erected in the midft of the village, feven Indians, who accompanied him to fhelter him with their own bodies, falling dead round about him. Thus died this kind fhepherd, giving his life for his fheep, after a painful miffion of thirty feven years. The Indians, who were all in the greateft confternation $724. at his death, immediately took to flight and croffed the river, fome fwimming and others fording. The enemy purfued them, until they had entered far into the woods. where they again gathered together to the number of an hundred and fifty.* Altho? more than two thousand thot had been fired upon them, yet there were no more than thirty killed and fourteen wounded. The English. finding they had no body left to refift them, fell first to pillaging and then burning the wigwams. They fpared the church, fo long as was necessary for their shamefully profaning the facred yesfels and the adorable body of Jefus Chrift, and then fet fire to it. At length they withdrew, with fo great precipitation that it was rather a flight, and they feemed to be ftruck with a perfect panick. The Indians immediately returned to their village, where they made it their first care to weep over the body of their holy missionary, whilst their women were looking out for herbs and plants for healing the They found him that in a thouland places, wounded. fcalped, his skull broke to pieces with the plows of hatchets, his mouth and eyes full of mud, the bones of his legs fractured and all his members mangled an hundred different ways. Thus was a priest treated in his mission, at the foot of a cross, by those very men who have fo ftrongly exaggerated the pretended inhumanity of our Indians, who have never made fuch carnage upon the dead bodies of their enemies. After his converts had railed up and oftentimes killed the precious remains, fo tenderly and fo justly beloved by them, they buried him in the fame place where, the evening before, he had celebrated the facred mysteries, namely, where the altar flood, before the church was burnt."

X 3

† 12th old file.

at

BESIDES the great error in the number of the English forces, there are many embellishments in this relation in favor of the Indians and injurious to the English. Not fatisfied with the journal alone which was

* He must mean men, women and children, if there were but so fighting men in allwas given in by Capt. Harman, I took from Capt. Moul- 1724. ton as minute and circumstantial an account as he could give of this affair.

THE forces left Richmond fort, on Kennebeck river, the 8th of Angust, O.S. The 9th, they arrived at Taconick, where they left their whaleboats, with a lieutenant and 40 of the 208 men to guard them, With the remaining forces, the 10th, they began their march, by land, for Norridgewock. The fame evening, they difcovered and fired upon two Indian women, one of them, the daughter of the well known Bomazeen, they killed, the other, his wife, they took prifoner. From her, they received a full account of the state of Norridgewock. The 12th, a little after noon, they came near to the village. It was supposed that part of the Indians might be at their corn-fields, which were at fome distance, and, therefore, it was thought proper to divide this fmall army. Harman, with about 80 men, chofe to go by the way of the fields, and Moulton, with as many more, were left to march strait to the village, which about 3 o' clock fuddenly opened upon them. There was not an Indian to be feen, being all in their wigwams. Our men were ordered to advance foftly and to keep a profound filence. At length, an Indian came out of one of the wigwams and, as he was making water, looked round him and difcovered the English close upon him. He immediately gave the war whoop and ran in for his gun. The whole village, confisting of about 60 warriors, besides old men, women and children, took the alarm, and the warriors ran to meet the English, the rest fied to fave their lives. Moulton, instead of fuffering his men to fire at random through the wigwams, charged every man not to fire, upon pain of death, until the Indians had discharged their guns. It happened as he expected; in their furprize they overfhot the English and not a man was hurt. The English then discharged in their turn and made great slaughter, but every man still kept his rank. X 4 The 1724 The Indians fired a fecond volley and immediately fied towards the river. Some jumped into their canoes, but had left their paddles in their houfes, others took to fwimming and fome of the talleft could ford the river, which was about 60 feet over, and, the waters being low, it was no where more than fix feet deep. The English purfued, fome furnished themselves with paddles and took to the Indian canoes which were left, others waded into the river. They foon drove the Indians from their canoes, into the river, and shot them in the water, and they conjectured that not more than fifty of the whole village landed on the other fide, and that fome of them were killed before they reached the woods.

THE English, then, returned to the town, where they found the jefuit, in one of the wigwams, firing upon a few of our men, who had not purfued after the enemy. He had an English boy in the wigwam with him, about 14 years of age, who had been taken about 6 months before. This boy he shot through the thigh and, afterwards, stabbed in the body, but, by the care of the furgeons, he recovered. I find this act of cruelty in the account given by Harman upon oath. Moulton had given orders not to kill the jefuit, but, by his firing from the wigwam, one of our men being wounded, a lieutenant, Jaques, stove open the door and shot him through the head. Jaques excufed himfelf to his commanding officer, alledging that Ralle was loading his gun, when he entered the wigwain, and declared that he would neither give nor take quarter. Moulton allowed that fome answer was made by Rallé which provoked Jaques, but doubted whether it was the fame as reported, and always expressed his disapprobation of the action. Mog, a famous old chief among the Indians, was thut up in another wigwam and firing from it killed one of the three Mohawks. His brother was fo enraged that he broke down the door and fhot Mog dead. The English, in their rage, followed and killed the poor fquaw and two helpless children. Having cleared the village of the enemy.

enemy, they then fell to plundering and deftroying the 1724. wigwams. The plunder of an Indian town confifted of but a little corn, it being not far from harveft, a few blankets, kettles, guns, and about three barrels of powder, all which was brought away. New-England puritans thought it no facrilege to take the plate from an idolatrous roman catholic church, which I fuppofe was all the profanenefs offered to the facred veffels. There were fome expressions of zeal against idolatry, in breaking the crucifixes and other imagery which were found there.* The church itself, a few years before, had been built by carpenters from New-England. Beaver and other Indian furs and skins fet up the church, and a zeal against a false religion destroyed the ornaments of it.

HARMAN and the men who went to the cornfields did not come up till near night, when the action was over. They all, of both parties, lodged in the wigwams, keeping a guard of 40 men. The next morning, they found 26 dead bodies, befides that of the jefuit, and had one woman and three children prifoners. Among the dead were Bomazeen, Mog, Job, Carabefett, Wiffememet, and Bomazeen's fon in law, all noted warriors. They marched, early, for Taconick, being in fome pain for their men and whaleboats, but found all fafe. Chriftian, one of the Mohawks, was fent, or of his own accord returned, after they had began their march, and fet fire to the wigwams and to the church and then joined the company again, The 16th they all arrived at Richmond fort. Harman went to Bofton with the fcalps, and, being the chief in command, was made a lieutenant

When Sir Edmund Andros was governor, in 1688, in a voyage 'eaftward in the Rofe frigate, he put in to Penobfcot, and finding that Caftine had fied he 'entered his houfe and feized and brought away a quantity of arms, ammunition and goods, which were lodged there for fupplies to the Indian enemy, but an altar with pictures and other ornaments he left untouched. This might caufe fufpicions of his being a favorer of popery, but a good protestant would not have been cylpable for the fame tenderness. 1724. lieut. colonel for an exploit in which Moulton was the principal actor, who had no diftinguishing reward, except the applause of the country in general.[†] This has often been the case in much more important fervices. The Norridgewock tribe never made any figure since this blow.

ridgewock tribe never made any figure fince this blow, ENCOURAGED by this fuccefs, Col. Weftbrook was ordered to march with 300 men acrofs from Kennebeck to Penobfcot, which he performed with no other advantage than exploring the country which, before, was little known. Other parties were ordered up Amafeconti and Amarefcoggin, and a fecond attempt was made upon Norridgewock, but no Indians were to be found,

THE frontiers, however, continued to be infefted. September the 6th, an English party of fourteen went from Dunstable in fearch of two men who were missing. About 30 Indians lay in wait and shot down fix and took three prisoners. A second party went out and lost two of their number. The western frontier seems to have been better guarded, for, although often alarmed, they were less annoyed.

THE government increased the præmium for Indian fcalps and captives to one hundred pounds. This encouraged John Lovewell to raife a company of voluncouraged John Lovewell to raife a company of volunteers, to go out upon an Indian hunting. January 5th he brought to Boston a captive and a fcalp, both which he met with above 40 miles beyond Winnepessaukee lake. Going out a second time, he discovered ten Indians round a fire, all assess. He ordered part of his company to fire, who killed three, the other seven, as they were rifing up, were fent to rest again by the other part of the company referved for that purpose. The ten scalps were brought to Boston 3d of March. Emboldened by repeated success, he made a third attempt and went out with 33 men. Upon the 8th of May, they discovered difcovered an Indian upon a point of land which joined 1725. to a great pond or lake. They had fome fufpicion that he was fet there to draw them into a fnare and that there must be many Indians near, and therefore laid down their packs, that they might be ready for action, and then marched near two miles round the pond to come at the Indian they had feen. The fellow remained, although it was certain death to him and, when the English came within gun shot, discharged his piece, which was loaded with beaver shot, and wounded Lovewell and one of his men, and then immediately fell himself and was scalped. His name ought to have been transmitted as well as that of M. Curtips who jumped into the gulf or chasm, upon less rational grounds, to fave his country.

⁺ Capt. Moulton, afterwards, was, many years together, a member of the council, colonel of a regiment in the expedition to Cape-Brcton in 1745, and with reputation fulfained the first military and civil offices in the county of York. He died at York, in the year 1767.

THE Indians, who lay concealed, feized all the Englifh packs, and then waited their return at a place convenient for their own purpole. One of the Indians being difcovered, the reft, being about 80, rofe, yelled and fired and then ran on with their hatchets with great fury. The Englifh retreated to the pond to fecure their rear, and, although fo unequal in numbers, continued five or fix hours till night came on. Captain Lovewell, his lieutenant Farwell, and enfign Robins were foon mortally wounded and, with five more, were left dead on the fpot. Sixteen efcaped and returned unhurt, but were obliged to leave eight of their wounded companions in the woods without provisions, their chaplain, Mr. Fry of Andoyer, was one, who had behaved with great bravery and fcalped one Indian in the heat of the action, but perifhed himfelf for want of relief.

One of the eight, afterwards, came in to Berwick and another to Saco. This misfortune difcouraged fcalping parties. But Indians, as well as English, withed to be at peace. After Ralle's death, they were at liberty to follow their inclinations. The Penobscot tribe, however, being best disposed, were first founded. An Indian hostage and a captive were permitted, upon their parole, to go home in the winter of 1724, and they came back 1725. to the fort at St. George's the 9th of February, accompanied with two of the tribe, one a principal fachem or chief. They brought an account that, at a meeting of the Penoblcots, it was agreed to make propolals of peace. The fachem or chief was fent back, with the other Indian, and promifed to return in 23 days and bring a deputation, to confift of feveral other chiefs, with him. but Capt. Heath, having gone out upon a march from Kennebeck, acrofs the country, to Penobfcot, fell upon a deferted village of about 50 Indian houses, which he burned, but faw none of the inhabitants. The Indians, who went from St. George's, knew nothing of this action until they came home, and it feems to have difcouraged them from returning according to their promife, and the treaty, by this means, was retarded. But upon new intimations, in June following, John Stoddard and John Wainwright, Efq;'s were commiffioned by the lieutenant governor and fent down to St. George's, to treat with fuch Indians as fhould come in there and fettle preliminaries of peace.

316 THE HISTORY OF

A ceffation of arms was agreed upon* and four delegates came up, foon after, to Bolton and figned a treaty of

* The treaty had like to have been prevented by the indifcretion of the crew of an English floop. July 9th, as Castin was at anchor near Neskett, in a small bark, with an Indian boy and an English lad, Samuel Trask of Salem, whom Callin had redeemed from the Indians. The English firing upon the bark, Callin was obliged to quit her and with his two boys fled into the woods. The mafter of the English vessel called to him and engaged to do him no harm, if he would come back and trade with him, which was his bufinefs there, and not only kept out a white flag but fent him a paffport or fafe conduct in writing. Having by these affurances drawn him aboard his vessels again with the two boys, they fecured the captive and told Caffin they would give him a bag of bifcuit for the ranfom of the captive, but that the veffel and every thing on board was lawful prize. He was obliged, with his Indian, to quit the veffel, which he was told was a favor, and it feems was foon repented of, for one of the English feized the Indian, upon which Caffin fired and fhot the Englishman dead, and then made his efcane with the Indian into the woods. Caftin's letter to Alr. Dum-Belides ever, 23 July 1725.

of peace, and, the next year, the lieutenant governor in 1725. perfon, attended by gentlemen of the court and others, and the lieutenant governor of New-Hampshire, with gentlemen from that province, ratified the fame at Falmouth in Calco-bay. This treaty has been applauded as the most judicious which has ever been made with the Indians. 'A long peace fucceeded it.+

THE pacific temper of the Indians, for many years after, cannot be attributed to any peculiar excellency in this treaty, there being no articles in it of any importance, differing from former treaties. It was owing to the fublequent acts of government in conformity to the treaty. The Indians had long been extremely defirous of trading houfes to fupply them with necessaries and to take off their furs, skins, &c. This was promised by governor Shute, at a conference, but the general court, at that time, would make no provision for the performance. Mr. Dummer promifed the fame thing. The court, then, made provision for trading houses at St. George's, Kenebeck and Saco rivers, and the Indians foon found that they were fupplied with goods upon better terms than they could have them from the French, or even from private English traders. Acts or laws were made, at the fame time, for reftraining private trade with the Indians, but the supplies, made by the province at a cheaper rate than private traders could afford, would have broke up their trade without any other provision, and laws would have fignified little without that. Mr. Dummer engaged that the Indians should be fupplied with goods at as cheap rates as they were fold in Boston. This was afterwards construed favorably for the government. The goods, being bought by wholefale, were fold to the Indians at the retail price, † Belides Mr. Dummer, lieut. governor of Malfachusets, John Wentworth, Efq; lieut. governor of New-Hampshire, and Paul Malcarene, Elq; one of the council and a commillioner of the government of Nova-Scotia, were parties to this treaty. In October 1725 died at Ipfwich Samuel Appleton, Efq; of the council.

1725. in Bofton, and a feeming profit, by the commiffary's account, accrued to the government; but, when the charge of trading houfes, truckmafters, garrifons, and a veffel employed in transporting goods was deducted, the province was still a tributary to the Indians every year. However, it was allowed to be a well judged measure, tended to preferve peace and was more teputable than if a certain pension had been every year paid for that purpose.

DELEGATES from all the tribes of Indians, particularly the Norridgewocks, not having been prefent at this first treaty, another was thought necessary the next year, when the former was renewed and ratified. It was most acceptable to the Indians to hold their treaties near their own fettlement and, in a proper feason of the year, it was an agreeable tour to the governors or commanders in chief and the gentlemen accompanying them.

To bring this war to a clofe, we have passed over the other affairs of the government for a year or two past. Soon after Mr. Coolee's arrival in London governor Shute exhibited a fecond memorial against the house of representatives, for matters transacted after he left the province. The principal articles of complaint were the feveral orders relative to the forts and forces, which, he fays, the house had taken out of the hands of the lieut. governor, and the affront offered to the lieut. governor in ordering his feal to be effaced upon the belt of wampum. Several other things feem to be brought in to increase the resentment against them, as their chuling Mr. Cooke, who had been at the head of all the measures complained of in the first memorial, for their agent; their refuling to confer with the council upon a money bill; their endeavoring by their votes to leffen the members of the council in the efteem of the people; their withholding his falary in his abfence; and their affuming more and more the authority of government into their hands. The council, in this memorial memorial, are also complained of, they having put their 1725, negative to the vote for chusing Mr. Cooke, and yet, afterwards, joined in election with the house, when they had reason to suppose, by the great superiority of the house in number, that he would be the perform.

M_R. agent Dummer, who was to act jointly with Mr. Cooke, made an attempt to reconcile the governor to him, but he refufed to fee him, and the attempt offended Mr. Cooke also and occasioned warm difcourse between him and Dummer, which caused the latter to refuse to act in concert, especially as Mr. Cooke had shewn him a private influection from the house, by which their defence against the charge of invading the royal prerogative was committed to Mr. Cooke and Mr. Sanderson, to the exclusion of Mr. Dummer.

AFTER divers hearings upon the fubject matter of the complaints, the reports of the attorney and follicitor general, of the lords committee and, finally, the determination of his majesty in council, were all unfavorable to the house of representatives.*

THE feveral acts or votes of the house relative to the king's woods, and to the forts and forces feem to have been generally deemed indefenfible, the agents were advised to acknowledge them to be fo, and it was so far relied upon, that they would be fo acknowledged in the province, as that no fpecial provision was thought neceffary for the regulation of their future conduct, the charter being express and clear. But the governor's power to negative the fpeaker and the time for which' the houfe might adjourn were points not fo certain. What was called an explanatory charter was therefore thought neceffary, and fuch a charter accordingly paffed the feals. By this charter, the power of the governor to negative a fpeaker is expressly declared, and the power of the house to adjourn themselves is limited to two days. With respect to the latter, perhaps, this new charter may properly enough be called explanatory, the governor

* Appendiz.

1725. governor having the power, by the principal charter, of adjourning the affembly and yet, from the nature of the thing, it was neceffary that the house, a part of that affembly, fhould have the power of adjourning themfelves, for a longer or fhorter time; but the power of negativing a speaker seems to be a new article, wherein the charter is filent; fo that whatever right it might be apprehended the king had to explain his own patents, where there was ambiguity, yet when an alteration is to be made in the charter, or a new rule established in any point wherein the charter is filent, the acceptance of the people, perhaps, is neceffary. This feems to have been the reafon of leaving it to the option of the general court, either to accept or refuse the explanatory charter. It was intimated at the fame time that, if the charter should be refused, the whole controversy between the governor and the house of representatives would be carried before the parliament. Had the two points mentioned in the explanatory charter, or the conduct of the houfe relative to them, been all that was to be carried into parliament, the general court, probably, would not have accepted this charter. They would have urged that it was not certain that a houfe of commons would have determined that the king, by his governor, had a right to negative the speaker of a house of representatives in the colonies, efpecially as the attorney general had inferred this right from the right of negativing the speaker of the house of commons; but it was their misfortune that in the other articles of complaint the house was generally condemned in England, the ministry were highly incenfed and it was feared the confequence of a parliamentary enquiry would be an act to vacate the charter of the province. The temper of the house was much changed and, although there were feveral members, who had been active in all the measures which brought this difficulty upon the country, still refolute to rifque all, rather than by their own act give up any one privi-lege, yet a major vote was carried in the house for accepting accepting the charter, and in fuch terms as would induce 1725; one to imagine it rather the grant of a favor than the deprivation of a right.* It has been faid that the English are Islanders and therefore inconstant. Transplanted to the continent they are, nevertheles, Englishmen. When we reflect upon the many inflances of frequent fudden changes, and from one extreme to the other, in ancient times, in the parliament of England, we may well enough expect, now and then, to meet with the like inflances in the affemblies of the English colonies. This was the iffue of the unfortunate controvers with governor Shute, unless we allow that it was the oceasion also of the controvers with his fucces of the inprobable.

THE governor was offended with Mr. Dummer, for receiving grants from the court made to him for his fervice as commander in chief, it being expected that when the governor is abfent, with leave, his falary fliould be continued, one half of which, by a royal inftruction, is to be allowed to the lieutenant governor; but the houfe took a more frugal method and made grants, of little Y

January 15. 1725.

In the houle of representatives.

WHEREAS his honor the lieutenant governor hath laid before this court in their prefent fession, for their acceptance, an explanatory charter received from his grace the duke of Newcaftle, with a copy of his majefty's order in council concerning the fame, wherein his majefty has been pleafed to confirm the charter granted by their late majefties king William and queen Mary, in which former charter there being no express mention made relating to the choice of a speaker and the house's power of adjourning, to both which points, in the faid explanatory charter, his majefty has been pleafed to give particular directions, We his majefty's loyal and dutiful fubjects, being very defirous to fignalize our duty and obedience, which we at all times owe to his most excellent majesty, have and do hereby accept of the faid explanatory charter, and shall act in conformity thereto for the future, not doubting but that we shall thereby recommend his majelly's loyal and dutiful fubjects, the inhabitants of this province, to his further most gracious favor and protection.

> In council. Read and concurred. Confented to: Wm. Dummss.

THE HISTORY OF

1725. more than one half the governor's usual falary, to the lieutenant governor immediately, any part of which he could very ill afford to spare from his own support. His pacific measures and accommodation or fuspension of fome of the controverted points might be another caufe of coldness, at least, between the governor and him;

ANOTHER affair occasioned a mark of royal difpleafure upon the lieutenant governor. Synods had been frequent under the first charter, either for suppressing errors in principles, or immoralities in practice, or for eftablishing or reforming church government and order, but under the new charter no fynod had ever been convened. A convention of ministers had been, annually, held at the time for election of the council. This might have been in many respects useful, but it was thought could not have that weight for promoting any of the forementioned purposes which a fynod convened and, perhaps, their refult ratified by the government, would have. There were divers ancient members in both houses who had not then lost their affection for the platform, and an application* made by the ministers for calling

- * To the very honorable William Dummer, Efq; lieut. governor. and commander in chief. To the honorable the councellors. To the honored the representatives in the great and general court of hismajesty's province of the Massachusets bay assembled and now fitting. A memorial and address humbly presented. At a general convention of ministers from several parts of the province at Boston, May 27. 1725.
- Confidering the great and visible decay of piety in the country and the growth of many miscarriages, which we fear may have provoked the glorious Lord in a feries of various judg. ments wonderfully to diffres us. Confidering alfo the laudable example of our predeceffors to recover and establish the faith and order of the gospel in the churches and provide, against what immoralities may threaten to impair them, in the way of general fynods convened for that purpose, and confidering that about forty five years have now rolled away fince these churches have feen any fuch conventions. It is humbly defired that the honored general court would express their concern for the interefts of religion in the country, by calling the feveral churches m calling a fynod was granted in council, but the house 1725; did not concur. Afterwards, by a vote of both houses, it was referred to the next feffion, to which the lieut. governor gave his confent. Opposition was made by the episcopal ministers, but a doubt of fuccess, in the province, caused them to apply in England, I suppose to the bission of London. The king being abroad, an instruction came from the lords justices to succease all proceedings and the lieutenant governor received a reprimand for "giving his confent to a vote of reference and neglecting "to transmit an account of so remarkable a transfaction." A stop was put to any further proceeding in the affair hor has any attempt for a fynod been made frace.

2

THE

in the province to meet by their paffors and meffengers in a fynod, and from thence offer their advice upon that weighty cafe which the circumftances of the day do loudly call to be confidered. — What are the mifcarriages whereof we have reafon to think the judgments of heaven, upon us, call us to be more generally fenfible, and what may be the most evangelical and effectual expedients to put a flop unto those or the like mifcarriages? This propofal we humbly make in hopes that, if it be profecuted, it may be followed with many defirable conféquences worthy the study of those whom God has made and we are so happy to enjoy as the nursing fathers of our churches. Cotton Mather,

> In the name of the ministers affembled in their general convention.

† I mult acquaint you that the bifhop of London has laid before the lords juffices a written authentic copy of our miniflers memorial to the general court to impower them to meet and act in a tynod, confented to by the lieutenant governor, and their excellencies are very much displeased with his conduct herein. It is thought here that the clergy fhould not meet in fo public and authoritative a manner without the king's confent ashead of the church, and that it would be a bad precedent for diffenters here to alk the fame privilege, which, if granted, would be a fort of vying with the established church. It has also been infinuated that this fynod would have come to fome refolutions to the prejudice of the church of England, if they had been permitted to convene. However this may be, it is certainly my duty to apprize the affembly of it for their better direction in the approaching feffion, when, I fuppole, the matter will be refumed." Dummer's letter, oft Sept. 1725.

THE HISTORY OF

324

$726. THE remainder of Mr. Dummer's fhort administration was eafy to him. The war being over, the principal ground of difpute, the ordering the forces, ceafed. Other affairs, relative to the treasury, the passing upon accounts and the form of fupplies he fuffered to go on according to the claim of the house. Mr. Cooke, the first election after his return from England, May 1726, was chose of the council. This was a mark of the house's approbation of his conduct in the agency, although it had not been attended with fuccefs. The lieutenant governor did not think it convenient to offend the house by a negative. The finall allowance made him as a, falary, about two hundred and fifty pounds sterling per annum, he alfo acquiesced in for the sake of peace. The governor was expected by almost every ship for a year or two together, but by fome means or other was delayed until the fummer of 1727, when he was upon the point of embarking, but the fudden death of the king prevented.* The principal caufe of delay feems to have been the infufficiency of the falary which had been granted for his fupport and the uncertainty whether the affembly would make an addition to it. + UPON

- * "I don't know when or on board what thip the governor intends to embark for his government. He fays he won't go but in a man of war, for fear of meeting with a pirate, but as there is no prospect of a king's thip going this year to any part of the continent, I believe, he will think better of it and take his paffage in Capt. Cary, who will fail in about a month." Dummer's letter, 23d April 1727.
- * "Col. Shute having petitioned his majefly in council to fettle a fuitable falary on him and all the fucceeding governors of New England, the lords of the privy council, inflead of fending me a written meffage to attend, as is ufual in other cafes, made a peremptory order of the 18th of February laft, requiring me to attend their board on the Wednefday following and not to fail on any pretence whatfoever. When I came, the fords fent for Col. Shute to go in by himfelf, and after, for me and Mr. Newman, the agent for New-Hampfhire. They afked whether, if his majefly fhould think fit to fend Mr. Shute back again to his government, I believed the country would receive and fupport him handfomely. To this I anfwered, that I had

RO

UPON the accession of King George the fecond, a 1727. gentleman who, it is faid, was in particular efteem with the king himfelf was appointed governor of New-York and the Jerfies, in the room of Mr. Burnet, whofe administration had, in general, been very acceptable to those colonies and approved in England. The bilhop, his father, had likewife been a most steady friend to the house of Hanover. Governor Burnet's fortune being reduced in the general calamity of the year 1720, he parted with a place in the revenue of f. 1200 per annum and received commissions for these governments, with a view to his retrieving his fortune in a course of years, He thought it hard, in fo fhort a time, to be fuperfeded. for although the Maffachufets and New-Hampshire were given to him, yet he was to part with very profitable posts for fuch as, at beft, would afford him no more than a decent fupport, an eafy administration for one which he forefaw would be extremely troublefome. He complained of his hard fate and it had a visible effect upon his spirits. Col. Shute was provided for, more to his fatisfaction than if he had returned to his government, a penfion of f.400sterling per annum being fettled upon him, to be paid out of the 4⁺/₂ per cent duty raifed in the West-India islands. The West-Indians, who would perhaps have been content if it had been applied to one of their own governors who had been fuperfeded, have taken exception to the payment of it to a governor of the northern colonies.*

3

THE

no inftructions upon this fubject, but my private opinion was that they would, for they who had lately in fo dutiful a manner accepted the royal explanatory charter would not fail to fhow a proper regard to any perfon whom his majefty fhould pleafe to fend over as his reprefentative, of which my lord Townfend, particularly, expressed his fatisfaction. There was not a word faid as to the quantum of the falary, but 1 find fince it is flated at f.1000 flerl. per annum for Maffachusets and 200 for New-Hampshire, and the king will recommend it to the two provinces under his fign manual." Dummer's let. The duties granted by Barbados and the leeward islands upon their own produce, to be disposed of by the crown, are the only

THE earthquake on the 29th of October 1727, 1727. although not confined to the Maffachufets, was fo remarkable an event in providence that we may be excused if we give a circumstantial account of it. About 40 minutes after ten at night, when there was a ferene sky and calm but sharp air, a most amazing noise was heard, like to the roaring of a chimney when on fire, as fome faid, only beyond comparison greater, others compared it to the noife of coaches upon pavements and thought that of ten thousand together would not have exceeded it. The noife was judged by fome to continue about half a minute before the flock began, which increased gradually and was thought to have continued the space of a minute before it was at the heighth and, in about half a minute more, to have been at an end by a gradual decreafe. When the terror is fo great, no dependance can be placed upon the admeasurement of time in any perfon's mind, and we always find very different apprehenfions of it. The poife and flock of this and all earthguakes which preceded it in New-England were observed to come from the west or northwest and go off to the east or fouth east. At Newbury and other towns upon Merrimack river the flock was greater than in any other part of Maffachusets, but no buildings were thrown down, part of the walls of feveral cellars fell in and the tops of many chimneys were shook off. At New York it feems to have been equal to what it was in the Maffachufets, but at Philadelphia it was very fenfibly weaker and, in the colonies fouthward, it grew lefs and lefs until it had spent itself or became insensible. ' The seamen upon the coast supposed their vessels to have struck upon a fhoal of loofe ballast. More gentle shocks were frequently felt in most parts of New-England for feveral months > only inflances of the kind in the colonies. Jamaica is exempt. It was faid in parliament, in the reign of Charles the 2d, that this duty was confented to upon condition the planters fhould be releafed from a duty of 40 wt. fugar per head referved when the king granted the lands. Jamaica was chiefly difposed of by Cromwell, I suppose, free from the like burden or charge.

months after. There have feldom paffed above 15 or 20 1727. years without an earthquake, but there had been none, yery violent, in the memory of any then living. There was a general apprehension of danger of destruction and death, and many, who had very little fense of religion before, appeared to be very serious and devout penitents, but, too generally, as the fears of another earthquake went off, the religious impressions went with them and they, who had been the subjects of both, returned to their former course of life.

THE trade of the province being in a bad flate, and there being a general complaint of fcarcity of money the old fpirit revived for increasing the currency by a further emission of bills of credit. It would be just as rational when the blood in the human body is in a putrid corrupt flate to increase the quantity, by luxurious living, in order to reftore health. Some of the leading men, among the reprefentatives, were debtors and a depreciating currency was convenient for them. A bill was projected for fortifying the fea ports. The town of Bofton was to expend ten thousand pounds in forts and stores and, to enable them to do it, thirty thousand pounds was to be iffued in bills and lent to the town for thirteen years, Salem, Plimouth, Marblehead, Charlestown, Glocester, and even Truro, on the cape, were all to be supplied with bills of credit for the like purposes. After repeated nonconcurrence and long altercation, the council were prevailed. upon to agree to the bill. When it came to the lieutenant governor, he laid the king's instruction before the council and required their opinion, upon their oaths, whether confiftent with the inftruction he could fign the bill and they answered he could not. Not only the lieutenant governor, but feveral of the council, were dependent upon the house for the grant of their falaries, and this dependence, was improved as, in divers instances, it had been formerly. The house referred the confideration of allowance to the next feffion and defired the court might The lieut. governor let them know, by a meffage, rife. Y 4 that.

1727. that he apprehended his fmall fupport was withheld from him, becaufe he would not fign a bill contrary to his instructions. They replied, that he had recommended to them, the making provision for fortifying the province and, now they had paffed a bill for that purpofe, he refuled to fign it, and they were obliged, in prudence and faithfulness to their principals, to come into a vote refer-ring allowances and other matters to another fession, when a way may be found to enable the inhabitants to pay into the treafury again fuch fums as may be drawn out for gratuities* and allowances. After a recess of about a fortnight, an expedient was found. Instead of a bill for fortifying, another was prepared with a fpecious title, "An act for raifing and fettling a public revenue for and towards defreying the neceffary charges of the government by an emiffion of f. 60,000 in bills of credit." This was done to bring it within the words of the inftruction, which reftrained the governor from confenting to the iffuing bills of credit, except for charges of government. The interest of 4 per cent or f_{\star} . 2400—was to be applied annually to the public charges and gave colour for iffuing, the principal fum of 1.60,000. The lieutenant governor was prevailed upon to fign it and, the fame day, the house made the grant of his falary and the ufual allowance to the judges, most of whom were members of the council, and to the other officers of the government. This was afterwards alledged to be a compulsion of the lieutenant governor and fuch of the members of council as were falary men, to comply with the houfe of reprefentatives, by withholding from them their fublistance. The eagerness of the body of the people for paper bills, more eafily acquired in this way than the righteous way of industry and frugality, no doubt, facilitated a compliance.

THE council, upon this occasion, declined answering upon their oath, as councellors, when the lieut. governor asked asked their advice. They swear that to the best of their 1727. judgment they will at all times freely give their advice to the governor for the good management of the public affairs of the government. The lieut, governor, pro-pofed the following question to them in writing "Gentlemen, I find it necessary, in order to my figning the bill entitled An A& for raifing and fettling a revenue &c. which has paffed both houses, to have your advice whether I can fign the faid bill without the breach of the instruction of the lords justices of Great-Britain, dated the 27th September 1720, and the order of the lords commissioners of trade and plantations, dated the 8th of February 1726-7. W. Dummer. Feb. 17, 1727." Upon which, the council came to the following vote. " In council, Feb. 19, 1727, P.ead, and as the council have already, as they are one part of the general court, passed a concurrence with the honorable house of reprefentatives upon the faid bill, they cannot think it proper for them to give your honor any further advice thereupon, nor do they apprehend the oath of a councellor obliges them thereto. At the fame time, they cannot but think it will be for the good and welfare of the province and the neceffary support of the government thereof, if the bill be confented to by your honor. J. Willard, Secretary."

^{*} Gratuity is a term not usual with the house and feems not for proper for payment of fervices.

THEY had given their advice or opinion, the fame 'feffion, upon the bill for fortifying, after they had paffed it, that it was contrary to the inftruction, and inftances of the like kind have been frequent before and fince this time.

THE lieutenant governor had a further opportunity, before Mr. Burnet's arrival, of meeting the affembly in May for election of councellors.

ŤHE house discovered, in one instance, this fession, a defire to amplify their jurifdiction. The council and house had made it a practice, ever fince the charter, to unite in the choice of the treasurer, impost officer and other civil officers, the appointment whereof is referved io the general affembly. The council, being in number 1727. number lefs than a third part of the houfe, have by this means no weight in fuch elections except when there are two or more candidates for an office, fet up by the house, and then the balance of power, if they are united themfelves, may be with them. This feems to have been an old charter practice and handed down. The two houses, when parties to any petition or cause defire to be heard, often meet in one houfe, which no doubt alfo came from the old charter, but after they are seperated, they vote feperately upon the fubject matter of the hearing. In this feffion, after a hearing of this fort, the house passed a vote, " that when a hearing shall be had on any private cause before both houses together the fubject matter shall be determined by both houses conjunctly." They might as well have voted that, after a conference between the two houses, the fubject matter should be determined conjunctly. The council were fensible this was taking from the little weight they had and unanimoufly nonconcurred the vote.

THE manner of chusing civil officers is a defect in the constitution, which does not feem to have been confidered at the framing the charter, and as, by charter, officers must annually be elected, it is a defect which must be submitted to. If either house should elect by themfelves and fend to the other for concurrence the right of nomination would be fuch an advantage as neither would be willing to concede to the other. In the early days of the charter, it had been made a question, whether in any acts of government the council had a negative voice and were not rather to vote in conjunction with the house of representatives, and Constantine Phips gave his opinion, that they had no negative. He feems not to have confidered, that the charter and the commiffions to governors of other colonies evidently intended a legislature after the pattern of the legislature of England, as far as the flate and circumflances of the colonies, would admit. THE

THE government, under the old charter and the new, 1727. had been very prudent in the distribution of the territory. Lands were granted for the take of fettling them. Grants for any other purpole had been very rare and, ordinarily, a new settlement was contiguous to an old one. The fettlers themfelves, as well as the government, were inclined to this for the fake of a focial neighbourhood, as well as mutual defence against an enemy. The first settlers on Connecticut river, indeed, left a great tract of wilderness between them and the rest of the colony, but they went off in a body, and a new colony, Connecticut, was fettling near them at the fame time." Rivers were also an inducement to fettle, but very few had ventured above Dunstable, upon the fine river Merrimack, and the rivers in the province of Main had no towns at any distance from the sea into which they empty. But all on a fudden, plans are laid for grants of valt tracts of unimproved land and, the last fession of Mr. Dummer's administration, a vote passed the two houses appointing a committee to lay out three lines of towns each town of the contents of fix miles fquare, one line to extend from Connecticut river above Northfield to Merrimack river above Dunstable, another line on each fide Merrimack as far as Penicook, and another from Nichewanock river to Falmouth in Cafco-bay.

PRETENCES were encouraged, and even fought after, to intitle perfons to be grantees. The pofterity of all the officers and foldiers who ferved in the famous Naraganfet expedition in-1675 were the first pitched upon, those who were in the unfortunate attempt upon Canada in 1690 were to come next. The government of N. Hampshire supposed these grants were made in order to fecure the possess of a tract of country challenged by them as within their bounds. This might have weight with some leading men, who were acquainted with the controvers, but there was a fondness for granting land in any part of the province. A condition of fettling a certain number of families in a few years, ordinarily. 1727. narily, was annexed to the grants, but the court, by multiplying their grants, rendered the performance of the condition impracticable, there not being people enough within the province willing to leave the old fettled towns, and the grantees not being able to procure fettlers from abroad.

THE fettlement of the province was retarded by it, a trade of land jobbing made many idle perfons, imaginary wealth was created, which was attended with fome of the mischievous effects of the paper currency, viz. idlencis and bad œconomy, a real expense was occasioned to many perfons, befides the purchase of the grantees title, for every township by law was made a propriety, and their frequent meetings, schemes for settlement, and other preparatory business, occasioned many charges. In fome few towns, houfes were built and fome part of the lands cleared. In a fhort time, a new line being determined for the northern boundary of the Maffachufets colony, many of these townships were found to be without it. The government of New-Hampshire, for the crown, laid claim to fome of them, and certain perfons, calling themfelves proprietors under Mason, to others, and the Maffachufets people, after a further expence in contesting their title, either wholly lost the lands, or made fuch composition as the new claimers thought fit to agree to.

1728.

M_R. Burnet* was received with unufual pomp. Befides a committee of the general court, many private gentlemen went as far as Briftol to wait upon him, and, befides the continual addition that was making in the journey, there went out of Bofton to meet him at a fmall diftance, fuch a multitude of horfes and carriages that he entred the town with a greater cavalcade than had ever been feen before or fince. Like one of his predeceffors, lord Bellamont, he urged this grand appearance, in his firft fpeech to the affembly, as a proof of their ability very honorably to fupport his majefty's government and, at the fame time, acquainted them with the king's infruction to him to infift upon an effablished falary, and his 1728. intention firmly to adhere to it.* He had asked the opinion of a New-England gentleman, who was then the minister of the presbyterian church at New-York, whether the affembly would comply with his inftruction, and received a difcouraging anfwer which caufed him to reply, that he would not engage in a quarrel, or to that effect ; but he either received different advice upon his arrival, or for fome other reafon altered his mind. The affembly feemed, from the beginning, determined to withftand him. To do it with better grace and a more reasonable prospect of success the quantum of the falary, it was agreed, was not worth difputing. It bore no pro-portion to the privilege and right of granting it for fuch time as they thought proper. The fame perfons, therefore, who fix or feven years before refused to make governor Shute and, perhaps, the government eafy by granting not more than five hundred pounds sterling a year, now readily voted for a thouland or a fum which was intended to be equal to it. Affoon as addreffes from the council and house, the usual compliments upon the first arrival of a governor, had passed, the house made a grant of £.1700 towards his fupport and to defrey the charge of his journey. In a day or two, the governor let

10

* He arrived at Eofton July 13th.

* " It is not eafy to express the pleasure I have had in coming among you. The commission with which his majefty has honored me (however unequal to it) has been received in fo respectful and noble a manner, and the plenty and wealth of this great province has appeared to me in fuch a firong light, as will not fuffer me to doubt of your supporting his majefty's government by an ample, honorable and lasting fettlement. The wisdom of parliament has made it an established custom to grant the civil lift to the king for life, and, as I am confident the representatives of the people here would be unwilling to own themselves outdone in duty to his majefty by any of his subjects, I have reason to hope that they will not think such an example has any thing in it which they are not ready to imitate. I such as it shall be an inviolable rule for my conduct, will, without question, have it's due weight with you," Gav. Speech 24 July 1728.

THE HISTORY OF

334

1728. let them know he was utterly unable to give his confent to it, being inconfistent with his instruction. After 2 week's deliberation, a grant was made of three hundred pounds for the charge of his journey, which he accepted. and another of fourteen hundred pounds towards his fupport, which was accompanied with a joint meffage from the council and house, prepared by a committee, wherein they affert their undoubted right as Englishmen and their privilege by the charter to raise and apply monies for the support of government and their readiness to give the governor an ample and honorable support, but they apprehended it would be most for his majesty's fervice, &c: to do it without establishing a fixed falary. + The governor was always very quick in his replies and once, when a committee came to him with a melfage; having privately obtained a copy of it, gave the fame committee an answer in writing to carry back. The fame day this message was delivered, he observed to them, in answer, "that the right of Englishmen could never intitle them to do wrong, that their privilege of raifing money by charter was expressed to be 'by wholfome and reafonable laws and directions,' confequently not fuch as were hurtful to the conflicution and the ends of government; that their way of giving a support to the governor could not be honorable, for it deprived him of the undoubted right of an Englishman, viz. to act his judgment, or obliged him to remain without fupport, and he appealed to their own confciences, whether they had not formerly kept back their governor's allowance until other bills were paffed, and whether they had not fometimes made the falary depend upon the confent to fuch bills; that if they really intended from time to time to grant an honorable fupport they could have no fult objection to making their purpoles effectual by fixing his falary, for he would never accept of a grant of the kind they had then made." We shall be convinced that Mr. Burnet was not a perfon who could be eafily moved from a refolution he had once taken up.

Angalt Ttal

UPON

MASSACHUSETS-BAY. 335

UPON the receipt of this meffage and the peremp- 1728. tory declaration of the governor, the house found this was like to be a ferious affair, and that they fhould not fo eafily get rid of it as they had done of the like demands made by Dudley and Shute, and again appointed a committee to join with a committee of council to confider of this melfage. The exclusive right of the house in originating grants they have often to far given up as to join with the council by committees to confider and report the expediency of them, the reports, gene-rally, being fent to the house, there to be first acted upon: The report of this committee was accepted in council and fent to the house, but there rejected and, not being able to unite in an answer, the house tried the council with a refolve, fent to them for concurrence, the purport of which was, that fixing a falary on the governor or commander in chief for the time being would be dangerous to the inhabitants and contrary to the defign of the charter in giving power to make wholfome and reafonable orders and laws for the welfare of the province. This vote, in fo general terms, the council did not think proper to concur, and declared that, although they were of opinion it might prove of ill confequence to fettle a falary upon the governor for the time being, yet they apprehended a falary might be granted for a certain time, to the prefent governor, without danger to the province, or being contrary to the defign of the charter, &c.*

THIS occasioned a conference, without effect, both houses adhering to their own votes, and from this time the house were left to manage the controversy themfelves. They fent a message to the governor to defire the court might rife. Fle told them, that if he should comply with their defire he should put it out of their power to pay an immediate regard to the king's instruction and he would not grant them a recess until they had finished the business for which the court was then sitting. They then, in a message to him, declared that, in faithfulness to the people of the province, they could not come

* Aug. 19th. + 28th.

3728. come into an act for establishing a falary on the governor or commander in chief for the time being, and therefore they renewed their request that the court might rife.*

BOTH the governor and the house feem to have fome referve in their declarations. Perhaps a falary during his administration would have fatisfied him, although he demanded it for the commander in chief for the time being; and the house do not yet fay, that they will not fettle a falary for a limited time. Each defired that the other would make fome concessions. Both declined, and both by long altercation were irritated and, at length. which is often the cafe, inftead of closing, as feemed probable at first, widened the breach until they fixed at the opposite extremes. The major part of the council and about a fixth part of the house were willing to settle a falary upon Mr. Burnet for a term not exceeding three years, possibly even fome who were finally the most zealous in the opposition would have fubmitted to this if they could have been fure of its being accepted, and they had been at liberty to act their judgment. Mr. Cooke had experienced the ill fuccefs of the controverfy with governor Shute and feemed defirous of being upon terms with his fucceffor who, upon his fifft arrival and until the province house could be repaired, lodged at Mr. Cooke's house, but a friendship could not long continue between two perfons of fo different opinions upon civil government. The language of the governor's meffages was thought too dictatorial by the people and particularly, by the inhabitants of Boston, and he had been fomewhat free in his jokes upon fome of the shopkeepers. and principal tradefmen who were, then, the directors of the counfels of the town and very much influenced those of the house. An intimation in the governor's next message* that, if they did not comply with the instruction, the legislature of Great Britain would take into confideration the fupport of the government and, perhaps, fomething befides, meaning the charter, increased the prejudices against him. The house, now, thought themfelves themfelves obliged to be more particular than they had 1728. yet been fully to affert their rights.* This was what the governor defired and, without any delay? he fent them an answer. As these two messages feem to begin, in earnest, the argument on each fide of the question, we shall infert them in the margin. 1 Not long after, the

* August 29th,

Vol. II.

- * August 31st. † Sept. 2d.
- 1 August 31st, 1728. The house of representatives fent the following meffage to his excellency the governor.

" May it pleafe your excellency,

The representatives in general court assembled, before they proceed to make reply to what they received from you on thurfday last, respecting their answer of that morning to your meffage of the 28th current, beg leave to recur to what the council and representatives, the 7th instant, in great truth and fincerity, among other things, laid before your excellency viz. they humbly apprehend that his majefty's fervice in the neceffary defence and fupport of the government and the protection and prefervation of the inhabitants thereof, the two great ends proposed in the power granted to this court for the raising taxes would be best answered without establishing a falary. Your excellency was pleated to let us know, that the answer of the house contained no reasons that appeared to you sufficient why his majefty's 23d inftruction might not be complied with, fince the fame methods that are found no ways to prejudice the rights and liberties of the people of Great-Britain nor of other colonies, cannot prejudice those of the province.-If the method practifed in Great-Britain is not prejudicial to the rights and liberties of the people there, it does not therefore follow that fixing a falary will not prejudice the people of this province. The British constitution differing from ours in many respects ; and other colonies coming into any particular method, we not knowing the motives inducing them thereto, nor the feveral conflitutions of government they are put under, ought not to influence or prompt us to imitate them.

May it pleafe your excellency,

The houfe, being heartily defirous to cultivate a good agreement and harmony with your excellency, take this opportunity to affure you, that we have, once and again, deliberately confidered your meffage for fixing a falary, and do humbly conceive that it is against the good defign of the powers vested and reposed in us by the royal charter, to pass acts pursuant to the instructions laid before us, for as much as paffing fuch acts, as we apprehend.

1728. the house, instead of any advances towards a compliance, which the governor wished to obtain, came to resolutions upon two questions which shewed still more fully their.

> apprehend, has a direct tendency to weaken our happy conflitution ; for that their late majefty's King William and Queen Mary, of glorious memory, were gracioufly pleafed to gratify the inhabitants here and did grant to them certain powers privileges and franchifes to be used and employed for the benefit of the people and, in the fame grant, referved other powers to be used and exercised by the crown or the governors sent by them, agreeable to the directions and instructions contained in faid grant and their commissions, having reference for their better guidance and directions to the feveral powers and authorities mentioned in the faid charter ; if therefore the general affembly should at any time come into any act that might tend to infringe the prerogative or differve the crown, his majefty's governor's have a negative voice on all fuch acts; furthermore, should any governor incautiously give his confent to fuch acts, his majefty has referved to himfelf a power to difallow the same, but the use and exercise of the other powers and privileges lodged in the general affembly, his majelly jultly expects they will never make use of them in prejudice of the rights and liberties of the people, but at all times exert themfelves in defence thereof. If we refemble the British constitution, as your excellency has done us the honor to declare, we humbly apprehend that no part of the legislature here should be intirely independent, as your excellency has very justly denoted tous, that the three diffinct branches of the legislature, preferved in a due balance, forms the excellency of the British constitution and if any of these branches should become less able to fupport its own dignity and freedom, the whole must inevitably fuffer by the alteration. Your excellency is pleafed to fay that a support given as has been usual here cannot be honorable because that implies no fort of confidence in the government. To which we humbly offer, that if your excellency would take notice of our grants, you would fee that the very method itfelf is founded on nothing elfe, inafmuch as they always look forward and are given to enable the governor to go on and manage the public affairs. Thus, in this our first fession at your excellency's first and welcome arrival, the affembly made a grant of f. 1400-to enable your excellency to manage the affairs of this province, fully confiding in your conduct. If your excellency intends that we do not put fo much confidence in you as the parliament do in our most gracious fovereign, to whom the fense of the point in controversy. The first question 1728; was, whether the house will take under confideration the fettling a temporary falary upon the governor or Z_2 commander the civil lift is granted for life (which God long preferve) we freely acknowledge it. Is it reafonable or poffible that we fhould confide in any governor whatfoever fo much as in our gracious king, the common father of all his people, who is known to delight in nothing fo much as in their happinefs and whofe interest and glory and that of his royal progeny are infeparable from the prosperity and welfare of his people, whereas it is most obvious that neither the prosperity nor adversity of a people affect a governor's interest at all when he has once left them. Your Excellency goes on and declares that the fupport of the government in this manner visibly depends on an intire compliance with the other parts of the legislature. Had the governor no authority nor checks upon them we mult acknowledge this to be the cafe, but as both the other parts have a great dependence upon the governor's difcretionary power, the council (as the practice usually is) for their very being and both they and the representatives for every law and proper act of government, and for every penny put into and drawn out of the treafury, for their whole defence and fecurity in every cafe of danger, as he is their captain general, besides other obvious particulars needless and too numerous to be named, that if in this fingle inftance the governor fhould have dependence on the affembly, as to his fupport, according as they shall fee the province able, the other things that they depend upon him for are fo vality more than a counterbalance that it cannot be thought that the commander in chief can be hereby prevented acting according to his judgment or remain without fupport. We affure your excellency that it is not any exception to your person or administration (which we hope other parts of our conduct have made evident) that determines us against fixing a falary as preferibed.

May it please your excellency,

Since we have fo many times heretofore and do now in the molt folemn manner and after the molt firict ferutiny we are able to make in this important affair manifelt that in faithfulnefs to our country we cannot think it advifeable for this houle to be concerned in paffing an act for tixing a falary as prefcribed, we do therefore molt ardently move your excellency, that you would permit us to repair to our feveral homes, and not keep us fitting here in order to our acting contrary to our native freedom and declared judgment and to betraying the greattruft and confidence our principals have repofed in us. Sept.

1728 commander in chief for the time being. This paffed in the negative. Then this question was put; Whether the house can with fasety to the people come into any Sept. 3d 1728. The fecretary carried down to the house the following message from his excellency the governor.

Gentlemen of the house of representatives,

It, is not at all agreeable to my inclination to enter into difputes with your house and, for that reason, I have endeavoured hitherto to be as fhort as the importance of the matters which I have recommended to you will allow me. But fince you have thought fit to lay fuch firefs on the reafons offered in your reply of faturday, I cannot avoid, once more for all, entring into a particular examination of them, that not only yourfelves but those whom you represent may be enabled to judge of the controverfy between us.----You begin with reminding me that the council and reprefentatives apprehended ' that his mafelty's fervice, in the necessary defence and support of the government and the protection and prefervation of the inhabitants thereof, the two great ends proposed in the power granted to this court, would be best answered without establishing a fixed falary.' It ought not to be forgotten, at the fame time, that the council had altered the words would be best into may be well though you prevailed with them to recede from the amendment, and that they made this addition, 'We effecm it a great unhappiness that his majesty should think our method of fupporting the governors of this province a defign of making them dependant on the people,' to which you agreed, though nothing to that effect had been inferted in your own draught. By these instances, the council appear, from the first to have very different apprehensions from you of the regard to be paid to his majefty's inftruction and of the weight of his displeasure, which last confideration (though the greatest part of my meffage) was not, it feems, thought by you to deferve any room at all in fo long a reply. But fuppoling the council and your were agreed, that is to fay, that two branches of the legiflature thought it best to keep the third intirely dependent on them, (which would be a manifest piece of partiality and injustice) is this any reason why the third should be of the same opinion ? Or rather, does it not confirm the too just fuspicion his majefty has of a defign fo dangerous to his own authority? Two branches of legislature can bring nothing to effect without the third and, consequently, if what feems best to them only cannot be confented to by the other, it becomes their duty then to confider

ound ano

. 3

MASSACHUSETS-BAY.

other method for fupporting the governor or commander 1728. in chief for the time being, than what has been heretofore practifed. This alfo paffed in the negative and was Z 3 the der what next best thing can be done, in which all three can concur, for it does not follow that if what fome imagine best cannot be done, therefore nothing should be done at all. And fo much for what you have faid before you proceed to make reply.

you may perceive from what I have already expressed, upon how many accounts the reasons of the house can never appear fufficient to me why his majefty's 23d instruction should not be complied with, and I am far from thinking that you give any answer to my former reasons. You say 'that if the method practifed in Great-Britain is not prejudicial to the rights and liberties of the people there, it does not therefore follow that fixing a falary would not prejudice the people of this province.' Rights and liberties are words that have, naturally, the fame meaning in all countries and, unlefs you can fhew me wherein the Britishrights and liberties are defective, (which you have not done) I may conclude that they are not fo and, in that cafe, it is a natural confequence that the methods under which they have been to long fafe and flourishing are most likely to produce the fame effects. But you fay the British constitution differs from yours in many respects.' I take the chief difference to have been in the use made of the constitution which has been no ways to your advantage, for by Great-Britain's keeping up to their constitution publick creditsfill continues at the heighth, notwithstanding the vast charges and debts of the nation, but with you credit has fallen lower and lower in an amazing manner, and this has proceeded plainly from the want of a fufficient check in the other branches of the legiflature to the fudden and unadvised measures of former assemblies ; so that if ever you come near the happiness of Great-Britain it must be by support. ing those parts of the legislature which of late have been too much depressed, but are in themselves necessary to guard the liberties and properties of the inhabitants as well as the house of representatives.

As to the cafe of other plantations, I fhall only fay; If you enjoy larger privileges by the favor of the crown than they and, by confequence, have more to lofe by his majefty's difpleafure, the arguments both of gratitude and interest plead stronger with you for a compliance with an instruction in itfelf to just and reasonable.

I cannot

1728. the first instance of the house's declaring they would make no advances, for in their message last preceding they only fay they do not think it adviseable to pass an act for fixing a falary as prescribed. These votes caused the governor to put them in mind of a letter from their agent in the year 1722, wherein he mentions that lord Carteret, in conversation, defired him to write to the assessed to provoke the government in England to bring

- I cannot fee why you apprehend that paffing acts purfuant to the inftruction has a direct tendency to weaken your happy conflitution, efpecially fince you now acknowledge what I had formerly obferved, " that each branch of the legiflature and confequently the governor ought to be enabled to fupport its own dignity and freedom," which is all that is intended by the inftruction.
- I had observed, " that the usual way of supporting the government implied no fort of confidence in the governor." You offer ' that if I would take notice of your grants I should fee that the very method itself is founded upon nothing elfe, inafmuch as they always look forward and are given to enable the governor to go on and manage the publick affairs.' I can fcarce believe that this is intended for a ferious argument, fince a time no longer ago than last winter session affords a plain proof to the contrary. The lieutenant governor informed the house in answer to their message expressing their desire of an adjournment, ' that he had confented to all the acts and votes passed the two houses except the bill for emitting bills of credit which he would have figned were it confistent with his majefty's instruction which it was not, in the opinion of the council." And he concludes with reminding them, . that the proper and ufual feason for granting falaries is already outrun, and that he expects they will provide for the honorable support of the government before they rife.' The house entered into the confideration of the above meffage, and after some debate had thereon the queftion was put, whether the houfe will now come to the confideration of allowances, it paffed in the negative. Then the queftion was put, whether the confideration of allowances shall be referred to the next session of this court ; refolved in the affirmative. In this manner was this method of grants ' that always look forward' brought to look directly upon the prefent business in order to compel a compliance or, it you like that better, to look backward by way of punifhment for a denial; and fo the public affairs were left to manage zhemfelves for any care that was taken of them.

Your

bring their charter before the parliament, for if they 1725. did, it was his opinion, it would be diffolved without opposition, and the governor advised them to take care their proceedings did not bring their charter into danger at that time. This caution did not prevent the house from preparing a flate of the controversy between the governor and them, concerning his falary, to transmit to their feveral towns, in the conclusion of which they fay that they dare neither come into a fixed falary on the governor for ever nor for a limited time, for the following reasons. Z 4 "Ift. BECAUSE Your next observation is not one jot a juster representation of the cafe before you. You fay you are not for fixing a falary becaufe it's not reasonable or possible you should confide in any governor whatfoever fo much as in our most gracious king?" As if this instruction to demand a falary came from a governor and not from his majelty himfelf, and as if the falary was to be given directly to the governor and not to his majelty for the ule of his governor or commander in chief, or as if upon just complaint his majelly could not or would not remove an ill governor and, in thort, as if your doing the thing would not be altogether upon confidence in his majefty and no. in any governor whatfoever. The words of respect here used to his majefty come with a very ill grace and have not that gravity in them which would be more becoming, fince in the fame breath you are difregarding his own demand and undervaluing his favor and making light of his declaration ' that if you do not pay an immediate regard to his inflruction he will look upon it as a manifest mark of your undutiful behavior to himfelf.'

- You carry on the fame kind of reafoning to the end of your paper, which feems much better adapted to amufe than to prove any thing.
- In the first place, you make a very pompous representation of the governor's authority and of the great dependance the other parts of the general court have on his differentiationary power and call his support the single instance in which he has some dependance on the assembly, and, just after, you give an odious aster, and assembly, and, j

1728.

344

" Ift. BECAUSE it is an untrodden path, which neither they nor their predeceffors have gone in, and they cannot certainly forefee the many dangers that may be in it, nor can they depart from that way which has been found fafe and comfortable.

" 2dly. BECAUSE it is the undoubted right of all Englifhmen, by magna charta, to raife and difpofe of money for the public fervice, of their own free accord, without compulsion.

"3dly. BECAUSE it must necessarily lessen the dignity and freedom of the house of representatives in making acts and raising and applying taxes, &c. and, confequently, cannot be thought a proper method to preserve that balance in the three branches of the legislature which seems necessary to form, maintain and uphold the constitution.

4thly.

declared judgment, be more injurious to me or yourlelves. You feem to allow the governor's powers only fo far as he ules them according to your pleafure, but, in ufing your own powers, to take it very ill to be directed by any body. You faid, before, ' that the other things which the houfe depends on a governor for are fo vaftly more than a counterbalance to his fupport (you might have faid fubfiftence and then the irony would have appeared more openly) that it can't be thought that the commander in chief can be thereby prevented acting according to his judgment or remain without fupport.' As if you were ignorant of the aforementioned proceedings of the laft winter; and yet you are very ready to think that to keep you fitting here is a compulfion to you to act contrary to your native freedom and declared judgment and fo betray the great truft your principals have repored in you. But I pertuade myfelf that your faithfulnefs to your country put you above any fuch temptation.

And, as I am still of opinion that you have acted upon mislaken notions, I cannot give over the hopes of your coming to see things in that true light in which (I flatter myself) I have stated the point in question and, as I am disposed to gratify you as far as is consistent with my duty and my honor, I hope you will consider what advances you can make towards a compliance, that so the present fession may not be a needless burden to the people but still have a great issue to his majesty's and the country's fervice. W. Burnet.

General court records.

"4thly. BECAUSE the charter fully impowers the 1728. general affembly to make fuch laws and orders as they shall judge for the good and welfare of the inhabitants and, if they or any part of them judge this not to be for their good, they neither ought nor could come into it, for, as to act beyond or without the powers granted in the charter might justly incur the king's displeasure, fo not to act up and agreeable to those powers might justly be deemed a betraying the rights and privileges therein granted, and, if they should give up this right, they would open a door to many other inconveniencies."

THIS representation was prepared to be carried home by the feveral members, upon the rifing of the court, in order to their towns giving their instructions, but, the house being kept fitting, it was printed and fent through the province. The governor fent a meffage to the house, a few days after, in which he takes their reprefentation to pieces and, in the close of his meffage, appeals to them whether he had not answered all their objections except " the unknown inconveniencies to which a door would be opened," which could not be anfwered until they could tell what they were, and charges them with calling for help from what they had not mentioned, from a fense of the imperfection of what they had, and with fending to their feveral towns for advice and declaring, at the fame time, they did not dare follow ir.

It would be tedious to recite at length the feveral meffages, which paffed during the remainder of the controverfy, from the chair to the houfe and from the houfe to the chair, which followed quick one upon the back of another, the fum of the argument, upon the part of the governor, was as follows, that it was highly reafonable he fhould enjoy the free exercise of his judgment in the administration of government, but the grants, made for a fhort time only by the houfe, were thus limited for no other reafon than to keep the governor in a flate of dependence, and with defign to withhold from him

THE HISTORY OF

346

1728. him the neceffary means of fublistence, unless he would comply with their acts and refolves, however unreafonable they might appear to him; that in fact they had treated governor Shute in this manner and, no longer fince than the last year, the house had refused to make the usual grants and allowances, not only to the lieut. governor but to other officers, until they had compelled him to give his confent to a loan of fixty thousand pounds in bills of credit; that a constitution which, in name and appearance, confifted of three branches was, in fact, reduced to one; that it was a profeffed principle, in the conftitution of Great-Britain, to preferve a freedom in each of the three branches of the legislature, and it was a great favour fhewn the province, when king William and queen Mary established, by the royal charter, a form of government fo analogous to the government of Great-Britain; a principle of gratitude and loyalty, therefore, ought to induce them to establish a falary for the governor of this province, in order to his fupporting his dignity and freedom, in like manner as the parliament always granted to the king what was called the civil lift, not once in fix months or from year to year, but for life; that this was no more than other provinces which had no charters had done for their governors; that there was nothing in the province charter to exempt them from the fame obligation which other his majefty's colonies were under to support the government; to be fure, they had no pretence to greater privileges by charter than the people of England enjoyed from magna charta, and yet no claufe of that was ever urged as an objection against granting to the king a revenue for life; and a power by charter to grant monies could not be a reason against granting them either for a limited or unlimited time.

ON the part of the house, the substance of their defence against the governor's demand and his reasons in support of it was, that an obligation upon an assembly in the plantations could not be inferred from the practice of the house of commons in Great-Britain; the king 1728. was the common father of all his fubjects and their interests were infeparably united, whereas a plantation governor was affected neither by the adverfity nor profperity of a colony when he had once left it, no wonder then a colony could not place the fame confidence in the governor which the nation placed in the king; however, the grants to the governor always looked forward and were made, not for fervices done, but, to be done. It must be admitted, the governor is in some measure dependent upon the affembly for his falary, but he is dependent in this inftance only, whereas he has a check and controul upon every grant to any perfon in the government and upon all laws and acts of government whatfoever; nor can an exact parallel be drawn between the constitution of Britain and that of the province, for the council are dependent upon the governor for their very being, once every year, whereas the houfe of lords cannot be difplaced unlefs they have criminally forfeited the rights of peers; the house were not to be governed by the practice of affemblies in fome of the other colonies, nor were they to be dictated to and required to raife a certain fum for a certain time and certain purpofes; this would deftroy the freedom which the house apprehended they had a right to in all their acts and refolves and would deprive them of the powers given to them, by charter, to raife money and apply it when and how they thought proper.* Different judgments will undoubtedly be formed upon the weight of these reasons on the one fide and the other.

of

THE The governor had repeatedly urged against them their compelling lieutenant governor. Dummer to fign a bill for issuing £.60,000 against his instruction and against his judgment, which they had passed over without any notice, at length, they tell him " we doubt not but the true state of the case is this, that though his honor, in the beginning of the fession, thought his majesty's instruction forbad him coming into it. yet, upon deliberation and advice of the assembly, his great council, he was otherwise minded." The governor, in answer, ass them why 1728. THE meffages of the house, at first, were short, supposed to have been drawn by Mr. Cooke, who never uled many words in his speeches in the house, which generally difcovered fomething manly and open, though fometimes fevere and bitter, and often inaccurate. the latter part of the controverfy they were generally drawn by Mr. Welles, another member from Bofton, the fecond year of his coming to the house. These were generally more prolix, and neceffarily fo from the length of the meffages to which they were an answer. The house had justice done them by their committees who managed this controverfy, and they were then willing to allow that the governor maintained a bad caufe with as plaufible reafons as could be.

THE contending parties, for a little while, endeavored to be moderate and to preferve decorum, but it was impoffible to continue this temper.

On the 4th of September, the house repeated to the governor, the request they had formerly made to rife, but he refused to grant it and told them, that unless his majesty's pleasure had its due weight with them their defires should have very little weight with him.

THE council, who had been for fome time out of the question, now interposed and passed a vote " that it is expedient for the court to afcertain a fum as a falary for his excellency's fupport as also the term of time for its continuance," This was fent to the house for concurrence. The council feem to have gone a little out of their line, but the house took no other notice of the vote than to nonconcur it. The house, being kept fitting against their will, employed part of their time in drawing up the state of the controversy which we have mentioned.

THIS

why he may not, with exactly the fame reafon, fay " that I doubt not but the true state of the present cafe is this, that though the affembly, in the beginning of this feffion, thought that their charter forbad them coming into a falary for the governor, yet, upon deliberation and advice of his majefty, their most gracious king, by his instruction, they will be otherwite minded."

THIS was not occafioned by any doubt they had 1728, themfelves, but to convince the governor that the people throughout the province were generally of the fame mind with the houfe, and for this purpofe they thought it neceffary to obtain from their towns an express approbation of their conduct. It was well known, that not a town in the province would then have inftructed their reprefentatives to fix a falary upon the governor for the time being.

ONE of the king's governments (Barbados) was at this time warmly contending with its governor against fixing a falary. The affembly of that island, fome years before, had fettled a very large falary upon a governor against whom they afterwards made heavy complaints charging him with rapacious falary upon a governor and, his fucceffor having demanded the like fettlement upon him, they resolved to withstand the demand, and the spirit feemed to be as high there as in Maffachusets-bay.

THIS had no fmall tendency to ftrengthen and confirm the refolution of the people here, who fuppoled their charter rather an additional privilege and fecurity against this demand.[†] There was a minor part, however, very defirous of an accommodation. The ill fuccess of the controvers with governor Shute was fresh in their minds. Many amiable qualities in Mr. Burnet caused them to wish he might continue their governor and employ those powers and that attention which were now wholly engaged in this fingle point, in promoting the general welfare and prosperity of the province.

ABOUT a third part of the houfe of reprefentatives and a major part of the council would have been content to have granted a falary for two or, perhaps, three years. If we are to judge by his declarations, this would not have fatisfied him and it was far fhort of his inftructions, but his friends were of opinion, that fuch a partial compliance would have produced a relaxation of the inftruction and iffned in lafting agreement and harmony.

† The affembly of Barbados, after long firuggie, fubmitted, but beffened the fum which had been fettled before.

THE

350 THE HISTORY OF

1728. THE houfe made what they would have the governor think a fmall advance towards it. Inftead of a grant for the falary, fuppofed, though not expressed, for half a year, they made a grant (Sept. 20th) of three thousand pounds, equal to one thousand sterling in order to enable him to manage the affairs of the province and, although it was not expressly mentioned, it was generally understood to be for a year. This was concurred by the council, but he let it lie without figning his confent, which caused the house to make at least, a feeming farther advance, for on the 24th of October they by a message intracted him to accent the grant and added " we ther advance, for on the 24th of October they by a meffage intreated him to accept the grant and added "we cannot doubt but that fucceeding affemblies according to the ability of the province will be very ready to grant as ample a fupport, and if they fhould not, your excellency will then have the opportunity of fhewing your refentment." Still this had no effect, the governor knew how natural it would be for a future affembly to refue being governed by the opinion of a former, befides the referve " according to the ability of the province" left fufficient room for a further reafon for reducing the fum whenfoever a future affembly fhould think it proper.

A little before this meffage from the houfe, the governor had informed them that he was of opinion the act, which paffed the laft year iffuing fixty thoufand pounds in bills of credit by way of loan, would be difallowed, the lieutenant governor having given his confent to it directly contrary to a royal inftruction, and recommended to them, as the most likely way to obtain his majefty's approbation to apply the interest of the money arising from the loan towards the governor's falary. This was one of those acts which have their operation fo far, before they are laid before his majefty, that great confusion may arise from their difallowance. The house therefore, had no great fears concerning it, but it would have been a fufficient reason to prevent their complying with the proposal, that it would be a fixing the falary fo long as the loans continued and for this reason they 1728. refused it.

THE country in general, as we have observed, was averfe to a compliance with the king's inftruction, but no part more fo than the town of Boston. Generally, in the colonies, where there is a trading capital town. the inhabitants of it are the most zealous part of the colony in afferting their liberties when an opinion prevails that they are attacked. They follow the example of London the capital of the nation. The governor had frequently faid, that the members of the houfe could not act with freedom, being influenced by the inhabitants of the town. Befides, the town, at a general meeting of the inhabitants for that purpose, had passed a vote, which was called the unanimous declaration of the inhabitants of the town of Boston against fixing a falary upon the governor, and this vote they ordered to be printed. The governor was in great wrath and called it "an unneceffary forwardness, an attempt to give law to the country." This feems to have determined him to remove the court out of town and, on the 24th of October, he caufed it to be adjourned to the 31st, then to meet at Salem in the county of Effex " where prejudice had not taken root and where of confequence his majefty's fervice would in all probability be better anfwered." Jocofely, he faid there might be a charm in the names of places and that he was at a lofs whether to carry them there or to Concord.

THE house thought their being kept fo long fitting at Boston a great grievance. In one of their messages they ask the governor "Whether it has been customary that the Knights, Burgesse and other freemen of the land should be told that they are met to grant money in such a peculiar way and manner and so they should be kept till they had done it, and this in order to gain their good will and assent." In his reply he tells them he would consider their question in all its parts 1st, "Whether freemen &c. should be told they are met to grant money. 1728. money. I anfwer, the crown always tells them fo. 2d. "In fuch a particular way and manner?" I anfwer. If you mean the way and means of raifing money, the crown leaves that to the commons, but if you mean the purpofe for which it is to be granted, the crown always tells them what that is, whether it is for an honorable fupport, the defence of the kingdom, carrying on a war or the like: 3dly. "And fo they fhould be kept till they had done it." The crown never tells the parliament fo, that I know of, nor have I told you any thing like this as an expedient to get the thing done. I have given you a very different reafon for not agreeing to a recefs, altogether for your own fakes, left I fhould thereby make your immediate regard to his majefty's pleafure impoffible &c.

T^{HE} house could not eafily be perfuaded they were kept fo long together meerly for their own fakes and thought this part of the governor's answer evalue of the true reason and confidered themselves as under duress, whilst at Boston, and their removal to Salem to be a further hardship and an earness of what was still further to come, a removal from place to place until they were harrassed into a compliance. I remember the conversation of the members of the general court, lamenting the measuress which had driven away governor Shute who would have been easy with a falary of about \pounds 500 sterling granted from year to year. The same perions, by whose influence his falary was reduced, were now pressing Mr. Burnet to accept \pounds . 1000 in the same way and could not prevail.

THE house met, according to the adjournment, but immediately complained of their removal from Boston as illegal or unconstitutional and a great grievance. The fame, and the only, reason which was now given had been given before in the controvers with governor Shute. The form of the writ for calling an assembly, directed by the province law, mentions its being to be held at the town-house in Boston, but this had been determined by the king in council to be, as no doubt it was, mere matter of form or example only, and that it did not limit the thepower which the crown before had of fummoning 1728. and holding affemblies at any other place. They prayed the governor, however, to adjourn them back to Boston, but without success.

THEY endeavoured to prevail upon the council to join with them, but the council declared they were of a different opinion and urged the houfe to proceed upon bulinefs, which occafioned repeated meffages upon the fubject; but the whole ftrefs of the argument on the part of the houfe lay upon the form of the writ for calling the affembly, which the board anfwered by faying the houfe might as well infift that all precepts to the towns fhould go from the fheriff of Suffolk becaufe the form of the precept in the law has Suffolk fs.

THE alteration of place had no effect upon the members of the houfe. Votes and meffages paffed, but no new arguments, the fubject had been exhausted, nothing remained but a determined refolution on both fides to abide by their principles, and the houfe met and adjourned, day after day, without doing any bulinefs. The governor was the principal fufferer, not being allowed by the king to receive any thing towards his fupport, except in a way in which the affembly would not give it. The members of the court, in general, were as well accommodated at Salem as Boston, and the members of Boston. who had not been used to the expence and other inconvenience of absence from home, received a compensation from their town, over and above the ordinary wages of reprefentatives. It was a time of peace without, and a ceffation of public business, for that reason, was less felt.

THE house, from an apprehension that their cause was just and therefore that they were intitled to relief, resolved to make their humble application to his majesty. Francis Wilks, a New-England merchant in London, who had been friendly to Mr. Cooke in his agency and who was universally esteemed for his great probity as well as his humane obliging disposition, was pitched upon for their agent.

YoL. II.

MA

1728.

354

MR. Belcher, who had been feveral years of the council, always closely attached to governor Shute and, in general, what was called a prerogative man, by fome accident or other became, on a sudden, the favorite of the house and he was thought the properest perfon to join with Mr. Wilks. At the laft election he had been left out of the council, by what was called the country party, but now declared against the governor's measures and became intimate with Mr. Cooke and other leading members of the house. Such instantaneous conversions are not uncommon. A grant was made by the house to defrey the charges of the agency, but this was nonconcurred by the council, becaufe it was for the ufe of agents in whole appointment they had no voice. The want of money threatned a ftop to the proceeding, but the public fpirit of the town of Bolton was difplayed upon this occasion and, by a subscription of merchants and other principal inhabitants, a fum was raifed which was thought fufficient for the purpole, the houfe voting them thanks and promifing their utmost endeavours that the fums advanced should be repaid in convenient time. The governor defired a copy of their address to the king, but they refused it.

THE only argument or reafon in the king's inflruction for fixing a falary is "that former affemblies have, from time to time, made fuch allowances and in fuch proportion as they themfelves thought the governor deferved, in order to make him more dependent upon them." The house, in the first part of their memorial or address, declare they cannot in faithfulnels fettle or fix a falary becaufe, after that is done, the governor's particular interest will be very little affected by ferving or differving the interest of the people. This was shewing, that they apprehended the reason given by his majesty for fettling a falary was infufficient, and that the governor ought to be paid, according to his fervices in the judgment of those who paid him, but in the close of the address they fay " we doubt not fucceeding affemblies, according to the the ability of the province, will come into as ample and 1728. honorable a fupport, from time to time, and fhould they not, we acknowledge, your majesty will have just reason to fhew your difpleafure with them." It was remarked that, in order to make the last clause confist with the first, the ample and honorable support must be underflood in proportion to the fervices of the governor in the judgment of the house but, in this fense, it was faying nothing and trifling with majefty; for no cafe could happen, at any time, in which his majefty would have just reason to shew his displeasure. It would always be enough to fay that the house; in faithfulness to the people, had withheld part of the governor's support because, in their judgment, he had neglected their interest and his duty.*

- Aa 2 WHETHER * It having been fuggested that the people of the Massachusets were aiming at independency, the following remark was made in the brief drawn up previous to the hearing before the com-mittee of council, " From the universal loyalty of the people, even beyond any other part of his majefty's dominions, it is abfurd to imagine they can have thoughts of independency and, to thew the reverfe, it is the cultom for all perfons coming from thence for London, though they and their fathers and grandfathers were born in New-England, to fay and always deem it coming 'home' as naturally as if born in London, for that it may be faid, without being ludicrous, that it would not be more abfurd to place two of his majefty's beef-eaters to watch a child in the cradle, that it do not rife and cut his father's throat, than to guard thefe infant colonies to prevent their flaking off the British yoke. Befides, they are fo diffinst from one another in their forms of government; in their religious rites, in their emplation of trade and, confequently, in their affections, that they can never be fuppofed to unite in fo dangerous an enterprize."
- The repeated opposition to instructions from the crown had raifed a jealouly in the minds of some, that there was danger of the colonies fetting up for themselves. Col. Bladen, in particular, for many years one of the board of trade, often expressed, to the agents and other perfons who appeared for New-England, his apprehensions of fuch defigns. It is, neverthebels, certain, that fuch a scheme appeared to the whole country to be altogether as wild and extravagant as the foregoing remark represents

356 THE HISTORY OF

1728.

WHETHER this remark was just or not, the house had great encouragement given them, by Mr. Wilks, + that their address would obtain for them the wished for relief. He had been heard by council, Mr. Fazakerley and Doctor Sayes, before the board of trade, Mr. Belcher not being then arrived; but foon after they received letters 1 from their joint agents, inclosing the report of the board of trade, highly difapproving the conduct of the houfe, and their agents let them know it was their opinion that, if the house should perfift in their refusal to comply with the king's instruction, the affair might be carried before the parliament but, if this should be the cafe, they thought it better a falary flould be fixed by the supreme legislature, than by the legislature of the province, better the liberties of the people should be taken away from them, than given up by their own act. The governor likewife communicated to the houfe his letters from the lords of trade approving his conduct. All represents it. But a paragraph in the report of the lords of trade to the lords committee of council was the more immediate occasion of this remark. " The inhabitants, far from making fuitable returns to his majefty for the extraordinary privileges they enjoy, are daily endeavouring to wreft the fmall remains of power out of the hands of the crown and to become independent of the mother kingdom. The nature of the foil and product are much the fame with those of Great-Britain, the inhabitants upwards of 94,000 and their militia, confilling of 16 regiments of foot and 15 troops of horfe, in the year 1718, 15,000 men, and, by a medium taken from the naval officers accounts for three years, from the 24 th of June 1714 to the 24th of June 1717, for the ports of Bofton and Salem only, it appears that the trade of this country employs continually no lefs than 3493 failors, and 492 thips making 25406 tons. Hence your excellencies will be apprized of what importance it is to his majefty's fervice, that fo powerful a colony fhould be reftrained within due bounds of obedience to the crown and more firmly attached to the interests of Great-Britain than they now feem to be, which we conceive cannot effectually be done without the interposition of the British legislature, wherein, in our humble opinion, no time fhould be loft."

† In his letter of March 24th 1728-9. 2 Dated April 25th 1729. All hopes of fuccels from the agents feem'd to be over, 1728. and their business in England would have been very short if the governor had not given occasion for further application. His administration for many months, except in this affair of the falary, had been unexceptionable. Indeed the members of the houfe thought themselves aggrieved, that he would not fign a warrant upon the treafury for their pay and his reason for refusing it, yiz. that one branch of the legislature might as well go without their wages as another, they thought infufficient. Being drove to straits, and obliged to his friends to affist him in the fupport of his family, he thought he might be justified in establishing a fee and perquisite which had never been known in the province before. At New-York, all veffels took from the governor a let pais for which there was no law, but the owners of yeffels fubmitted to it, and it was faid, volenti non fit injuria. Lord Coke, perhaps, would not have thought even this a justification.*

THE governor required all mafters to take the fame paffes here, against their will, and demanded 6*f*. or 2*f*. sterl. for every vefiel bound a foreign voyage and 4*f*. for coasters. The stated fee, by law, for registers was 6*f*. but, the bills having depreciated more than one half in value fince the law was mide, he required 12f. This was a very different case from the other, and I do not know that it was exceptionable, but they were alike complained of as grievous and oppressive, and the governor's enemies were not displeased with the advantage he had given them against him and, upon a representation A a 2 made

* "K. Edward 3d entred into a new device to get money, viz. that by agreement and confent of the merchants the king was to have 40/. of a fack of wool, &c. but the commons (that in troth were to bear the burden, for the merchants will not be the lofers) complained in parliament for that the grant of the merchants did not bind the commons, and that the cuftom might be taken according to the old order, which in the end was granted, and that no grant fhould be made but by parliament." Co. 2d Inft. p. 60. 1728. made by the agents, notwithstanding the hardship of being reftrained from receiving a falary in any way except fuch as the affembly would not give it in, yet fuch was the regard to law and juffice, that his conduct, fo far as related to the let passes, was immediately difapproved.* There were other matters, befides that of the falary, to be fettled before Mr. Burnet could be eafy in his government, but this grand affair caused the leffer to be kept off as much as possible. One was the appointment of an attorney general. By the charter the election of the civil officers, except fuch as belong to the council and courts of justice, is in the general affembly. Until after governor Dudley's time it had generally been allowed that the attorney general was an officer of the courts of justice and included in the exception, but lieutenant governor Tailer, in the year 1716, confented to an election made by the two houses and the choice had been annually made and approved ever fince, not without notice from Mr. Shute of the irregularity of it, but he had fo many other affairs upon his hands that he waved this. +

> MR. Burnet was determined not to part with the right of nomination and the council were of the opinion he ought not and refufed to join with the houfe in the election. There was fome altercation between the two houfes upon it and both adhered to their principles.

> ANOTHER affair of more extensive influence would have been more strenuously infisted upon.

> IN governor Shute's administration, the house, after long disputes with the governor and with the council, carried the point as to the form of supply of the treasury, which

* Non potest rex subditum renitentent onerare impositionibus. Fortescue.

† Governor Dudley brought with him a commission from the queen to his fon Paul for attorney general, with powers to appoint clerks and other officers, take fees, &c. I do not know that it was published. He was attorney general many years, but, I suppose, with a commission from the governor by advice of council. which differing, as we have already observed, from the 1728. former practice and, as both governor and council infilted, from the rule prescribed by the charter, Mr. Burnet had determined to return to the first practice. The house passed a vote for supplying the treasfury with twenty thousand pounds which the council concurred, the practice having been the same for eight or nine years together, but the governor refused his confent and affured them that he would agree to no supply of the treafury but such as was in practice before the year 1721. This declaration was made not long before his death. The fettlement of the point in controversy remained for his fucceffor.

THE court was allowed a recess from the 20th of 1729. December to the 2d of April and then fat until the 18th, at Salem again, without any disposition to comply.

THE new affembly for the election of councellors, was held at the fame place: There was a general expectation that a new fet of councellors would be chofen. The council, of the laft year, had been of very different opinion from the houfe, in many points. They had no doubt of the governor's power to call, adjourn or prorogue the affembly to any part of the province he thought proper and, although they were not for a fixed falary according to the inftruction, yet they would have willingly confented to fettle it for longer term than a year and, fome of them, during Mr. Burnet's adminiftration, but the houfe were most offended with the nonconcurrence of their grant of money* to their agents. A a 4

* " April 10. 1729. In the houfe of reprefentatives, Refolved, That the treafurer be directed to furnish and supply Francis Wilks, Efq; and Jonathan Belcher, Efq; with the sum of three hundred pounds sterling, in the best manner that may be, to ferve the interest of this province in the affair of the humble address of the house which has been prefented to the king's most excellent majesty, the said gentlemen to be accountable for the expence of the faid money."

" April 11. In council, read and nonconcurred."

🤨 In

1729 After all, only four new councellors were elected. Immediately after the council was fettled, the court was prorogued to the 25th of June and, having fat unto the 10th of July, he prorogued them again unto the 20th of August, having made no speech at either of the selfons, or taken any notice of any business he thought proper for them to do. The reason of this omission appeared at the selfion in August. He had waited the final determination of his majesty in council, upon the report of the lords committee. This he now communicated to the house, whereby they perceived that his conduct was approved, that of the house condemned, and his

" In council, Ordered, that a meffage be fent down to the hon. house of representatives to acquaint them that the board had nonconcurred a refolve of the house, passed the 10th currant, for fupplying Francis Wilks and Jonathan Belcher, Efq;'s with the fum of f.300 fterl. to enable them to ferve the intereft of this province in the affair of the humble address of the house, &c. and, as they apprehend, for very good reasons. It is well known that Mr. Wilks was chosen agent for the house of representatives by a vote of the house only and was, accordingly, to observe such instructions as he should receive from them, and this was one of the reafons given by the council for nonconcurring a vote for allowing one hundred pounds fterl. to Francis Wilks, Efg; paffed the last festion, viz. December the 20th, and it may be of ill confequence, as the council judge, for them to join in supporting any other agency that affects this province than fuch as they are confulted with and have confented to from the beginning : Befides which, the board look upon it as a very extraordinary practice in the hon. house to fend up a vote, for supplying Messi'rs Wilks and Belcher to ferve the interest of this province in the affair of an humble address, &c. for concurrence, when they never allowed the board a fight of faid address till several months after the fame was transmitted to Great Britain and actually presented to his majefty in council."

Jonathan Belcher, William Dudley, Peter Thacher, and Ifaac Little, in the room of Nathanael Byfield, John Cufling, Symonds Epes, and John Stoddard. The governor negatived Belcher and Little. Col. Byfield was now in favor and appointed judge of admiralty after Meinzie's death, Mr. Auchmuty having first efficiated a few months.

his majesty advised to lay the case before the parliament.* 1729. The house received a letter, at the same time, from their agents who, it seems, had altered their opinions and now intimated

* At the court at Kenfington, the 22d day of May, 1729. Prefent, the queen's most excellent majesty, guardian of the kingdom of Great-Britain and his majesty's lieutenant within the fame, in council,

His royal highness the prince of Wales. Archbp of Canterbury Duke of Newcastle Earl of Suffer Lord Chancellor Earl of Westmorland Earl of Londsdale Lord Privy Seal Earl of Burlington Vifcount Cobham Earl of Scarborough Viscount Falmouth Lord Steward Lord Chamberlain Earl of Coventry Lord Wilmington Earl of Grantham Duke of Somerfet Mr. Speaker Earl of Godolphin Duke of Bolton Mr. Chancellor of? Duke of Rutland Earl of Loudoun the exchequer \int Duke of Argyle Earl of Finlater Master of the Rolls Earl of Marchmont Duke of Montrols Sir Paul Methuen Duke of Kent Earl of Ilay Henry Pelham, Efg: Earl of Uxbridge Duke of Ancaster

- Upon reading this day at the board a report to his majefty from the lords of the committee of his majefty's most honorable privy council, dated the 22d of the last month, in the words following, viz.
- Your majelty having been pleafed, by your order in council of the first of February, to refer unto this committee an address from the houle of representatives of the province of the Massachusets bay, offering the reafon and grounds of their proceedings and conclusions against fettling a fixed falary of one thousand pounds per annum on the governor of that province for the time being, according to your majefty's inftructions to the present governor, and complaining against the governor for having adjourned the general court from Boston to Salem; the lords of the committee did, in obedience to your majefty's faid order, proceed, the fame day, to take the faid address into their confideration, but being informed that the lords commillioners for trade and plantations had under their examination feveral letters from William Burnet, Efq; your majefty's governor of that province, relating to the behaviour of the faid affembly in this affair, the lords of the committee did thereupon fend a copy of the faid address to the faid lords commisfioners, that they might have the whole matter before them, and directed them to report their opinion thereupon to this And the faid lords commissioners having accordcommittee. dingir

1729 intimated to the house that, notwithstanding the determination or advice of the privy council, it was not likely the affair would ever be brought before the parliament. This ingly confidered the faid feveral papers and heard Mr. attorney and follicitor general in fupport of your majefly's faid inftructions and also council in behalf of the faid assembly, have reported, upon the whole, That they seemed entirely averse to fettle a certain falary upon the prefent governor and those which shall fucceed him, yet the faid lords commissioners judge it abfolutely necessary that the affembly should settle a fixed falary of f. 1000 sterling per annum, at least, upon the governor, during the whole time of his government, it being abfolutely neceffary for your majelty's fervice that the independency of the governor upon the affembly should be preferved : And that as to the complaint against the governor for removing. the affembly from Bolton to Salem, his majefty in council, upon a former complaint of this nature against Col. Shute, had determined that point in favor of the governor and, therefore, the lords commiffioners were of opinion the prefent governor had acted in this matter agreeable to that determination. The lords of the committee hereupon beg leave to acquaint your majefty that, notwithstanding the faid lords commissioners for trade had fully heard all the reasons that were offered in behalf of the faid affembly, yet, the agents of the faid affembly petitioned this committee the 19th inftant, praying that they might be admitted to be heard before their lordships, who thought it proper to know upon what terms they would infift, that your majefty's attorney and follicitor general might be prepared to aniwer the fame, and they defiring to be heard upon the reasons they had to offer why the faid assembly should not fettle a fixed falary upon his majefty's governor of that province during the whole time of his government, their lordfhips appointed this day for hearing them thereupon; they having accordingly attended with their council, their lordships heard all that was offered on their behalf against fettling fuch a fixed falary, and alfo heard Mr. attorney and follicitor general in fupport of your majefty's faid inftructions recommending it to them : And do thereupon agree humbly to report to your majefty,

362

That by the charter granted to the Maffachufets bay the legiflative power is vefted in a governor, council and affembly, of whom the governor alone is nominated by your majelly; that the affembly is chofen annually by the people, and that the council is likewife chofen annually by the affembly in conjunction with the members of the council; that by the reafons infifted on by the council for the affembly in retufing to fettle

This letter the house ordered to be printed. The go- 1729. vernor in one of his meffages calls it " an undeniable proof of their endeavours to keep the people in igno-rance of the true state of their affairs." It seems to be preferring a prefent temporary convenience, in keeping up the fpirit of the people and diffusing a favorable opinion of their reprefentatives, to the future real advantage of the caufe, for fuch a measure must weaken the hands of the agents in England and tend to bring the matter before the parliament when, otherwife, it might have been avoided. THE a fixed falary, it appeared, the point contended for was to bring the governor appointed by your majefty over them into a dependence on their good will for his fublistence, which would manifeftly tend to a leffening of his authority and, confequently, of that dependence which this colony ought to have upon the crown of Great-Britain, by bringing the whole legiflative power into the hands of the people.

The power of railing taxes being by the charter granted to the general affembly, it was from thence argued that they ought to be left at liberty for the doing or omitting it as they shall think proper, but the words of the charter flew the intent of granting them this power to be that they fhould use it for the fervice of the crown, in the neceffary defence and fupport of your majefty's government of the faid province and the protection and prefervation of the inhabitants; and that, therefore, the refuling or neglecting to make due provision for the fupport of your majefty's governor, who is so essential a part of the government, must be looked upon as acting contrary to the terms of the faid charter and inconfistent with the truft reposed in them thereby. That, belides the inftruction given to the prefent governor by your majefty for this purpose, instructions have always been given by your majesty's predeceffors to former governors to recommend to the affembly the establishing a falary fuitable to the dignity of that post; notwithstanding which the affembly have hitherto refused to comply therewith, although they have by act of affembly fettled a fixed falary or allowance of fix fhillings a day on themfelves and ten shillings a day on the council. The present affembly have indeed offered your majefty's governor a falary equal to what was recommended by your majefty's inftructions, for the time he has been with them, but it is apprehended this was done only to tempt him to give up your majefty's inflructions for fettling it for the whole time of his government. And

THE governor having held feveral feffions at Salem, without any fuccefs he adjourned the court, to meet the 21st of August at Cambridge. This widened the breach, and the houfe grew warmer in their votes and meffages, and complained that they were to be compelled to measures against their judgment, by being harraffed and drove from one part of the province to another. The governor's friends observed the effect the controverfy had upon his fpirits. In a few days, he fell fick of a fever and died at Boston the 7th of September. Some attributed his illnefs to his taking cold, his carriage oversetting upon the causeway at Cambridge, the tide being high and he falling into the water. The refentment which had been railed ceafed, with people in general, upon his death. Many amiable parts of his character revived

- And here their lordfhips cannot, in justice to Mr. Burnet, omit taking notice that, by his fleady pursuit of your majelly's inftructions and rejecting the temptations offered by the affembly, he has acted with the utmost duty to your majelly and a just regard to the trust reposed in him as governor of that province.
- Upon a due confideration of all that has been offered on the part of the affembly in justification of their refusing to comply with your majefty's instructions, the lords of the committee cannot but agree in opinion with the lords commiffioners for trade and plantations, that it is abfolutely necessary for your majefty's fervice and for preferving that dependency which this colony ought to have upon Great-Britain and better fecuring a due execution of the laws for trade and navigation, that a falary of f. 1000 flerling per annum thould be fettled upon the governor during the whole time of his government, and confidering that the affembly of the province have fhewn fo little regard to your majefty's inftructions or to those of your royal predeceffors in this behalf, which the governors, from time to time, have been directed to lay before them, the lords of the committee do advife your majesty to lay the whole matter before the parliament of Great-Britain.
- Her majefty, this day, took the faid report into confideration and was pleafed, with the advice of his majefty's privy council, to approve thereof and to order, as is hereby ordered, that one of his majefty's principal fecretaries of flate flould receive the pleafure of the crown thercupon.

A true copy. Massachusets general court records. Temple Stanyan.

1729.

revived in their minds. He had been fleady and inflexi- 1729: ble in his adherence to his instructions, but discovered nothing of a grafping avaritious mind, it was the mode, more than the quantum, of his falary upon which he infifted. The naval office had generally been a post for fome relation or favorite of the governor, but Col. Tailer having been lieutenant governor and in circumstances far from affluent, he generously gave the post to him, without any referve of the iffues or profits. The only inftance of his undue exacting money, by fome, was thought to be palliated by the established custom of the government he had quitted. This did not justify it. In his disposal of public offices, he gave the preference to such as were disposed to favor his cause, and displaced some for not favoring it, and, in fome inftances, he went further than good policy would allow. He did not know the temper of the people of New-England. They have a ftrong fense of liberty and are more easily drawn than driven. He disobliged many of his friends by removing from his posts Mr. Lynde, a gentleman of the house, esteemed by both fides for his integrity and other valuable qualities, and he acknowledged that he could affign no other reason except that the gentleman had not voted for a compliance with the instruction. However, an immoral or unfair character was a bar to office and he gave his negative to an election of a councellor, in one instance, upon that principle only. His fuperior talents and free and eafy manner of communicating his fentiments made him the delight of men of fense and learning. His right of precedence in all companies facilitated the exercife of his natural disposition to a great share in the conversation and at the fame time 'caused it to appear more excusable.' His own account of his genius was, that it was late before it budded, and that, until he was near twenty years of age, his father despaired of his ever making any figure in life. This, perhaps, might proceed from the exact fevere discipline of the bishop's family, not calculated for every temper alike, and might damp and discourage his. To long and frequent religious fervices

266

1729. fervices at home, in his youth, he would fometimes pleafantly attribute his indifposition to a very fcrupulous exact attendance upon public worship, but this, might, really, be owing to an abhorrence of oftentation and meer formality in religion, to avoid which, as most of the grave ferious people of the province thought, he approached too near the other extreme. A little more caution and conformity to the different ages, manners, cuffoms and even prejudices of different companies, would have been more politic, but his open undifguifed mind could not fubmit to it. Being alked to dine with an old charter fenator who retained the cuftom of faying grace fitting, the grave gentleman defired to know which would be more agreeable to his excellency, that grace should be faid ftanding or fitting, the governor replied, ftanding or fitting; any way or no way, just as you please. He sometimes wore a cloth coat lined with velvet. It was said to be expressive of his character. He was a firm believer of the truth of revealed religion, but a bigot to no particular profession among christians and laid little stress upon modes and forms. By a clause in his last will, he ordered his body to be buried, if he died at New-York, by his wife, if in any other part of the world, in the nearest church-yard or burying ground, all places being alike to God's allfeeing eye.

THE affembly ordered a very honorable funeral at the public charge. A motion, at another time, was made in the house for a grant to a governor to bear the expence of his lady's funeral, a dry old representative objected to a grant for a governor's lady, had the motion been for a grant to bury the governor, he should have thought the money well laid out.

MR. Dummer reaffumed the administration. He did not intend to enter into the controversy about the falary; no advantage could arise from it, no new arguments could be used, the king's instructions were to be his rule, and he would not depart from them by accepting any grant as lieutenant governor; but the affair having been under confideration before his majesty in council and further proceedings expected, he would wait for further intelligence gence and directions. The house were not willing to 1729. admit that the inftruction had any refpect to the falary of a lieutenant governor, but if it had, they had given fufficient reasons against it, and were determined to come into no act for fixing a falary. Having continued the feffion at Cambridge until the 26th of September, he ordered an adjournment to the 29th of November, at Bofton; which was a further indication that he did not intend to prefs the inftruction ; however, at their first coming together, he recommended to them a compliance with it and, upon their affuring him, by a meffage, that, although they could not fettle a falary, yet they were ready, to give him an ample and honorable support; he defired them to lofe no time about it, for he would accept of no support unless it should be exactly conformable to his majesty's instruction. The house, notwithstanding, made a grant of £. 750, to enable him to manage the affairs of government. The council concurred with an amendment adding 'for the half year currant' but, this being fixing a falary for half a year, the house refused it.

UPON the news of Mr. Burnet's death, Mr. Belcher applied with all his powers to obtain the commission for the government. Governor Shute might have returned, but he declined it and generously gave his interest to Mr. Belcher who, fourteen years before, had given f. 500 sterling, which was never repaid, to facilitate Col. Shute's appointment. The controversy, which it was supposed a governor must be engaged in, caused fewer competitors, and the ministry were the more concerned to find a proper perfon. Lord Townshend asked Mr. Wilks, who had much of his confidence, whether he thought Mr. Belcher would be able to influence the people to a compliance with the king's instructions, he replied that he thought no man more likely. Their chufing him agent was a mark of their confidence in him, but it feemed estural to expect that they would be under ftronger presubces against him than against a perfon who had never e uged in their favor. Mr. Belcher's appointment occurrent the removal of Mr. Dummer from the place of 1729. of lieutenant governor. A young gentleman, with whole family Mr. Wilks was connected, (Mr. Thornton) Mr. Belcher had engaged to provide for, and he had no post in his gift, worth accepting, befides the naval office. To make a vacancy there, Col. Tailer was appointed lieutenant governor. The pleafure, if there was any, in fuperfeding Mr. Dummer, who had fuperfeded him before, could be no equivalent for the difference between a post of naked honour, and a post of profit which gave him a comfortable living. Mr. Dummer's administration has been, juftly, well fpoken of. His general aim was to do public fervice. He was compelled to fome compliances which appeared to him the leaft of two evils. It leffened him in Mr. Burnet's effeem who though the fhould have shewn more fortitude; but he retired with honor, and, after fome years, was elected into the council, where, from refpect to his former commission, he took the place of prefident, but being thought too favorable to the prerogative, after two or three years, he was left out. He feemed to lay this flight more to heart than the lofs of his commiffion, and aimed at nothing more, the reft of his life, than stium cum dignitate, selecting for his friends and acquains tance men of fense, virtue and religion and, enjoyed in life, for many years, that fame which, for infinitely wife reafons, the great creator has implanted in every generous breast a desire of, even after death.

368

Col. Tailer's commission was received and published before Mr. Belcher's arrival and it gave him an opportunity of doing a generous thing for Mr. Dummer. A vote had passed the two houses granting him nine hundred pounds, which, from a regard to his instructions, he had not figned, nor had he expressly refused it, and the court having been adjourned only, not prorogued, the next meeting was confidered as the same fession and Colonel Tailer ventured to fign it, not being a grant to himself and not against the letter of his instructions, and it was really faving money to Mr. Dummer, the grant, being intended for ervices to come as well as pass, would not have been renewed, or in part only.

ÇHAP,

MASSACHUSETS-BAY.

CHAP. IV.

369

From the arrival of Governor Belcher, in 1730, to the reimburfement of the charge of the expedition against Cape-Breton and the abolition of paper money, in 1749.

R. Belcher arrived the beginning of August in 1730, the Blandford man of war, Capt. Prothero. We approach so near to the present day that, for this reason as well as those I have mentioned in my presace, I shall give a more general account of affairs.

No governor had been received with a fhew of greater joy. Both parties fuppofed they had an interest in him. For men to alter their principles and practice, according to their interest, was no new thing. A sketch of Mr. Belcher's life and character will in some measure account for his obtaining the government, for the principal events in his administration and for the loss of his commission.

BEING the only fon of a wealthy father, he had high views from the beginning of life. After an accademical education in his own country, he travelled to Europe, was twice at Hanover, and was introduced to the court there, at the time when the princefs Sophia was the prefumptive heirefs to the British crown. The novelty of a British American, added to the gracefulnefs of his perfon, caufed diftinguishing notice to be taken of him, which tended to increase that afpiring turn of mind which was very natural to him. Some years after, Vol. II. B b he made another voyage to England, being then engaged in mercantile affairs, which, after his return home, proved, in the general courfe of them, rather unfuccefsful, and feem to have fuppreffed or abated the ruling paffion, but, being chosen agent for the house of reprefentatives, it revived and was gratified to the utmost, by his appointment to the government of Maffachufetsbay and New-Hampshire, and discovered itself in every part of his administration. Before he was governor, except in one instance, he had always been a favorer of the prerogative, and afterwards he did not fail of acting up to his principles. A man of high principles cannot be too jealous of himfelf, upon a sudden advancement to a place of power. The council never enjoyed lessfreedom than in his time. He proposed matters for the fake of their fanction rather than advice, rarely failing of a majority to approve of his fentiments.

HE lived elegantly in his family, was hofpitable, made great fhew in drefs, equipage, &c. and although by the depreciation of the currency he was curtailed of his falary, yet he difdained any unwarrantable or mean ways of obtaining money to fupply his expences. By great freedom in converfation and an unreferved cenfure of perfons whofe principles or conduct he difapproved, he made himfelf many enemies. In a private perfon, this may often pafs with little notice, but from a governor it is very hardly forgot, and fome never ceafed purfuing revenge until they faw him difplaced.

THE general court met the 9th of September.* The people waited with impatience the governor's first speech. Many flattered themfelves that the instruction for a fixed falary was withdrawn, others that, if it was continued, he would treat it rather as Dudley and Shute had done than as his immediate predecessfor, others who did not expect a relaxation were, from curiosity, wishing to know how he would acquit himself with the people, who fent him to England to oppose the instruction. After premising, that the honor of the crown and interest of of Great-Britain are very compatible with the privi- 1730. leges and liberties of the plantations, he tells the two houses that he had it in command from his royal master to communicate to them his 27th inftruction, refpecting the governor's fupport, that whilft he was in England he did every thing confiftent with reafon and justice for preferving and lengthening out the peace and welfare of the province, that they were no ftrangers to the fteps taken by his majefty with refpect to the unhappy difpute between the late governor and them and, lie hoped, after fuch a struggle, they would think it for the true interest of the province to do what might be perfectly acceptable; that nothing prevented this controverfy, and feveral other matters of dangerous confequence, being laid before the parliament, but his majefty's great lenity and goodnefs, which inclined him to give them one opportunity more of paying a due regard to what in his royal wildom he thinks fo just and reasonable. Had he stopped here, perhaps, less could not have been expected from him; but he unfortunately attempted to shew a similitude between the case of Cato shut up in Utica, and the Maflachusets-bay under the restraint of the royal instruction, commended the wildom of Cato in making fo brave a ftand for the liberties of his country, but condemned his putting an end to his life; when affairs became desperate, rather than fubmit to a power he could no longer refift; which inftance he brought as fome illustration of the late controversy, though he would not allow it to run parallel, Cæfar being a tyrant and the king the protector of the liberties of his subjects.

$730.

370

* At Cambridge, the fmall-pox being in Bolton.

It was faid, upon this occasion, that the governor must allow that the Massachusets assembly had done wifely hitherto in defending their liberties, for, otherwife, he had brought an instance of a case in no one respect similar to theirs; and, if they had done fo, it was because the instruction was a meer exertion of power, and then the parallel would run farther than he was willing to allow.

B b 2

372

1730. THE instruction was conceived in much stronger terms than that to governor Burnet, and it is declared that in cafe the affembly refuses to conform to it "his majefty will find himfelf under a neceffity of laying the undutiful behavior of the province before the legiflature of Great-Britain not only in this fingle inftance but in many others of the fame nature and tendency, whereby it manifeltly appears that this affembly, for fome years last past, have attempted by unwarrantable practices to weaken if not caft off the obedience they owe to the crown and the dependance which all colonies ought to have on their mother country." And in the close of the instruction his majesty expects " that they do forthwith comply with this propofal as the last fignification of our royal pleasure to them upon this subject, and if the faid affembly shall not think fit to comply therewith, it is our will and pleafure and you are required immediately to come over to this kingdom of Great-Britain, in order to give us an exact account of all that thall have paffed upon this fubject, that we may lay the fame before our parliament."

THE house proceeded just as they had done with governor Burnet. They made a grant to Mr. Belcher of f.1000 currency for defreying the expence of his voyage to New-England and as a gratuity for fervices while in England ;* and, fome time after, they voted him

* Five hundred pounds was also granted to the governor for his fervices in England, as agent for the house of representatives, and the fum of f. 1503 1s. 1d. which had been advanced by merchants in Boston and others and supplied the agents, was alfo granted to be paid out of the public treasury, and to the feveral perfons respectively. The honor of the governor who had fpent the money, as well as that of the houfe, was concerned. The council, although in general the fame perfons who had refused to confent to any grant of money for the ule of an agent in the choice of whom they had no fhare, were prevailed upon by the governor and the influence of a great number of the principal merchants of Boston who had advanced the money, to confent to a grant for the re-payment of it. The boufe expecting the like difficulty might arife upon a like occafion a fum equal to a thousand pounds sterling, to enable him 1730. to manage the public affairs, &c. but would fix no time. The council concurred it with an amendment, viz. " and that the fame fum be annually allowed for the governor's fupport." This, without a fund for the payment of it, was doing little more than the house had repeatedly done by their declarations that they doubted not future affemblies would make the like honorable provision for the fupport governor's according to the ability of the province; the amendment, notwithstanding, was not agreed to, and the house adhered to their own vote. This produced a fecond amendment, viz. " that the fame fum fhould be annually paid during his excellency's continuance in the government and relidence here;" but this alfo was nonconcurred. The two houses then conferred upon the fubject, the governor being prefent, and before they parted he made a long fpeech, expressing the great pleafure the council had given him in the part fion in future time, took this favorable opportunity of paffing a vote for the taking the fum of five hundred pounds sterling out of the province treasury and depositing it in the bank of England for the use of the house. To this vote the council gave their concurrence and the governor his confent. He repented of it-asterwards, when he found the agent employed by the house and supported with this money, was the principal promoter of the complaints against him which caused his removal from the government.

Bb 2

- † This was a matter of money which the houle fometimes refule to confer upon, but they have been unfteady in this refpect.
- ‡ It is unufual for governors to be prefent at a conference, between the two houfes. Mr. Shirley being defirous of acquainting himfelf with the arguments on both fides in fome affair in controverfy between the two houfes, intimated to the council his inclination to be prefent. When the houfe came up the fpeaker, Mr. Cufhing, feeing the governor in the chair, flarted back and remaining at the door of the council chamber, expreffed his furprize at feeing his excellency in the chair, the conference being intended between the two houfes only, but if his excellency intended to remain in the chair, only to hear the arguments, he imagined the houfe would have no objection to conferring in his prefence. This the governor confented to declaring he would not interfere.

ther

1730. they had taken and his concern and furprize at the conduct of the houfe, in running the rifque of the confequences of their refufal to comply with the inftruction, reminded them of the vaft expence which their former unfuccefsful difputes with their governors had occafioned to the province, but ufed no arguments to convince them of the reafonablenefs of the demand and its compatibility with their rights and privileges.

THE fmall-pox being in the town of Cambridge, where the court fat, the houfe defired to rife, but the governor let them know he would meet them in any other town and, the fame day, ordered an adjournment to Roxbury, where a bill paffed both houfes for the fupport of the governor, but, not coming up to the inftruction, the governor could not confent to it. The country party in the houfe, as much a folcecifm as it is, were the most zealous for the prerogative, and, except a few prerogative men who were always willing to fix the falary, none went fo great a length, at this time, towards fixing it as those who opposed any one step towards it, under Mr. Burnet.

THE people, in general, were well pleafed with the governor. It is not improbable that he would have obtained the fettlement of a falary during his admini-fration, if it had not been, in effect, a fettlement for his fucceffors alfo, for fuch a precedent could not eafily. have been refifted. The two parties which had long fublifted in the government were vying, each with the other, in measures for an expedient or accommodation. The prerogative men were Mr. Belcher's old friends, who were pretty well fatisfied that his going over to the other fide was not from any real allection to the cause, and that he must, sooner or later, differ with those who adhered to it, and for this event they waited patiently. The other party, by whofe interest he had been sent to England, adhered to him, expecting their reward. Accordingly, Mr. Cooke was foon appointed a juffice of the common pleas for the county of Suffolk.

To

To make way for him and another favorite, Col.Byfield, 1730. to whom Mr. Belcher was allied, two gentlemen, Col. Hutchinfon and Col. Dudley, were difplaced. They were both in principle steady friends to government, and the first of them was a fast friend to the governor. Mr. Belcher would not have been able to advance fo many of his friends as he did, if he had not perfuaded the council that, upon the appointment of a new governor, it was neceflary to renew all civil commiffions. Having obtained this point, he took the most convenient time to fettle 'the feveral counties. Before he fettled the county of York, he recommended to the judges a perfon for clerk of the court. This officer the province law impowers the judges to appoint. Some of them fent their excufe, being well fatisfied with the clerk they had, who was a faithful well approved officer, but the governor let the judges know, if he could not appoint a clerk he could a judge, and accordingly removed those who were not for his purpole and appointed others in their flead.* There was an inconfiftency, in delaying appointments, with the principles he advanced. If new committions were neceflary, they were neceflary immediately, and they might as well be delayed feven years as one.+

B b 4

It was faid that when Mr.Belcher, fome years after, was ordered by the king to remove his fon in law, Mr. Lyde, from the naval office, the power of appointment to which office is, by act of parliament, given to the governor, he was advifed to make an excufe, Mr.Lyde being an officer who gave general fatisfaction; but Mr. Belcher replied, that although the king could not make a naval officer yet he could make a governor, and he was forced to give up his fon in law. Nec lex eft juftior ulla— This was the first instance of an appointment made by the crown immediately to this office and, I think, to any office in the province the nomination to which is by the charter and royal commission left to the judgment and different of the governor.
The commissions to civil officers being in the king's name and tested by the governor, the renewal of fuch commissions upon the appointment of a governor has not been practifed fince Mr. Belcher's time. It was proposed in council by his fuccession.

Two

1731. Two or three sessions passed, when little more was done, on the governor's part; than repeating his demand for a fixed falary and intimating that he should be obliged to go to England and render an acccunt of their behavior to the king. The major part of the house were very defirous of giving fatisfaction to the governor and to their conftituents both, but that could not be. Mr. Cooke's friends in the town of Boston began to be jealous of him. A bill was prepared, which fets forth in the preamble, that fettling the falary would deprive the people of their rights as Englishmen. In the purview, after granting £.3400, which was about equal to 6.1000 sterling, it is further enacted that as his majesty had been graciously pleased to appoint J. B. Esq; to be the governor, who was a native of the country, whofe fortune was here, who, when a member of the council, as well as when in a private station; has always confulted the > but Mr. Read, a very eminent lawyer and, which is more, a perfon of great integrity and firmnels of mind, being then a member of the council, brought fuch arguments against the practice that the majority of the board refused to confent to it. Befides this general new appointment, Mr. Belcher, in the course of his administration, made more frequent removals of perfons from office than any governor before or fince. This was owing to the pufillanimity of the council. No appoint. ment can be made without their advice. The governor, it is true, can refuse his confent, every year, to their election, but the emoluments of a Maflachusets councellor are very small and can cause no great temptation to facrifice virtue. It is faid that one of the judges of the fuperior court expecting to be removed, in the latter part of Mr. Belcher's administration, applied by a friend in England to lord chief juffice Willes, who fignified his refolution that if any judge should be removed, without good reason assigned, he would himself complain to his majefty against the governor. The freedom and independence of the judges of England is always enumerated among the excellencics of the conflitution. The Maffachusets judges are far from independent. In Mr. Belcher's administration they were peculiarly dependent upon the governor. Before and face they have been dependent upon the affembly for their falary, granted annually, which fometimes has been delayed, fumetimes diminished, and rarely escapes being a Subject of debate and altercation.

the true interest of his country as well as the honor 1731. and dignity of the crown, therefore, it is most folemnly promifed and engaged to his most excellent majesty that there shall be granted the like fum for the like purpose at the beginning of the feffions in May every year dur-ing the governor's continuance in the administration and refidence within the province, provided, this act shall not be pleaded as a precedent or binding on any future affembly for fixing a falary on any fucceeding governor. The bill is in Mr. Cooke's hand writing and it is minuted at the bottom that the governor approved of it. The governor could not imagine fo evafive a thing could be approved in England. He might hope to improve it as being a further advance, than had been before made, and, by using this argument, that it would be much more rational for the houfe to do what they now had fully in their power to do, than to make a folemn promife that another house should do the same thing, the performance of which promife they would not have in their own power. The fcheme failed, the bill did not pass and from that time Mr. Belcher, despairing of carrying his point, turned his thought to obtaining a relaxation of his inftruction. Inftead of applying himfelf, he advised to an address from the house, not for the withdraw of the instruction but that the governor might have leave to receive the fum granted. This was allowed, but it was to be understood that, he was to infift upon a compliance with his inftruction as much as ever. Leave for confent to particular grants was obtained two or three years and, at length, a general order of leave to receive fuch fums as fhould be granted. This was the iffue of the controverfy about a fixed falary. Until Mr. Belcher's arrival, Mr. Cooke had differed from most who, from time to time, have been recorded in history for popular men. Generally, to preferve the favor of the people, they must change with the popular air, and when we furvey a course of action it will not appear altogether confistent. He had the art 1732. art of keeping the people steady in the applause of his measures. To be careful never to depart from the appearance of maintaining or enlarging rights, liberties and privileges was all he found necessary. Alson as he was defective in this respect and tried to secure his interest both with the governor and town of Boston he had like to have lost both. In the election of representatives for Boston, in 1733 or 1734, the governor's party appeared against him, he had lost many of the other party by what they called too great a compliance and he had a majority, after several trials, of one or two votes only in fix or several trials.

THE dispute about the manner of iffuing money out of the treasury was fettled unfavorably for the house. The charter provides, that all money shall be issued by warrant from the governor with advice and confent of the council. Until the year 1720 the money was brought into the treasury, by a vote or act originating in the houfe, and deftined to certain purpofes, and drawn out for those purposes by warrant from the governor with advice &c. but after that, the houfe not only deftined the money, when put into the treasury, but provided that none of it, except fome trifling fums for expresseand the like, should be issued without a vote of the whole court for payment. After fuch a vote they were willing the governor fhould give his warrant. This appeared in the king to render his governor contemptible and intirely to defeat the provision in the charter, and there was no profpect of any relaxation of the inftruction to the governor. When the fervants of the government had fuffered a long time for want of their money the house passed a bill which supplied the treasury in a way not materially differing from what had been in practice before 1720.

MR. Belcher had another instruction not to confent to the iffuing any bills of credit for a longer term than those wore to remain currant which had before been iffued, none of which extended beyond the year 1741. It would have been but a fmall burden upon 1732. the inhabitants to have paid the charges of every year and the debt which lay upon fuch year befides, but, inftead of that wife meafure, they fuffered one year after another to pafs with light taxes and laid heavy burdens upon diftant years, and the laft year, 1741, had more laid upon it than any four or five preceding years, and although even this was far fhort of what has been paid in fome fucceeding years, yet it was deemed an infupportable burden and it was generally fuppofed the promifes made by the acts of government to draw in the bills in that year would by fome means or other be evaded or openly violated. Mr. Belcher feemed determined to adhere to his inftruction and there was an expectation of fome great convultion which, was prevented by his being fuperfeded before that period arrived.

THE project we have taken notice of, p. 173, for settling the eastern country, Captain Coram pursued until he procured an order or instruction to Col. Phillips, the governor of Nova-Scotia, in 1730, to take poffeffion of the land between St. Croix and Kennebeck, and 30 men with an officer were fent to the fort at Pemaquid, built by the Maffachusets. Col. Dunbar, a gentleman out of employ, came over about the fame time, took the command of the fort and affumed the government of that part of the province. Mr. Belcher was applied to by the proprietors of the lands there, and the house of reprefentatives afferted the right of the province. The governor with advice of council iffued a proclamation requiring the inhabitants to remain in their obedience and due fubjection to the laws and government of the province. This feems to have been all that in prudence he could do. Some were for taking further measures to remove Dunbar which, as he had a royal commission, however liable to exceptions, Mr. Belcher thought by no means warrantable. The minds of the people were inflamed and when Dunbar came up to Befton he perfifted in his claim to the country which, with reports of fome 1732. Some not very decent expressions of the governor, raifed the refentment of many. Perfons of ill defign perhaps might have been able to have caufed a tumult. The lands indeed were claimed by a few particular perfons, but it was spread abroad that when this country should be detached from the reft of the province the supplies of fewel to the fea-port towns would ceafe or be burdened with heavy duties and the poor oppreffed. It happened that Mr.Samuel Waldo, a gentleman of good capacity and who would not eafily relinquish his right, undertook for the proprietors of the principal tract of the country claimed and, upon reprefentation to his majefty in council" the order to Phillips and the authority to Dunbar were revoked in 1732, and the government of the province afterwards thought it proper to place a garrifon in their own pay at Fort Frederick, the name given by Dunbar to the fort at Pemaquid.

I shall take notice of two or three only and those the most remarkable events during the rest of Mr. Belcher's administration.

1733. IN 1733 there was a general complaint throughout the four governments of New-England of the unufual fcarcity of money. There was as large a fum current in bills of credit as ever, but the bills having depreciated they answered the purposes of money fo much lefs in proportion. The Maffachufets and New-Hampfhire were clogged with royal instructions. It was owing to them that those governments had not iffued bills to as great an amount as Rhode-Island. Connecticut, although under no reftraint, yet, confilting of more hufbandmen and fewer traders than the reft, did not fo much feel the want of money. The Maffachulets people were diffatisfied that Rhode-Island should fend their bills among them and take away their fubstance and employ it in trade, and many people wilhed to fee the bills of each government current within the limits of fuch government only. In the midft of this difcontent, Rhode Island passed an act for issuing f. 100,000 upon-loan, for.

for, I think, 20 years to their own inhabitants, who would 1733. immediately have it in their power to add f.100,000 to their trading flock from the horfes, fheep, lumber, filh. &c. of the Maffachulets inhabitants. The merchants of Boston therefore confederated and mutually promifed and engaged not to receive any bills of this new emiffion, but, to provide a currency, a large number formed themselves into a company entred into covenants, chose directors, &c. and issued f. 110,000 redeemable in 10 years, in filver at 19f. per oz. the then current rate, or gold in proportion, a tenth part annually. About the fame time the Maffachufets treafury, which had been long thut was opened, and the debts of two or three years were all paid at one time in bills of credit; to this was added the ordinary emiffions of bills from New-Hampshire and Connecticut, and some of the Boston merchants, tempted by an opportunity of felling their English goods, having broke through their engagements and received the Rhode-Island bills, all the rest soon followed the example. All thefe emiffions made a flood of money, filver role from 19s. to 27s. the oz. and exchange with all other countries confequently role alfo, and every creditor was defrauded of about one third of his just dues. Affcon as filver role to 27f. the notes iffued by the merchants payable at 19/, were hoarded up and no longer answered the purposes of money. Although the currency was leffened by taking away the notes, yet what remanied never increased in value. filver continuing feveral years about the fame rate, until it took another large jump. Thus very great injustice was caufed by this wretched paper currency and no relief of any fort obtained; for, by this finking in value, though the nominal fum was higher than it had ever been before, yet the currency would produce no more fterling money than it would have done before the late emiffions were made.* IN

• William Tailer, Efq; the lieut. governor, dying in 1732, in 1733 Spencer Phips, Efq; nephew by the fifter and adopted for

382

#737. IN 1737, a controverfy which had long fublified between the two governments of Maffachufets-bay and New-Hampshire was heard by commissioners for that purpose appointed by the crown. Various attempts had been made to fettle this difpute, and it had been often recommended by the crown to the affemblies of the two provinces to agree upon arbitrators from neighbouring governments and to pass acts which should bind each province to be subject to their determinations. Several fuch acts paffed, but they were not exactly conformable one to the other, or the operation of them was by fome means or other obstructed. The Maffachusets refused terms which, afterwards, they would gladly have accepted. They have done the like in other controversies. Long poffeffion caufed them to be loth to concede any part of the territory. New-Hampshire took its name from the grants made by the council of Plimouth to captain John Mason. Of these there had been sour or five all containing more or lefs of the fame lands. Exceptions were taken to all of them, and that which was the least imperfect was dated after the grant of Massa. chufets-bay, fo that the whole controverfy turned upon the construction of the Massachusets charters. The first charter made the northern boundary to be three miles to the northward of Merrimack river, or to the northward of any and every part thereof. After running weltward about 30 miles from the fea the river alters its courfe and tends to the north, or, to fpeak with more propriety, having run from its crotch or the meeting of Pemigewaffet river and Winnepiffiauke pond to the fouthward about 50 miles, it then tends to the eastward about 30 miles, until it empties into the fea. It was urged by the advocates for Maffachulets colouy that their boundary was to be three miles to the northward of the northernmost part of the river and to extend east and west from the Atlantic to the South sea, This

> to Sir William Phips, fucceeded. Mr. Belcher used his interest for Adam Winthrop, Esq; Both Winthrop and Phips had been several years members of the council.

This fwallowed up all New-Hampshire and the greatest 1737. part of the province of Main. At a hearing before the king in council in 1677 the agents for Maffachufets, by advice, difelaimed all right of jurifdiction beyond the three miles north of the river according to the courfe, and it was determined they had a right as far as the river extended, but how far the river did extend was not then expressly mentioned. It feems however not to have been doubted, for although at the time of the grant of the first charter it does not appear that the course was known any great diftance from the fea yet, foon after the government was transferred from Old England to New, it was as well known by the name of Merrimack as far as Penicook as it is at this day, and the tribe of Indians which dwelt there had a correspondence with the English, and in 1639 perfons were employed by the government of Maffachufets to explore that part of the country and there are still preferved the testimonies of divers perfons declaring that they before that time always underflood the river to be called by the fame name, from the crotch to the mouth. If the first charter of the Maffachufets had continued it is not probable any different construction would ever have been started; but in the new charter the boundary is thus expressed, "extending from the great river commonly called Monomack alias Merrimack on the north part and from three miles northward of the faid river to the atlantick or western fea or ocean on the fouth part, &c. The whole, however of the old colony being included in the new province, many years pafied without any thought of a different construction of bounds in the two charters and the difputes between New-Hampshire and the Masfachufets have been, principally, concerning the towns of Salifbury and Haverhill which, when first granted by the Maffachufets, were made to extend more than three miles from the river and the part beyond the three miles remained under the jurifdiction by which they had been granted, which New-Hampshire complained of. A new line.

1737. line, to begin three miles north of the mouth of Merrimack and fo run west to the fouth sea, is a modern construction. Some hints had been given of fuch a line, before or about the year 1726, and it was supposed by New Hampshire that the Massachusets were induced thereby to make grants of townships between Merrimack' and Connecticut river, in order to strengthen their title by poffeffion. Still there was a prospect of accommodation and, in the year 1731, the committees from the affemblies of the two provinces differed only upon the point of equivalents, the Maffachufets defiring to retain under their jurifdiction the whole of those towns which lay upon the river and to give other lands as an equivalent for the property; but about the fame time the gentlemen of New-Hampshire who had for many years before been at the helm thinking, and perhaps justly, that they were not well treated by Mr. Belcher, determined to exert themfelves to obtain a governor for that province and to remain no longer under the fame governor with the Maffachusets. They had but little chance for this unless they could enlarge their bounds. The very propolal of a diftinct government as it increased the number of officers of the crown they thought would be a favorable circumstance in fettling the controversy with Massachusets.

THE houfe of reprefentatives of New Hampshire, Oct. 7, 1731, by a vote appointed John Rindge, Efq; a merchant there who was bound to England, their agent to follicit the fettlement of the boundaries. But their main dependance was upon Mr. Thomlinson, a gentleman who had been in NewHampshire, and was then a merchant of note in London, and perhaps was as capable of conducting their cause as any person they could have pitched upon. He had the friendship of Col. Bladen who at that day had great weight in the board of trade and had conceived very unfavorable sentiments of the Massachusets in general and did not like Mr. Belcher the governor. He employed a follicitor, Ferdinando Paris, one of the first rate and who had a peculiar talent at flurring the -charasters characters of his antagonifts. Many of his briefs which 1737, I have feen, abound in this way. The first step in confequence of Mr: Rindge's petition was a question fent by the lotds of trade to the attorney and follicitor general for their opinion, " From what part of Merriinack river the three miles from whence the dividing line between the province of New-Hampfhire and the province of the Maffachufets bay is to begin, ought to be taken according to the intent of the charter of William and Mary." This was a plain intimation that if the point where to begin could be fettled, nothing more was neceffary, the west line claimed by New-Hampshire was to follow of course. The Maffachusets agent (Mr. Wilks) by his council would fay nothing upon the queftion, becaufe it would not determine the matters in difpute. Report was made, however, that it ought to begin three miles north of the mouth of Merrimack river. It was then propoled that commissioners should be appointed to fettle this controverfy. This the Maffachus fets were averle to, unless they knew who they were to be. They were at the fame time afraid of it's being determined in England, ex parte, if they should refuse to confent. A committee of the general court reported that the agent fhould be inftructed that the province would agree to commiffioners to be appointed, to fettle the controverfy, here. This report was accepted, the house intending the commissioners should be agreed upon by the two governments, fome of the committee intending the agent fhould understand his instructions, to confent to the appointment of commissioners provided they fat here or in one of the two governments. A comma after the word appointed and after the word controverfy would give the fenfe of the house, the last comma left out it might be taken in the fenfe of the committee, but as it is most probable the letter had no regular pointing their meaning was to be guefied at.

THIS was treating the agent ill, and he was cenfured by the houle for not observing his instructions. I have You. II. 6 c 386 1737. heard this account of the affair from fome of the committee, who excufed themfelves for this equivocal report as being neceffary for the public fervice, the houfe not being willing to confent to an explicit fubmiffion. It was made a condition of the fubmiffion that private property fhould not be affected. The miniftry in later inftances have not waited for an express fubmiffion but have appointed commiffioners upon application from one party only.

THE commiffioners were all fuch as the New-Hampfhire agent proposed, five councellors from each of the governments of New-York, Rhode-Island and Nova-Scotia. With the two former governments the Massachusets were then in controversy about lines. The latter it was faid was disaffected to charter government. Connecticut, proposed by Massachusets, was rejected because of a bias from their trade, religion, &c. which New Hampshire was astraid of. The place for the meeting of commissioners was Hampton in New-Hampshire, the first of August.

THE commissioners from Nova-Scotia, with some of Rhode-Island, met at the time appointed and were afterwards joined by Mr. Livingstone from New-York, who presided. After many weeks spent in hearing the parties and examining their evidence, the only doubt in the commissioners minds was, whether the Massachulets new charter comprehended the whole of the old colony. Not being able to fatisfy themfelves, and perhaps not being unwilling to avoid the determination, they agreed to make a fpecial judgment or decree, the fubftance of which was, that, if the charter of William and Mary grants to the Maffachufets-bay all the lands. granted by the charter of Charles the first, they then adjudge a curve line to begin three miles north of the mouth of the river and to keep the fame diftance from the river as far as the crotch or parting at Pemigewaffet and Winepefiaukee and then to run west towards the fouth fea until it meets with his majefty's other governments, ments, but if the charter of William and Mary did not 1737 contain &c. then they adjudge a welt line to begin at the fame place three miles north of the mouth and to run to the fouth fea. This point in doubt they fubmitted to his majesty's royal pleafure.

THE Maffachufets were fure of their caule. It was impossible, they thought, confistent with common fenfe, that the point in doubt fhould be determined against them. They thought it fafeft however to fend to England a special agent, Edmund Quincy, Esq; one of the council, who had been one of the court's agents before the commissioners. He was joined with Mr. Wilks, and Mr. Belcher by his interest prevailed upon the affembly to add a third, his wife's brother, Richard Partridge, Exceptions, called an appeal, were offered to the judgment of the commissioners. Mr. Quincy died of the small pox by inoculation, soon after his arrival in London, the other two knew little or nothing of the controverfy. The commissioners, however, had rendered it as difficult to determine a line against the Massachufets as if they had given a general judgment in their favor. The New-Hampshire agent and follicitor thought of no expedient. In their brief, they pray the lords committee to report " that all the lands lying to the northward of Merrimack river which were granted by the charter of king Charles the first to the late colony of the Massachufets bay are not granted to the prefent province of the Maffachufets-bay by the charter of king William and queen Mary." This never could have been done. At the hearing, it was thought proper to lay afide all regard, to the judgment of the commissioners and to proceed. upon an intirely new plan. No doubt was made, that the old colony was all included in the new province. The question was, what were the northern bounds of the colony of Maffachufets-bay, which the council of Plimouth when they fold the territory to the patentees, and the king when he granted the jurifdiction, had in contemplation. This, it was faid, must be a line three Cc 2 miles 1737. miles north of a river not fully explored, but whole general courfe was fuppoled to be east and welt. So far therefore as it afterwards appeared that the river kept this courfe, fo far it was equitable the line should continue, but, as on the one hand, if the river had altered its courfe and turned to the fouth, it would have been inequitable to have reduced the grant to a very small track, so on the other hand, when it appeared to turn to the north it was inequitable to extend the grant and make a very large territory and therefore defeat other grants made about the fame time.* It was therefore determined that the norther boundaries of Massachus bay should be a line three miles from the river as far as Pantucket-falls, then to run W: 10 deg. N. until it meets New-York line.

388 THE HISTORY OF

THE Maffachufets thought themfelves aggrieved. They submitted the controversy to commissioners to be appointed by the crown, and had been fully heard. The whole proceedings of the commiffioners were fet afide and, without any notice to the government, the controverfy was determined by a committee of council upon a new point on which their agent had never been instructed. And, however there might be the appearance of equity in the principle upon which their lordships proceeded, yet the Massachusets supposed, if their poffession for one hundred years, together with the determination of the king in council in 1677 and the acquiescence of all parties in this determination for about. fifty years had been urged and duly weighed. the balance upon the fole principle of equity would have been in their favor. It increased their mortification to find that they had loft by this new line feveral hundred thoufand

* The grant to Sir Henry Rofwell and others was March 19th 1627. That to Mafon was November 7th 1629, and was to extend 60 miles from the fea. But the river Merrimack turning to the north after about 30 miles from the fea if the Maffachufets bounds had continued three miles diffant from the river to the crotch it would comprehend more than half of Mafon's grant. thoufand acres more than the utmost claim ever made by 1737. New-Hampshire; for Merrimack river from the mouth to Pantucket-falls tending to the fouth, it made a difference of 4 or 5 miles in breadth, the whole length of the line, between a line to run west from Pantucket falls and a line west from the black rocks.

THE difpute about the bounds of the province of Main, which lies on the other fide New-Hampshire, was upon the construction of the word Northwestward. The Maffachufets urged that it was the evident defign of the grantors of the province of Main to describe a territory about 120 miles square. At that day this was probably the reputed diftance from Newichawannock or Piscataqua river to Kennebeck, along the fea coast, the general courfe of which was northeast and fourhwest, after going up the two rivers to the heads the lines were to run northwestward until 120 miles were finished and then a line back parallel to the line upon the fea. The agents for New-Hampshire, at the court of commissioners, infisted that every body understood northwestward to be north a little, perhaps less than a quarter of a point, weft. It not being possible to think of any reason for a line to run upon this course, the Maffachufets could fearce suppose the New-Hampshire agents to be ferious, and imagined the commiffioners would need no other reply than that every body underftood a line running westward to be a line from east to west and by the fame rule of construction they supposed northweltward to be from foutheast to northwest; that northeaftward being explained in the fame grant to be as the coast lay, proved in fact to be from fourhwest to northeast. They were, however, furprized with the determination of the commissioners that northwestward intended north two degrees weft. Why not one degree or three degrees as well as two? From this part of the judgment the Maffachufets appealed. The agents in England obtained the celebrated Doctor Halley's opinion, in writing under his hand, that in the language and Caz understanding 1737 understanding of Mathematicians a line to run northwestward is a line to run northwest, but this opinion did not prevail and the judgment of the commissioners upon this point was confirmed by his majesty in council.

> IT behoved Mr. Belcher, the governor of both provinces, to carry an even hand. It happened that the general court of the Maffachusets, whilst it fat at Salifbury on the occasion of this controversy, made him a grant of £.800 currency, in confideration of the deficiency of their former grants, for his falary and his extraordinary expence and trouble in attending the court at a distance from his house and family. Soon after this grant, he adjourned the general courts of both provinces, in order to their determining whether to abide by the refult of the commissioners or to appeal from it, but the court of New Hampshire was adjourned to a day or two after the Maffachulets court, and it was faid they were prevented entring the appeal within the time limited. He did not care that either affembly should do any bufinefs when he was absent, and therefore intended first to finish the Massachusets business and immediately after proceed to New-Hampshire.

> THIS afforded matter of complaint from that province, which Mr. Belcher was called upon to answer, and it was determined the complaint was well founded, and it being urged that the f.800 was intended as a bribe to influence him to this measure, the Maffachusets thought their own honor concerned and joined with him in his defence, which perhaps increased the fuspicion of guilt and hastened his removal. That I may finish what relates to the controverfy between the two provinces. I must take notice of the conduct of the Massachufets upon the receiving his majefty's order in council. The lines, by the order, were to be run by two furveyors, one on the part of each province, but if either province refused, the other was to proceed ex parte. New-Hampshire whose highest expectations were exceeded proposed to join but were refused by the Massachusets, and and thereupon appointed furveyors to run the lines of 1737the Maffachufets and province of Main ex parte. Both lines were complained of as being run favorably for New Hampfhire; that of the province of Main is a fubject of new controverfy it having been fuggefted that the furveyor miltook the main branch of the river Newichewanock, which if he had purfued would have made 5 or 6 miles in breadth to the advantage of Maffachufets. This refufal to join proceeded from the feeble irrefolute ftate of the minds of the houfe of reprefentatives. Unwilling by any act of their own to express their fubmiffion to what they called an unequal decree, they ran the rifque of its being carried into execution ftill more unequally, and yet fucceeding houfes, by a fubfequent long continued paffive fubmiffion, as effectually fubjected the province as if it had been explicitly acknowledged at first.*

AFTER the controverfy about the governor's falary and the fupply of the treafury was finished, there feemed to be a general disposition to reft, and we hear little of a party in opposition to the governor for feveral years together. Whilst the controverfy with New-Hampshire was depending all of every party engaged in defence of the right of the province. Besides, Mr. Cooke, who had been many years at the head of the popular party, was worn out with fervice and having been fome time in a declining state, died in the fall of 1737, and the town of Boston, were so far from an apprehension of danger to their liberties that they chose in his stead Mr. Wheelwright, the commission of his C c 4 approbation

* I may not omit mentioning the death of Thomas Hutchinson, Esq; December 3d 1739, who had been of the council except two years from 1714. I with that many of his posserity may so justly deferve the character of true friends to their country. Regardless of the frowns of a governor or the threats of the people he spoke and voted according to his judgment, attaching himself to no party any further than he found their measures tended to promote the public interest. 1739. approbation after being elected by the council and houfe, and in 1738 three of the reprefentatives of the town had the character of friends to government, but towards the end of the year a great clamour arole against the governor for adhering to his instruction about paper money and, against the three representatives for their pernicious principles upon the fubject of paper money, and at the town election for 1729 three others were chofen in their flead, twoj of them profeffedly difaffected to the governor and promoters of popular measures, the third, j although of great integrity, and for that reafon defirous of a fixed currency, yet in his judgment against reducing the paper money and a favorer of fchemes for preventing its depreciation. Many country towns followed the example of Boston and it appeared that a majority of the house were of the fame principles with the town members. After Mr. Belcher's arrival, the house, as we have observed, had passed a vote for depositing 500 f. sterling in the bank of England to be used as they or their successors should think proper. This was concurred in council and confented to by the governor. This money it was faid could not be better applied than in folliciting a relaxation of the governor's instruction concerning paper money, and Mr. Kilby one of the Bolton representatives was chosen agent for the house and a petition was by him presented from the house to his majefty in council but it had no effect.

> A general dread of drawing in all the paper money without a fublitution of any other inflrument of trade in the place of it, disposed a great part of the province to favor what was called the land bank or manufactory scheme, which was began or rather revived in this year 1739, and produced fuch great and lafting mischiefs that a particular relation of the rife, progress and overthrow of it may be of use to discourage and prevent any attempts of the like nature in future ages. By a ftrange conduct in the general court they had been ifluing bills of credit for 8 or 10 years annually for charges of go-1739. vernment, and being willing to eafe each prefent year they had put off the redemption of the bills as far as they could, but the governor being reftrained by his instruction from going beyond the year 1741, that year was unreasonably loaded with 30 or 40 thousand pounds fterling taxes, which according to the general opinion of the people it was impossible to levy, not only on account of the large fum, but becaufe all the bills in the province were but just sufficient to pay it, and there was very little filver or gold, which by an act of government was allowed to be paid for taxes as equivalent to the bills. A scheme was laid before the general court by the author of this hiftory, then one of the representatives of Boston, in which it was proposed to borrow in England upon intereft and to import into the province a fum in filver equal to all the bills then extant, and therewith to redeem them from poffesiors and furnish a currency for the inhabitants, and to repay the filver at diftant periods which would render the burden of taxes tolerable by an equal division on a number of future years, and would prevent the diffrefs of trade by the lofs of the only inflrument, the bills of credit, without another provided in its place. But this proposal was rejected. One great frailty of human nature, an inability or indifpolition to compare a distant, though certain inconvenience or diftrefs with a prefent convenience or delight is faid by fome strangers, who come among us from Europe, to be prevalent in Americans fo as to make it one of their diftinguishing characteristicks. Be that as it may, it is certain that at this time a great number of private perfons alledging that the preceding general court having fuffered the province to be brought into distress from which it was not in the power of their fucceffors, to afford relief, the royal instruction being a bar to any future emissions of bills until all that were then extant should be redeemed, sefolved to interpose. Royal instructions were no bar the proceedings of private perfons. The project of 1740. of a bank in the year 1714 was revived. The projector of that bank now put himfelf at the head of 7 or 800 perfons, fome few of rank and good eftate, but generally of low condition among the plebeians and of small estate, and many of them perhaps infolvent. This notable company were to give credit to f. 150,000 lawful money. to be iffued in bills, each perfon being to mortgage a real eftate in proportion to the fums he fubscribed and took out, or to give bond with two furcties, but perfonal fecurity was not to be taken for more than 100 f. from any one perfon. Ten directors and a treasurer were to. be chosen by the company. Every fubscriber or partner was to pay 3 per cent. interest for the fum taken out, and 5 per cent. of the principal, and he that did not pay bills might pay the produce and manufacture of the province at fuch rates as the directors from time to time should fet, and they should commonly pass in lawful money. The pretence was that, by thus furnishing a medium and instrument of trade, not only the inhabitants in general would be better able to procure the province bills of credit for their taxes, but trade, foreign and inland, would revive and flourish. The fate of the project was thought to depend upon the opinion which the general court should form of it. It was neceffary therefore to have a houfe of reprefentatives well disposed. Besides the 800 perfons subscribers, the needy part of the province in general favored the fcheme. One of their votes will go as far in popular elections as one of the most opulent. The former are most numerous and it appeared that by far the majority of the reprefentatives for 1740 were subscribers to or favorers of the fcheme, and they have ever fince been diftinguished by the name of the land bank house.

+ James Allen and Chriftopher Killy. I Edward Bromhald.

MASSACHUSETS-BAY. 393

MEN of effates and the principal merchants in the province abhorred the project and refufed to receive the bills, but great numbers of fhopkeepers who had lived for a long time before upon the fraud of a depreciating currency.

carrency, and many small traders gave credit to the bills. 1749. The directors, it was faid, by a vote of the company, be-came traders and iffued just what bills they thought pro-per without any fund or fecurity for their ever being redeemed. They purchased every fort of commodity, ever fo much a drug, for the fake of pushing off their bills and by one means or other a large fum, perhaps fifty or fixty thousand pounds, was abroad. To leffen the temptation to receive the bills, a company of merchants agreed to iffue their notes, or bills redeemable by filver and gold at diftant periods, much like the scheme in 1733, and attended with no better effect. The governor exerted himself to blast this fraudulent undertaking, the land bank. Not only fuch civil and military officers as were directors or partners, but all who received and paid any of the bills were displaced. The governor negatived the perfon chofen speaker of the house, being a director of the bank, and afterwards negatived 13 of the new elected councellors who were directors or partners in or reputed favorers of the fcheme. But all was infufficient to fupprefs it. Perhaps the major part, in number, of the inhabitants of the province openly or fecretly were well withers to it. One of the directors afterwards acknowledged to me that altho' he entered into the company with a view to the public interest yet when he found what power and influence they had in all public concerns, he was convinced it was more than belonged to them, more than they could make a good ufe of and therefore unwarrantable. Many of the most fenfible diferete perfons in the province faw a general confusion at hand. The authority of parliament to controul all public and private perfons and proceedings in the colonies was, in that day, questioned by no body. Application was therefore made to parliament for an act to suppress the company, which notwithstanding the oppofition made by their agent was very eafily obtained, and therein it was declared that the act of the 6th of King George the first, chapter the eighteenth, did.

395

$740. did, does and shall extend to the colonies and plantations in America. It was faid the act of George the first, when it paffed, had no relation to America, but another act 20 years after gave it a force even from the passing it which it never could have had without. This was faid to be an inftance of the transcendent power of parliament. Although the company was diffolved, yet the act of parliament gave the possessions of the bills a right of action against every partner or director for the fums expressed with interest. The company were in a maze. At a general meeting fome, it was faid, were for running all hazards although the act fubjected them to a præmunire, but the directors had more prudence and advifed them to declare that they confidered themfelves diffolved and met only to confult upon fome method of redeeming their bills from the polieflors, which every man engaged to endeavor in proportion to his interest, and to pay in to the directors or fome of them to burn or deflroy. Had the company iffaed their bills at the value expressed in the face of them, they would have had no reafon to complain of being obliged to redeem them at the fame rate, but as this was not the cafe in general, and many of the possessions of the bills had acquired them for half their. value, as expressed, equity could not be done, and fo far as refpected the company perhaps the parliament was not very anxious, the lofs they fulfained being bat a jult penalty for their unwarrantable undertaking if it had been properly applied. Had not the parliament -interpofed, the province would have been in the utmost confusion and the authority of government intirely in the land bank company:

WHILST Mr. Belcher, by his vigorous opposition to the land bank, was rendering himfelf obnoxious to one half the people of the province, measures were pursuing in England for his removal from the government. Befides the attempts which we have mentioned from New Hampshire which had never been laid aside, there had always been a difassected party in Massachusets who had been been using what interest they had in England against 1740. him. Lord Wilmington president of the council, the speaker of the house of commons and Sir CharlesWager, first Lord of the admiralty, all had a favorable opinion of Mr. Belcher, so had Mr. Holden who was at the head of the differences in England, and all upon one occasion or another had appeared for him.

THE most unfair and indirect measures were used with each of these perfons to render Mr. Belcher obnoxious and odious to them. The first instance was several years before this time. A letter was fent to Sir Charles Wager in the name of five perfons whose hands were counterfeited, with an infinuation that Mr. Belcher encouraged the destruction of the pine trees referved for mass for the navy and fuffered them to be cut into logs for boards. Forgeries of this fort strike us with more horror than false infinuations in conversation, and perhaps are equally mischievous in their effects. The latter may appear the less criminal because abundantly more common.

AN anonymous letter was fent to Mr. Holden, but the contents of it declared that it was the letter of many of the principal ministers of New-England who were afraid to publish their names lest Mr. Belcher should ruin them. The charge against him was a fecret undermining the congregational intereft in concert with Commiffary Price and Doctor Cutler, whilft at the fame time he pretended to Mr. Holden and the other diffenters in England to have it much at heart. To remove suspicion of fraud the letter was superferibed in writing either in imitation of Doctor Colman's hand, a correfpondent of Mr. Holden, or which is more probable a cover of one of his genuine letters had been taken off by a perfon, of not an unblemished character, to whose care it was committed, and made use of to inclose the fpurious one. Truth and right are more frequently, in a high degree, violated in political contests and animofities than upon any other occasion. It was well known that nothing 1740 nothing would more readily induce a perfon of fo great virtue as the speaker to give up Mr. Belcher than an instance of corruption and bribery. The New-Hampthire agents therefore furnished him with the votes of the Maffachufets affembly containing the grant of £.800 and evidence of the adjournment of New-Hampshire affembly, alledged to be done in confequence, nor was he undeceived until it was too late.

MR. Wilks, the Maffachufets agent, who was in great efteem with Lord Wilmington, and was really a perfon of a fair upright mind, had prevented any impressions to Mr. Belcher's prejudice, but it unluckily happened that the land bank company employed Richard Partridge, brother by marriage to Mr. Belcher, as their agent. He had been many years agent for his brother, which fact was well known to his lordship, but, from an expectation of obtaining the fole agency of the province by the interest of the prevailing party there, engaged zealoufly in oppofing the petitioners to the houfe of commons, and gave out bills at the door of the houfe. It was faid that all Mr. Belcher's opposition to the fcheme, in the province, was meer pretence; had he been in earnest, his agent in England would never venture to appear in support of it, and this was improved with Lord Wilmington to induce him to give up Mr. Belcher and it fucceeded. Still the removal was delayed one week after another, two gentlemen from the Maffachufets continually folliciting. At length, it being known that Lord Euston's election for Coventry was dubious, one of these gentlemen undertook to the Duke of Grafton to fecure the election, provided Mr. Belcher might immediately be removed, and, to accomplifh his defign, he reprefented to Mr. Maltby, a large dealer in Coventry stuffs and a zealous diffenter, that Mr. Belcher was, with the epifcopal clergy, confpiring the ruin of the congregational interest in New-England, and unless he was immediately removed it would be irrecoverably loft, that the Duke of Grafton had promifed, if Lord Eufton's election election could be fecured, it fhould be done, that letters 174¢. to his friends in Coventry would infallibly fecure it, that he could not better employ his intereft than in the caufe of God and of religion. Maltby fwallowed the bait, ufed all his intereft for lord Eufton, the two gentlemen fpent three weeks at Coventry, and having fucceeded, agreable to the Duke's promife Mr. Belcher was removed a day or two after their return. This account I received from Mr. Maltby himfelf, who lamented that he had fuffered himfelf to be fo eafily impofed on.

398

A few weeks longer delay would have baffled all the fchemes. The news arrived of his negativing 13 counfellors and difplacing a great number of officers concerned in the land bank, and his zeal and fortitude were highly applauded when it was too late. Being in London at this time, I had opportunity of fully informing myfelf of thefe facts. Certainly, in public employments no man ought to be condemned from the reports or accufations of a party without a fufficient opportunity given him to exculpate himfelf, a plantation governor efpecially, who, be he without guile, or a confummate politician, will infallibly have a greater or leffer number difaffected to him.

Mr. SHIRLEY, successfor to Mr. Belcher, was a gentleman of Suffex, bred in the law and had been in office in the city, but having prospect of a numerous offspring, was advised to remove to Boston in the Maffachusers, where he had resided fix or eight years and acquired a general efteem, and if there must be a change it was faid to be as acceptable to have it in his favor as any perforwhosever. His lady was then in London and had obtained the promise of the collector's place for the port of Boston and would have preferred it to the government, but a strong interest being made for Mr. Frankland, fince Sir Henry Frankland, there was no way of providing for both, except by giving the government to Mr. Shirley.

THÉ

1740. The news came to Boston the first week in July. Mr. Shirley was 'at Providence in Rhode Island government, council for the Maffachusets before a court of commissioners appointed to fettle the line between the two governments. As I was not then in America and the records of that line are burnt; I cannot give fo particular an account of the proceedings of those commissioners as otherwife I flouid have done. It is certain. that for divers years past the only part in controversy between the two governments was a fmall gore of land between Attleborough in Maffachufetts and the old township of Providence. A great part of the Massachufets affembly wished it might be ceded to Rhode-Island, but a few tenacious men, who do not always regard confequences; influenced a majority against it. Besides a settlement made by commissioners in 1664 or 65, another settlement had been made or the old one confirmed in 1708, but Rhode-Island, encouraged by the ill success of the Maffachulets in the controverly with New-Hampshire, applied to his majest to appoint commiffioners to fettle the line between the two governments. The confent or fubmission of the Massachusets to such appointment was not thought neceffary and, if they would not appear, the commiffioners were to proceed ex parte. The Maffachufets affembly thought proper to appear by their committee, having no apprehensions the controverly would turn, in the judgment of the commiffioners, upon a point never before relied upon, viz. that. the colony of New-Plimouth having no charter from the crown, Rhode-Island charter must be the fole rule of determining the boundary, although the patent from the council of Plimouth to Bradford and afforiates was prior to it. The colony of New-Plimouth was a government de facto and confidered by King Charles as fuch in his letters and orders to them before and after the grant of Rhode-Island charter and, when the incorporation was made of New-Plimouth with Maffachufets, &c. the natural and legal conftruction of the province charter charter feems to be that it should have relation to the 1741. time when the feveral governments incorporated respectively, in fact, became governments. A gentleman of the council of New-York had great influence at the board of commissioners. The argument which had been made use of in former controversies, that Massachufets was too extensive and the other governments they were contending with, of which New-York was one, were too contracted, was now revived. To the furprize of Maffachusets, a line was determined which not only took from them the gore formerly in difpute, but the towns of Bristol, Tiverton and Little-Compton. and great part of Swanzey and Barrington.* An appeal was claimed and allowed to his majefty in council, where, after lying four or five years, the decree of the court of commissioners was confirmed. In the profecution and defence of this title, it has been faid, that fome material evidence was never produced which would have supported the Massachusets claim.

400

MR. Shirley found the affairs of the province in 2 perplexed state. The treasury was shut and could not be opened without fome deviation from the royal inftructions, the bills of credit were reduced and nothing fubstituted as a currency in their stead, the land bank party carried every point in the house, there seemed to be a necessity of fecuring them, the great art was to bring them over to his measures and yet not give in to their measures fo as to lose his interest with the rest of the province and with the ministry in England. Some of the principal of them, who knew their own importance, were willing to have fome affurance of favor from him, at the fame time they engaged to do every thing to serve him. The first step, on their part, was the advancement of the governor's falary to the full value Dd VOL. II. of 1741. of one thousand pounds sterling per annum. This had been most unjustifiably evaded all the latter part of Mr. Belcher's administration, by granting a fum in bills of credit without a due regard to their depreciation. Mr. Kilby, who had been very active for Mr. Shirley's interest and against Mr. Belcher, in England, was chosen agent for the province in England, and Mr. Wilks, who had been agent the whole of the last administration, was laid afide. Mr. Auchmuty, who had been one of the land bank directors, was joined with Mr. Kilby in the affair of the Rhode-Island line. A grant of about £.200 fterl. was made to John Sharpe, Efq; for his account of charge in defending Mr. Belcher against New-Hampshire's complaint tot he king in council. This had been repeatedly refused in Mr. Belcher's time, which gave great offence to Mr. Sharpe. It was thought extraordinary that Mr. Shirley should make it a point with the land bankers that this debt for his predeceffor fbould be paid, but to take Mr. Sharpe off from Mr. Belcher and engage him for Mr. Shirley, the friends and follicitors for the latter in England had engaged that if he was appointed governor Mr. Sharpe's account should be paid.

* All this country was conquered by Maffachufets and Plimouth from Philip and, to prevent difpute, was exprelly granted to Plimouth by Charles the fecond, 402

BUT the grand affair to fettle was that of the bills of credit. The inftruction was express not to confent to any act which should continue the bills beyond the time fixed for their being brought in. If this was complied with, a tax must have been made for the whole fum extant in that year 1741. This it was faid would be a burden that the people would never bear. Mr. Shirley was fenfible that the intent of his inftruction was the prevention of a depreciating currency. No matter how large a fum in bills was current if their value could be fecured. If the fpirit of the inftruction could be preferved, an exact conformity to the letter would not be required. Every scheme for fixing the value of the bills had failed. A new project was reported by a committee of the houfe and accepted and afterwards concurred by the council and confented to by the governor. This was a scheme to establish an ideal measure in all trade 1743. and dealings, let the inftrument be what it would. The act which paffed the court declared that all contracts thould be underftood payable in filver at 65.8d. the ounce or gold in proportion. Bills of a new form were iffued, 205. of which expressed in the face of the bill three otinces of filver and they were to be received accordingly in all public and private payments, with this faving that, if they fliould depreciate in their value, an addition should be made to all debts as much as the depreciation from the time of contract to the time of payment. How to afcertain the depreciation from time to time was the great difficulty in framing the act. To leave it to a common jury would never do: There was fome doubt whether a houfe of representatives would be wholly unbiaffed: At length it was agreed that the eldest counfellor in each county should meet once a year and afcertain the depreciation. This is faid to have been the scheme of Col. Stoddard of Northampton, a gentleman of good fenfe and great virtue, who probably faw the defects, but hoped to fubilituite a leffer evil in the place of a greater.

W25

THIS at best must have been a very partial cure. It did not prevent the lofs from the depreciation of the bills in those perforts hands through which they were continually paffing. All debts, which were contracted and paid between the periods when the value of the bills were fixed annually, could not be affected by fuch fixing; and unlefs in debts of long standing, which the debtor could not pay without an action at law, demand was not ordinarily made for depreciation, and what rendered it of little effect in all other cafes, the counfellors appointed. to estimate the depreciation never had firmness enough in any inftance to make the full allowance, but when filver and exchange had role 20 per cent. or more, an addition was made of 4 or 5 only. The popular cry was against it, and one year when Nathaniel Hubbard, Efq; the eldeft councellor for the county of Briftol. a Dd 2 gentleman 21 824

THE HISTORY OF

404

1741. gentleman of amiable character and who filled the feveral polts he fultained with applaufe, endeavored to approach nearer to a just allowance than had been made in former years, he felt the refentment of the house who left him out of the council the next election. In fhort the act neither prevented the depreciation of the bills nor afforded relief in cafe of it, and was of no other fervice than to ferve as a warning, when an act paffed for the establishing a fixed currency a few years after, to leave nothing to be done by any perfon or bodies of men, or even future legislatures to give the act its designed effect, but in the act itself to make full provision for its execution in every part.

EVEN this act which, with its fair appearance, justified Mr. Shirley in departing from his instruction, and afforded a fupply of the treasury for the payment of debts and future support of government could not have been obtained if he had not prevailed with the land bank party, contrary to the inclinations of many of them, to join in promoting it.

HE made them return, by confenting to any new elections that were made of any of them into the council, by reftoring now and then one and another to the pofts they had been deprived of, which, though it was done by degrees, caufed many who condemned the land bank and all who were concerned in it, to be very free in their censures upon him.

But the great favor they expected was relief from the feverity of the act of parliament. This was to be touched with great tenderness and delicacy. Every perfon concerned was liable to the demands of the possesfors of the bills. If large demands fhould be made upon any particular perfons it feemed but just that the rest should contribute their proportion; but no demand was given by the act to one partner against another in fuch cafe. A bill was therefore prepared with a profeffed defign to carry the act of parliament equitably into execution. Three commissioners were appointed by the bill with power power to tax all who had been concerned in the fcheme 1745. in proportion to their interest in it, and with the monies thus raifed to redeem the companies bills from the poffeffors, and after the redemption of the bills to make an equitable adjustment between the members and the company. Great care was taken to avoid all opposition to the act of parliament; Mr. Shirley however did not think proper to fign the bill until he had fent a copy of it to England and received directions concerning it. After it had paffed both houfes, to oblige the principal land bankers, he continued the session of the court by long repeated adjournments many months, and before the expiration of the year gave his confent to the bill. Having thus fecured a confiderable party in the government without lofing those who had been in opposition to them, he rendered his administration easy, and generally obtained from the affembly fuch matters as he recommended to them.

FROM the Spanish war in 1740, a French war was expected every year to follow. Caftle William, the key of the province, was not only effectually repaired but a new battery of twenty 42-pounders, which takes the name of Shirley battery, was added to the works, with a larger magazine than any before, and a large fupply of powder, all at the expence of the province. The cannon, mortars, fhot and other ftores were the bounty of the crown. The forts upon the frontiers were also put into good order, and upon a reprefentation from Mr. Mascarene, commander in chief at Annapolis in Nova-Scotia of the defenceless state of that prevince and the danger they were in from the enemy. Mr. Shirley, in 1744, prevailed upon the Massachusets assembly to vote pay, &c. for 200 men which were sent there and who were the probable means of faving that country from falling into the enemy's hands.

But the great event in this administration was the fiege and reduction of Louisburgh. Canfo had been furprized and taken by 900 men under Duvivier from Louisburgh,* before the war with France was known at Bofton.

Dd 3

May 13. 1744.

THE HISTORY OF

406

1744. Boston.[†] With another party, Duvivier made an attempt the fame fummer upon Annapolis, but was difappointed. Many of our veffels had been taken by the French men of war and privateers and carried into Louisburgh. The fifthermen had no intention to go upon their voyages the next fummer, and every branch of trade, it was supposed, must be carried on by vessels under convoy. It was the general voice, in the fall of the year, that Louisburgh must be taken, but no body supposed that the united force of the colonies could take it; applicazion must be made to his majesty for sea and land forces fufficient for the purpole. As winter approached, it began to be faggested that it was not improbable the place might be furprized or taken by a coup du main, the inhabitants and garrifon being flut up within the Some of the garrifon of Canfo, who had been walls. prifoners and who profeffed to be well acquainted with the fortifications and garrifon at Louisburgh favored this opinion and declared that in winter the fnow often lay in drifts or banks against a particular part of the wall, where there were no embrazures nor any cannon mounted, that the cruft would bear a man's weight and, in that part at least, the walls might be scaled and perhaps by the help of ladders it would not be difficult in other parts, that the grand battery, intended for defence in cafe of an attack by fea, would not be capable of long refifting if attacked by land. Mr. Vaughan, 1 who had been a trader at Louisburgh, was very fanguine alfo that the place might be taken by furprize, and it was generally agreed that if they should be mistaken yet it would not be poffible for the enemy, who were fcant of provisions, to stand a fiege until the time the supplies usually arrived to them from France; and, to prevent any chance veffels from entring, a fufficient naval force might Ье

Mr. Vaughan was called the projector of the expedition. It is probable he laid before the governor a proposal for it and it is certain he took great pains to induce the people to think avorably of it.

⁺ June 2d war proclaimed at Bofton.

be provided to cruize before the harbour. Whilft this 1744. was the conversation abroad, Mr. Shirley was diligently enquiring of those perfons who had been traders and of others who had been prifoners there, into the condition of the place, the usual time for the arrival of supplies from Europe, the practicability of cruizing off the harbour, &c. He had before wrote to the ministry and represented the necessity of a naval force early in the fpring for the preservation of Annapolis. If this should arrive, he might be able to prevail with the commander to cover our forces with it. Commodore Warren was with feveral fhips at the Leeward Islands. It was poflible, when he was acquainted with the expedition, he would come with or fend part of his force to ftrengthen it. These were the only chances for a naval strength fufficient to cope with a fingle capital French ship that might be bound to Louisburgh in the spring. The ministry, indeed, would by express be immediately ac-quainted with the expedition, if engaged in, but Europe was at too great distance to expect timely aid from thence. The plan of the expedition was, a land force. of 4000 men in finall transports to proceed to Canfo, and the first favorable opportunity to land at Chapeaurouge bay, with cannon, mortars, ammunition and warlike stores, and all other neceffaries for carrying on a fiege and, to prevent a fupply of provision and stores to the enemy, feveral veffels were to cruize off the harbour of Louifbourg, affoon as the feafon of the year would permit. An effimate was made of all the naval force which could be procured in this and the neighbouring colonies, the largest vessel not exceeding 20 guns. With this land and sea force, it was faid there was a good chance for fuccefs, and if the men of war should arrive, which there was good reafon to hope for, there was all imaginable grounds to depend upon the reduction of the place. The general court being fitting the beginning of January, the governor fent a meffage to the two houses to let them know he had fomething to communicate to them of 1745. of very great importance, but of fuch a nature that the publishing it, before they should come to any resolution upon it, might wholly defeat the defign, he therefore defired they would lay themfelves under an oath of fecrecy for fuch time as each house should think proper. This they did, altho' it was the first instance in the house of representatives, without any scruple, and then he communicated to them his proposed plan of the expedition. Many of the members who had heard little or nothing of the conversation upon the subject, were ftruck with amazement at the propofal. The undertaking they thought to be vaftly too great, if there was a rational profpect of fucces. However, in deference to the recommendation of the governor, a committee of the two houses were appointed to confider the proposal. Here, the propofal was for feveral days deliberated and weighed. Louisburgh, if left in the hands of the French, would infallibly prove the Dunkirk of New-England; their trade had always been inconfiderable, their fifhery was upon the decline, and for feveral years past they had bought fish of the English at Canfo cheaper than they could catch and cure it themfelves, both trade and fifhery they might well lay afide, and by privateering enrich themfelves with the fpoils of New-England; and to all these dangers was added that of losing Nova Scotia, which would caufe an increase of fix or eight thousand enemies in an inflant. The garrifon of Louifburg was difaffected, provisions were fcant, the works mouldering and decayed, the governor an old man unskilled in the art of war; this therefore was the only time for fuccels, another year the place would be impregnable. We had nothing to fear from the forces at Louisburgh, before. additional ftrength could arrive from France they would be forced to furrender. We had, it must be owned, no fhips of strength fufficient to match the French men of war, unless, perhaps, a fingle ship should fall in by herfelf, and in that cafe five or fix of ours might be a match for her; but there was no probability of men of war fo early early and it was very probable English men of war from 1745. Europe or the West-Indies would arrive before them. There was always uncertainty in war, a risque must be run, if we failed we should be able to grapple with the disappointment, although we should bear the whole expence, but if we succeeded, not only the coasts of New-England would be free from molessation, but so glorious an acquisition would be of the greatest importance to Great-Britain and might give peace to Europe, and we might depend upon a reimbursement of the whole charge we had been at.

Dd4

409

On the other hand it was replied, that we had better fuffer in our trade than by fo expensive a measure deprive ourfelves of all means of carrying on any future trade, that we were capable of annoying them in their fishery, as much as they could annoy us in ours and, in a fhort time, both fides would be willing to leave the fishery unmolested, that the accounts given of the works and the garrifon at Louisburgh could not be depended upon, and it was not credible that any part of the walls fhould be unguarded and exposed to furprize, that instances of difaffection rifing to mutiny were rare and but few inftances were to be met with in hiftory where fuch expectation has not failed. The garrifon at Louifburgh confisted of regular experienced troops who, though unequal in number, would be more than a match in open field for all the raw unexperienced militia which could be fent from New-England, that twenty cruizers at that feafon of the year would not prevent fupplies going into the harbour, it being impossible to keep any flation for any length of time, and the weather being frequently fo thick, that a vefiel was not to be difcovered at a quarter of a mile's distance, that there was no room to expect any men of war for the cover of our troops, that if only one 60 gun ship should arrive from France, or the French islands, she would be more than a match for all the armed veffels we could provide, our tranfports at Chapeaurouge bay would be every one destroyed, and 1745. and the army upon Cape-Breton obliged to fubmit to the mercy of the French, that we should be condemned in England for engaging in fuch an affair without their direction or approbation, and we should be no where pitied, our misfortunes proceeding from our own rafh and wild measures. To these arguments were added the uncertainty of raifing a fufficient number of men, or of being able to procure provisions, warlike flores and transports, discouragement from the seafon of the year when, frequently, for many days together no business could be done out of doors. Money indeed could be furnished, or bills of credit in lieu of it, but the infallible confequence would be the finking the value of the whole currency, to what degree no man could determine but, probably, in proportion to the fum ifflued, and finally, if we should succeed, a general national benefit would be the confequence, in which we should be but small sharers and far short of the vast expense of trea, fure and perhaps of lives in obtaining it, and if we failed, fuch a flock would be given to the province that half a century would not recover us to our present state. After mature deliberation, a majority of the committee difapproved the propofal and their report was accepted and, for a few days, all thoughts of the expedition with the members of the court were laid afide. In the mean time, the governor, who wilhed his propofal had been agreed to, but did not think it proper to prefs it any further by meffage or by privately urging the members, either directed or encouraged the carrying about a petition which was figned by many of the merchants in the town of Bolton, but principally by those of Salem and Marblehead, directed to the house of representatives, or to the two houses, praying, for reasons fet forth, among others the faving the fishery from ruin, they would reconfider their vote and agree to the governor's propofal of an expedition against Louisburgh. A second com-mittee, appointed upon this petition, reported in favor of

410

1 -

of it * and, the 26th of January, their report came 1745before the house, who spent the day in debating it and, at night, a vote was carried in favor of it by a majority of one voice only. Never was any affair deliberated upon with greater calmness and moderation, the governor indeed laid the affair before the court, but left the members free to act their judgment without any follicitation, and there appeared no other division than what was caused by a real difference in opinion upon the true interest of the province.

THE point once fettled, there was immediately a union of both parties in the neceffary measures for carrying the defign into execution, those who had opposed it before being employed upon committees and exerting themfelves with zeal equal to that of the principal promoters. An embargo was laid upon every harbour in the province and meffengers were immediately difpatched to the feveral governments, as far as Pennfylvania, to intreat an embargo on their ports and that they would join in the expedition. All excufed themfelves from any share in the adventure, except Connecticut, who agreed to raise 500 men, New-Hampshire 300, and. Rhode-Ifland 300. Connecticut and Rhode-Ifland alfo confented their colony floops flould be employed as cruizers. A fmall privateer fhip, about 200 tons, and a fnow of less burden, belonging to Newport, were hired there by the Maffachufets, a new fnow Capt. Roufe, a ship Capt. Snelling, were taken into the service at Boston, which, with a fnow Capt. Smethurst, and a brig, Capt. Fletcher, three floops, Capts. Sanders, Donahew and Bosch, and a ship of 20 guns, purchased on the stocks, Capt. Tyng the commodore, made the whole naval force.

FROM the day the vote paffed until the place was reduced, a feries of favorable incidents contributed to our fuccefs. They will be obvious enough in the courfe of the

7 It was accompanied with a meffage from the governor recommending it and defiring they would hear the perfons from whom he had received his intelligence. 412

1745 the narrative and will not require being fpecially re-marked. The time for preparing was fhort. The winter proved fo favorable that all forts of out-door bufinefs was carried on as well and with as great difpatch as at any other feason of the year. In the appointment of a general officer one qualification was confidered as effential, that he should be acceptable to the body of the people, the inliftment depended upon this circumstance. It was not eafy to find a perfon, thus qualified, willing to accept the truft. Col. Pepperell, having the offer from the governor, was rather preffed into the fervice than voluntarily engaged. Belides a very great landed interest, he was largely concerned in mercantile affairs, which must necessarily fuffer by his absence, and this being generally known had no fmall influence, from the example, with inferior officers and even private foldiers, to quit their leffer affairs, for a feafon, for the fervice of their country. Many of the private foldiers were freeholders and many more fons of wealthy farmers, who could have no other views in confenting to the inliftment of their children than the public interest.

MR. Shirley had fet his heart fo much upon the expedition that many points were conceded by him which he would not have given up at any other time, and the people of the province fubmitted to compulfory measures from the government which, at another time, would have been grievous and not very patiently borne. Such officers were nominated by the governor as the people propofed or called for, becaufe they were most likely to inlift men. Inftead of a commiffary general, an officer appointed by the governor, a committee of war was chosen by the two houses out of their own members. Nothing further was heard of the royal instruction against bills of credit. Such fums as the fervice called for and to be redeemed at such periods as the house thought proper were confented to by the governor. It foon appeared that thefe fums would vaftly exceed exceed what had been computed, and many declared that 1745. had a right estimate been made they should never have voted for the expedition, but it was now too late to go back. It was found alfo, that transports and veffels of war could not be engaged unlefs the government would become infurers, which although it occafioned no additional expence at first yet, in case of ill fuccess, would greatly increase the public debt and distress. The committee of war were likewife convinced that a fufficiency of provisions, cloathing and warlike stores could not be procured within the province. Whofoever was poffeffed of any of these articles, by an act or order of government his property was fubjected to the committee. who fet fuch price as they judged equitable, and upon refusal to deliver, entred warehouses, cellars, &c. by a warrant for that purpole to the fheriff, and took pollef-In the course of the preparation many veffels fion. unexpectedly arrived with more or lefs of each of thefe articles and after all, the army was poorly enough provided. Ten cannon, 18 pounders, were obtained upon loan, not without difficulty, from New-York, otherwife Mr. Shirley himfelf feemed to doubt whether we could. proceed. Some dependance was placed upon cannon from the grand battery but this was too manifest a difpofal of the skin before the bear was caught. By force of a general exertion in all orders of men, the armament. was ready and the general, on board the Shirley fnow, Captain Roufe, with the transports under her convoy. failed from Nantasket the 24th of March and arrived at Canfo the 4th of April. The Maffachusets land forces confisted of 3250 men, exclusive of commission officers. The New-Hampshire forces, 304, including officers, arrived four days before. Connecticut, being 516, inclusive, did not arrive until the 25th. The deputy governor of the colony, Roger Wolcot, Efq; had the command and was the fecond officer in the army. Rhode-Island waited until a better judgment could be made of the event, their 300 not arriving until after the place

THE HISTORY OF

1745 place had furrendered. The 23d of March, an express boat fent to Commodore Warren in the West-Indies returned to Boston. As this was a provincial expedition: without orders from England, and as his fmall fquadron had been weakened by the loss of the Weymouth, Mr. Warren excufed himfelf from any concern in the affair: This answer must necessarily strike a damp into the governor as well as the general and brigadier Waldo; then next in command, who were the only perfons in the army made privy to it before the fleet failed. Several of the cruizing veffels had failed the middle of March, but they could be no protection to the army against two capital fhips; if they intercepted fmall veffels it was the most that was expected. A blockhouse with eight cannon was built at Canfo. Whether fome good reafort would not have been given for proceeding no further than Canfo, if there had been a disappointment in the expected junction of men of war from the feveral quarters to which notice of the expedition had been fent may well enough be made a question. Mr. Shirley hoped, if the reduction of Louisburgh was not effected; at least Canfo would be regained, Nova-Scotia preferved. the French fifhery broke up and the New-England and Newfoundland fisheries restored. But on the 23d of April, to the great joy of the army, arrived at Canfo the Eltham of 40 guns, from New-England, by order from Mr. Warren, and on the 23d the commodore himfelf, in the Superb of 60 guns, with the Launceston and Mermaid of 40 each, arrived alfo. This gave great fpirits to all who had the fuccess of the expedition at heart, for although this was not a naval force to enter the harbour or annoy the forts, yet it was a cover to the army and equal to any expected force from France. It feems that, in two or three days after the express failed from the West-Indies for Boston, the Hind sloop brought orders to Mr. Warren to repair to Boston, with what fhips could be fpared, and to concert measures with Mr. Shirley for his Majesty's general service in North-America:

America. Upon the passage* to Boston, the commodore 1745. received intelligence that the fleet had failed for Canfo, and meeting with a schooner at sea + he sent her to Boston, to acquaint Mr. Shirley that he would proceed to Canfo and, at the fame time, fent orders to any fhips which might be in these sto join him. The Eltham was actually under fail with the mast fleet when an express fent from Bolton with the commodore's orders arrived at Portfmouth in New-Hampshire, but being followed and overtaken by a boat, the captain ordered his convoy into port again and failed for Canfo. After a fhort confultation with the general, the men of war failed to cruize before Louisburgh. The cruizers, before this, had intercepted feveral small veffels bound in there with West. India goods and provisions and had engaged the Renommee, f a French ship of 36 guns sent from France with difpatches and who kept a running fight with our veffels for some time, being able with ease to outfail them, and, after two or three attempts to enter the harbour, went back to France, to give an account of what the had met with. She fell in with the Connecticut troops, under, convoy of their own and the Rhode-Ifland colony floops, both which fhe had strength enough to have carried, but, after fome damage to the Rhode-Island floop; the went her way. The forces landed at Chapeaurouge bay the. 20th of April. The transports were discovered, early, in the morning, from the town, which was the first knowledge of any delign against them. The cruizers had been feen every fair day before the harbour, but these were fapposed to be privateers in fearch after their trading and fishing veffels. The night before, it. is faid, there was a grand ball at the fort and the company

* April 12th.

† An excellent pilot, who had effcaped for fear of being prefied into the fervice happened to be on board this fehooner. The Commodore took him out, and it is faid would not have adventured without him. The Vigilant must then have got into Louisbourg and perhaps have defeated the whole defign.

‡ April 18th.

1745. pany had fcarce been afleep when they were called up by an alarm. Bouladrie, a French officer, was fent with 150 men to oppofe the landing, but the general making a feint of landing at one place, drew the detachment there, and this opportunity was taken for landing 100 men at another place without oppofition, although they were foon after attacked by the detachment, fix of which were killed on the fpot and about as many more, with Bouladrie their leader, were taken prifoners, the reft fled to the town, or they would foon have fallen into the hands of our men, who were landing faft one upon the back of another.

416

THE next morning after they landed, 400 men marched round to the north-east harbour, behind the hills, fetting fire to all the houfes and store-houfes, until they came within a mile of the grand battery. Some of the store-houses having in them pitch, tar, and other combustible stuff, caused such a thick smoak, that the garrifon were unable to difcover an enemy, though but a few rods diftant, and, expecting the body of the army upon them, they deferted the fort, having thrown their powder into a well, but leaving the cannon and fhot for the fervice of the English. A finall party, of less than 20 English, first came up to the battery and, difcovering no figns of men, fuspected a plot and were afraid to enter, at length, it is faid, a Cape-Cod Indian went in alone and difcovered the state of it to the rest of the party, just as fome of the French were relanding in order to regain the poffession of it.

THE army found they had near two miles to tranfport their cannon, mortars, fhot, &c. through a morafs. This must be done by meer dint of labour. Such of the men as had been used to drawing pine trees for masts and those who had the hardiest and strongest bodies were employed in this fervice. Horses and oxen would have been buried in mud and were of no use. Brigadier Waldo had the command of the grand battery. The French kept firing upon the battery from the town as well as from the island battery, but to little purpofe, 1745. the town being near 2000 yards diftant and the island about 1600. A conftant fire was kept from the grand battery upon the town with the 42 pounders, 'This greatly damaged the houfes, but caufed fo great an expence of powder that it was thought advifeable to ftop and referve it for the fafcine batteries. Five of thefe were erected, the last the 20th of May called Tidcomb's* battery with five 42 pounders which did as great execution as any. Our men knew nothing of regular approaches, they took the advantage of the night, and when they heard Mr. Bastide's proposals for zigzags and epaulements they made merry with the terms and went on, void of art, in their own natural way. Capt. Pierce, a brave officer, standing at one of these batteries had his bowels thot away by a cannon ball and lived just long enough to fay its bard to die.

25

WHILST our people were thus bufy afhore, the men of war and other veffels were cruizing off the harbour whenever the weather would permit and, the 18th of May, the Vigilant, a French man of war of 64 guns, having 560 men on board and stores of all forts for the garrifon, was met with by the Mermaid, whom fhe at-tacked, but Capt. Douglass the commander, being of unequal force, fuffered himfelf to be chafed by her until he drew her under the command of the commodore and the other ships cruizing with him, to whom or, as fome fay, to the Mermaid the flruck because the had first met with her. This capture gave great joy to the army, not fo much for the addition made to our naval force, as for the difappointment to the enemy. A propofal had. been made, a few days before, that the men of war should anchor in Chapeaurouge bay, and that the marines and as many failors as could be fpared fhould land and join VOL. II. FP the

* Major Tidcomb's readinefs to engage in the moft hazardous part of the fervice was acknowleged and applauded. He furvived the fiege, was colonel of a regiment when general Johnfon was attacked by Diefkau and then loft his life in the fervice of his country. 3745 the army. The Vigilant would then have got in and we should have given over the flege. Affairs were now in fuch a state, that our anxiety at Boston was much leffened. We hoped the army might retreat with fafety, whenever it should be determined to give over the fiege, for Bouladrie, who belonged to the town of Louisburgh, and the Marquis de la Maison forte, commander of the Vigilant, who was well acquainted with the flate of the place, when they came to Bofton, were fanguine that it would hold out longer than our men and, foon after, we had the news of a fruitless and perhaps a rash attempt apon the island battery by 400 men, 60 of whom were killed and 116 taken prifoners. The Cæfar, Snelling, one of the ships in the provincial fervice, arrived at Boston with letters from the general and an application for more men and a further fupply of powder. The Maffachusets agreed and actually did raise 400 mcn and fent all the powder that could be purchased, and Connecticut raifed 200 men, but there were neither men nor powder arrived when the fiege was finished.

THE Princels Mary of 60 and the Hector of 40 guns, unexpectedly, had arrived at Bofton from England and were immediately fent to join the commodore, purfuant to his general orders, and arrived before Louifburgh the 22d of May. This increase of naval force occasioned conjectures, fome being of opinion that, rather than the fiege should be raifed, the ships would attempt to go in, but it was generally fuppofed the hazard would be toogreat. It was commonly reported that Col. More of the New-Hampshire regiment offered to go on board the Vigilant with his whole regiment and to lead the van, if, in cafe of fuccess, he might be confirmed in the command of the ship. He had been an experienced fea captain and had a very good character. It is certain,. an attempt with the fhips was not then thought advifeable. A new battery, about this time, was crected upon. the light-house point, which being well attended by Lt, Col. Gridley of the artillery, did great execution upon the the Island battery, filenced many of the guns and it was 1745. expected it would not be long tenable. Soon after, viz. June 10th, arrived before Louisburgh the Chester, a 50 gun ship, in confequence of the dispatches from Mr. Shirley with an account of the expedition. The Canterbury and Sunderland, two 60 gun fhips, failed with her and arrived the 12th. Here was now a fleet of 11 ships* and it is faid to have been determined the ships fhould make an attack by fea, the 18th, while the army did the fame by land. It is not certain that when the day fliould come fome fufficient reafon would not have been found for a further delay. Those who give the inost favorable accounts of the fiege fay "the west gate was entirely beat down, the wall adjoining very much battered and a breach made, ten feet from the bottom; the circular battery of 16 cannon and the principal one against ships almost ruined, the north-east battery of 17 cannon damaged and the men drove from the guns, and the west flank of the king's bastion almost demolished." Others fay; " the welt gate was defaced and the adjoining curtain with the flank of the king's baftion were much hurt, but no practicable breach." Whether a general form was really intended upon the 18th or not, it feems, the French expected it from the preparations on board the men of war, and did not incline to stand it, and on the 15th fent a flag of truce to the general defiring a ceffation, that they might confider of articles to be proposed for a capitulation. Time was allowed for this purpole until the next morning, when fuch articles were offered as were rejected by the general and commodore and others offered to the enemy in their stead, which they accepted of and hostages were exchanged and, the next day, the 17th, the city was delivered up.

418

MANY of our men had taken colds and many fallen into dyfenteries, fo that 1500 were taken off from duty E.e. 2

* The Superb, Princefs Mary, Canterbury and Sunderland of 50guns, the Chefter of 50, Launcefton, Mermaid, Hector, Elthany and Lark of 40, with the French prize the Vigilant of 64.

419

420 THE HISTORY OF

1745, at one time, but the weather proving remarkably fine during the 49 days fiege they generally recovered. The day after the furrender the rains began and continued ten days inceffantly, which must have been fatal to many, they having nothing better than the wet ground to lodge on, and their tents, in general, being infufficient to fecure them against a fingle shower, + but in the city they found barracks to shelter them. Capt. Benner, ina fchooner, was fent immediately to Boston and arrived with the great news the 3d of July, about one in the morning. The bells of the town were ringing by break of day and the day and night following were fpent in rejoicing. The news flew through the continent. The colonies which declined any fhare in the expence and hazard were fenfible they were greatly interested in the fuccefs. It was allowed every where that if there had been no fignal proof of bravery and courage in time of action, there having been only one fally from the town and a few skirmishes with French and Indians from the woods, in all which our men behaved well, yet here was the ftrongest evidence of a generous noble public spirit, which first induced to the undertaking, and of steadiness and firmnels of mind in the profecution of it, the labour, fatigue and other hardships of the siege being without parallel in all preceding American affairs. A fhade was thrown over the imprudence at first charged upon the New-Englanders. Confiderate perfons among themfelves could not, however, avoid gratefully ad-miring the favor of divine providence in fo great a number of remarkable incidents which contributed to this fuccefs. The best use to be made by posterity feems to be not to depend upon special interpositions of providence becaufe their anceftors have experienced them, but to avoid the like imminent dangers and to weigh the probability and improbability of fucceeding in the ordinary courfe of events. THE

† All the ticklenburgh and fmall canvas in the province was purchafed by the committee of war, but for a great part of the tents they were forced to buy common oznabrigs. THE commodore was willing to carry away a full 1745. fhare of the glory of this action. It was made a queftion whether the keys of the town fhould be delivered to him or to the general and whether the fea or land forces fhould first enter. The officers of the army fay they prevailed. The marines took posses the commodore took the batteries and fometimes the commodore took the keys of the city gates. The command however until orders should arrive from England was to be joint and a dispute about precedence to be avoided as much as could be. The commodore dispatched Mr. Montague in the Mermaid to England with intelligence, and the general, the day after, fent the Shirley Galley Capt. Roufe. The Mermaid arrived first.

IT was very happy that disputes arose to no heighth between the fea and land forces during the fiege. This has often proved fatal. This expedition having been began and carried on under a commission from a provincial governor feems to be diffinguished from ordinary cafes and to leave lefs room for difpute. Whether the land or fea force had the greatest share in the acquisition may be judged from the relation of facts. Neither would have fucceeded alone. The army, with infinite labour and fatigue to themfelves, harraffed and diftreffed the enemy and, with perfeverance a few weeks or days longer, must have compelled a furrender. It is very doubtful whether the thips could have lain long enough before the walls to have carried the place by ftorm, or whether, notwithstanding the appearance of a defign to do it, they would have thought it advisable to attempt it; it is certain they prevented the arrival of the Vigilant, took away all hopes of further fupply and fuccour, and it is very probable the fears of a ftorm might accelerate the capitulation.* The loss by the enemy and fickness did

- * From the following deposition of the Commodore in the high court of admiralty, one would imagine the place had been taken by the fhips alone.
- " Extracted from the registry of the high court of admiralty of England 29th September 1747.

Notice.

1745 did not exceed 101 men. The lofs of the Snow Prince of Orange, belonging to the province, and fuppofed to be overfet, was a heavy blow upon the town of Marblehead, the captain and most of the crew belonging to that town, and it is a rare thing for a Marblehead man to die without leaving a widow and a number of children furviving.

As it was a time of year to expect French veffels from all parts to Louisburg, the French flag was kept flying to decoy them in. Two East India and one South Sea ship, supposed to be all together of the value of £.600,000 sterling, were taken by the squadron at the mouth of the harbour, into which they would undoubtedly have entered. The army, at first, supposed they had acquired a right to the island of Cape Breton and its dependencies, and, until they were undeceived by Mr. Shirley, were for dividing the territory among the officers and men. With greater colour they might have claimed a share with the men of war in these rich prizes. Some of the officers years and upwards, a witnels produced and fworn.

Notre dame de deliverance, ¿Upon the allegation given by Tyn-Litan master. Sir Peter Warren knight, vice admiral of the white, aged 40

To the first article of the faid allegation depofes and fays, that he the faid deponent was appointed to command his Britannic majelty's fleet intended for the attack of the ifland of Cape Breton, and in the year of our Lord one thousand feven hundred and forty five proceeded on the faid expedition in his majefty's fhip Superbe from the leward islands, then having with him and under his command his majelty's fhips Mermaid and Launcefton, and foon after his arrival at faid island he was joined by his majefty's fhips Princefs Mary, Canterbury, Chefler and Sunderland, and that after the deponent's arrival at CapeBieton, and before he was joined by his majefly's fbips aforefaid he took and feized a French ship of war called the Vigilant, and appointed her a flip in his majefly's fervice and pay, and then with the affiltance of all his majefly's thips aforefaid, and others of his majefty's flips, he did fubdue the whole island of Cape Breton, and further to the faid article he knows not to depofe." There was no claim made, for the army, to this or the other captures, which is the only reafon I can think of for omitting any mention of the land forces.

officers expected a claim would have been laid in, but 1745. means were found to divert it, nor was any part decreed to the veffels of war in the province fervice, except a fmall fum to the Brig Bofton Packet, Capt. Fletcher, who being chafed by the fouth fea fhip, led her directly under the command of the guns of one of the men of war. It feemed to be conceded that, as this acquisition was made under the commission of the governor of Maffachulets-bay, the exercile of government there appertained to him, until his majefty's pleasure should be known. I know of no precedent in the colonies except that of the conquest of Nova Scotia in 1690. It was necessary, then, to admit this principle, the acquifition could not otherwife have been retained. Mr. Shirley made a voyage to Louisburgh, took the government upon him, prevailed upon a great part of the army to confent to remain in garrifon over the winter, or until regiments which were expected arrived, engaged that their pay should be increafed and cloathing provided, and fettled other matters to general fatisfaction.*

DUVIVIER had been fent to France the winter of 1744, to follicit a force, not to defend Cape Breton, but to conquer Nova Scotia, and accordingly failed the beginning of July, with 7 ships of war for that purpose, who were to stop at Louisburgh. This sleet took a prize bound from Boston to London, on board which was lieutenant governor Clark of New-York, and by this means they were informed of the conquest of Louisburgh, and the ftrong squadron there, otherwise some or all of them would also have probably fallen into the hands of the English. Upon this intelligence they went back to France. Thus Nova Scotia no doubt was faved by the Maffachufets expedition. There would not have been men of war in these ses sufficient to match this squadron.

THE reduction of Louisburgh by a British colony, must have been a surprize to Great Britain and to France,

Ee4

* Penfylvania contributed £. 4000. New-York £. 3000. and New-Jerfey, I think, £. 2000. fome in money others in pro-visions for fupport of the troops.

IE

THE HISTORY OF

424

It caused very grand plans of American measures for the next year with both powers. Great Britain had in view the reduction of Canada and the extirpation of the French from the northern continent. France intended the recovery of Louisburgh, the conquest of Nova Scotia and the destruction of the English sea coast from Nova Scotia to Georgia. Upon the English plan, eight battalions of regular troops with the provincial forces to be railed in the four New-England governments, were to rendezvous at Louisburgh and, with a fquadron under admiral Warren, were to go up the river Saint Lawrence to Que-bec, other provincials from Virginia and the colonies northward, including New-York, were to rendezvous at Albany and go across the country to Montreal; the land forces to be under General St. Clair. No province had a certain number affigned, it was expected there should be at least 5000 * in the whole. The Massachusets forces were ready to embark by the middle of July, about fix weeks from the first notice. The preparations making at Breft for America, were well known in England, and a iquadron was ordered to block up that harbour. Notwithstanding all the caution used, the Brest squadron flipped out, and failed to the weftward, and it is certain no English squadron followed, Whilst we were impatiently waiting for news of the arrival of the fleet at Louisburgh, a fisherman comes in, some time in August, with an account of his being brought to by four French capital ships not far from Chibucto, that he was required to pilot them there, that as he lay under the ftern of one of them he read the word le Terrible, but a fog fuddenly rifing he made his escape. After that fome days had paffed without any further account, the fifherman's news was generally difcredited. It appeared fome months after, that these were four ships under M. Constans, who had

The colonies voted to raife men in very unequal proportions. New-Hampshire 500. Massachusets 3500. Rhode Island 300. Connecticut 1000. New-York 1600. New-Jersies 500. Maryland 300. Virginia 100. Penfylvania raifed 400, though not by an act of government. The whole number 8200. had escaped † an English squadron from Jamaica, and 1746. were bound to Chibucto in order to join the Brest fleet, but after cruizing some time and meeting with storms and sogs, upon a coast they were unacquainted with, they returned to France.

THE beginning of September, veffels arrived at Bofton from Hull and Liverpool with advice that the Breft fleet had failed, and it was supposed for North America, and from the middle to the latter end of the month frequent accounts were brought of a great fleet feen to the westward of Newfoundland, which we flattered ourfelves might be English as likely as French, but on the 28th an express arrived from Louisburgh with certain advice thefe ships were the French fleet, which it was affirmed confifted of 70 fail, 14 of which were capital ships, and that there were 20 fmaller men of war, and the reft fire ships, bombs, tenders and transports for eight thousand troops. The fame day a veffel from Jamaica arrived with advice that the four men of war who had engaged with commodore Mitchell, were intended to join the fleet, and it was now no longer doubted that these were the ships seen by the fishermen, and it was supposed soon after got into Chibucto. England was not more alarmed with the Spanish armada in 1588. than Bofton and the other North American fea ports were with the arrival of this fleet in their neighbourhood. The firmeft mind will bend upon the first advice of imminent danger to its country. Even the great De Witt fwooned when he first opened a letter giving intelligence of England's confederating with France to inflave the Dutch, though the next moment he recovered his natural courage and vivacity.

EVERY practicable measure for defence was immediately purfued by the authority of the Massachufets province, but our main dependance, under God, was upon a squadron from England sufficient in conjunction with the ships then at Louisburgh to overcome the French.

† Some fay the English escaped from them.

French. It was impossible the ministry should be ignorant of the failing of this fleet, and unlefs they were willing the colonies should be exposed to the ravages of the enemy, it was impossible an English squadron should not be foon after them.* This was the general voice. But this dependance failed. However, as the probability of the arrival of our fquadron was from day to day leffened, our apprehensions of danger from the enemy leffened in fome proportion. At length, we had fuch authentic account of the diffreffes of the French that it was not only agreed that admiral Townfend's ships at Louisburgh were more than a match for them, and we were every day expecting to hear they had failed for Chebucto, but if that fhould prove otherwife, the utmost they would be able to effect by their grand plan would be the conquest of Annapolis and the whole province of Nova Scotia. If the winter did not prevent a farther progress, we flattered ourselves their strength was not fufficient for an attempt upon Bofton.

THE misfortunes of this grand armament are really very remarkable. The lofs of Cape Breton filled the French with a fpirit of revenge against the British colonies. The duke d'Anville, a French nobleman in whose courage and conduct great confidence was placed, was appointed to the command of the expedition. As early as the beginning of May the fleet was ready to fail, but detained detained by contrary winds until the 22d of June, when 1746. it left Rochelle, and then confifted of 11 ships of the line, 30 fmaller veffels from 10 to 30 guns, and transport fhips with 3130 land forces commanded by Monfieur Pommerit, a brigadier general. The French of Nova-Scotia, it was expected, would join them, and Ramfay, a French officer, with 1700 Canadians and Indians were actually in arms there ready for their arrival. To this force Conflans with the four ships from the West-Indies were to be added. It was the 2d of August before the fleet had paffed the Western Islands. The 24th they were 300 leagues diftant from Nova-Scoria, and one of their fhips complained fo much that they burnt her. The 1st of September, in a violent storm, the Mars, a 64 gun ship, was fo damaged in her masts and fo leaky that fhe bore away for the West-Indiest and the Alcide, of 64 guns, which had also lost her topmast, was fent to accompany her. The 15th, the Ardent, of 64 guns, most of her crew being fick, put back for Breft.

* It was faid admiral Leftock put out no lefs than feven times, but could not get to the weftward. Others fuppofed that an apprehension of French fineffe, pretending an expedition to America when an invasion of Britain was really intended, occafioned orders for the detention of Leftock's fleet until it was thought too late to prevent the mifchief, and the fhips were then employed in an unfuccefsful defocat upon France. The indifference of the people in England in general upon this occasion was wondered at by the colonifis. Letters from merchants, who had debts due in the colonies equal to their whole fortunes and which they must have wholly loft if the French plan had been executed, spake of the failing of this fleet as an ordinary piece of news which would be followed with no semarkable confequences.

1746.

THE duke d'Anville, in the Northumberland, arrived at Chibucto the 12th of September, with only one ship of the line, the Renommee and three or four of the tranfports. There he found only one of the fleet, which had been in three days, and after waiting three days and finding that only three more, and those transports, had arrived, the 16th in the morning he died, the French faid of an apoplexy, the English that he poisoned himself. In the afternoon the vice admiral, d'Estournelle, with three or four more of the line came in. Monf. de la Jonquiere, governor of Canada, was aboard the Northumberland and had been declared a chef d'escadre, after the fleet left France and, by this means, was next in command to the vice admiral. In a council of war, the 18th, the vice admiral proposed returning to France. Four of the capital fhips, the Ardent, Caribou, Mars and Alcide and the Argonaute firefhip they were deprived of, there was no

She went back for France and was taken in October by the Nottingham, Capt. Saumarez, off Care Clear. 428

1746. news of Conflans and his fhips, fo that only feven* fhips of importance remained, more or lefs of the land forces were on board each of the miffing fhips and what remained were in a very fickly condition. This motion was opposed for 7 or 8 hours by Jonquiere and others of the council, who fuppofed that, at least, they were in a condition to recover Annapolis and Nova-Scotia, after which they might either winter fecurely at Cafco-bay or, at worft, then return to France : The fick men, by the conftant supply of fresh provisions from the Acadians, were daily recovering and would foon be fit for fervice. The motion not prevailing, the vice admiral's fpirits were agitated to fuch a degree as to throw him into a fever attended with a delirium, in which he imagined himfelf among the English and ran himfelf through the body. Jonquiere fucceeded, who was a man experienced in war and, although above 60, still more active than either of his predecessfors, and the expectations of the fleet and army were much raifed. From this time Annapolis feems to have been their chief object. An account, fupposed to be authentic, having been received at Bolton of the failing of admiral Leftock, Mr. Shirley fent an express to Louisburgh to carry the intelligence. The packet boat was taken and carried into Chibucto, + which accelerated the failing of the fleet. Most of the fick had died at Chibucto and but about one half their number remained alive. They failed the 13th of October and the 15th, being near Cape Sables, they met with a violent cold storm which, after some intermission, increafed the 16th and 17th and feperated the fleet, two of which only, a 50 and a 36 gun ship, were discovered from the fort at Annapolis, where the Chefter man of war, Capt. Spry, then lay with the Shirley frigate and a fmall veffel in the fervice of the board of ordnance, who being difcovered by the French to be under fail they made off and this was the last of the expedition. The news

* Some make the number 8, and the Perfait, to be one of them, and burnt there; but in the French lift the Perfait is a fire fhip and the Caribou is faid to have been burnt.

⁺ Q.905. II.

news of the beginning of the misfortunes of the French 17+6. having reached France by fome of the returned veffels, two men of war were fent immediately with orders, at all events, to take Annapolis, but the fleet had failed three or four days before they arrived.

429

Prous men faw the immediate hand of divine providence in the protection or rather refcue of the British colonies this year, as they had done in the miraculous fuccess of the Cape-Breton expedition the former year.

WHEN the fummer had fo far paffed as to render it too late to profecute the expedition against Canada, if the fleet had arrived, Mr. Shirley's enterprizing genius led him to project an attempt upon the French fort at Crown-point, with part of the Maffachusets forces in conjunction with those of the other colonies, but the alarm of the French fleet prevented until it was judged, by fome concerned, to be too late. Fifteen hundred of the Maffachufets men were intended for Nova-Scotia. upon the news of Ramfay's appearing there, and 400 actually went there, covoyed by the Chefter, and late in the fall an additional number were fent thither. Those posted at Minas were surprized, the first day of January, by a body of French and Indians commanded by Le Corne, a French officer, and after having 160 of their number killed, wounded and taken prifeners, the reft capitulated engaging not to bear arms against the French in Nova-Scotia for the term of one year. De Ramfay with his troops foon after returned to Canada.*

THE troops raifed for the Canada expedition continued in pay until September the next year 1747. Some of them ferved for defence of the frontiers, the reft were inactive. The inactive profecution of the war in Europe on both fides indicated peace to be near which the next year was effected.

WAR had been declared in 1744 against the Cape Sable and St. John's Indians and in 1745 against the Penobscots and Norridgewocks. The frontiers did not escape

* Thomas Culhing, Efq; fpeaker of the house died April 11.1746, universally lamented. 747. moleftation. They fuffered lefs than in any former wars. The Indians were leffened in number and having withdrawn to the French frontiers were fometimes detained for their defence upon an apprehended invafion, and at other times engaged to be in readinefs to join in the great defigns against the English.

> IN 1747 (Nov. 17th) happened a tumult in the town of Boston equal to any which had preceded it, although far short of some which have happened since. Mr. Knowles was commodore of a number of men of war then in the harbour of Nantasket. Some of the failors had

- * The peace with the Indians was not fettled until October 1749; when a treaty was held at Falmouth by commiffioners, Thomas Hutchinfon, John Choate, Ifrael Williams and James Otis of the Maffachufets, and Theodore Atkinfon and John Downing of New Hampfhire, when the laft treaty in Mr. Dummer's time with fome additions was renewed.
- June 19th 1748, John Stoddard, Efq; of Northampton, and at that time a member of the house of representatives, died at Bofton. He had been feveral years member of the council, but being in favor of the prerogative, generally met with great oppolition, and having been divers times left out he at length declined being any longer the fubject of contention, and chofe a feat in the houfe, his town thinking it a favor that he would represent them. There have been but few men among us who have been more generally efteemed. His enemies would charge him with unconstitutional principles, but at the fame time allow he had an upright heart. He fhined only in affairs of importance, lesser matters would frequently be carried against his mind by the little arts and crafts of minute politicians, which he difdained to defeat by counterworking. He was very early employed in public affairs. In 1713 he went as a commiffary to Quebec for the redemption of captives, and the feveral governors to the time of his death intrusted to his direction the military affairs of the county of Hampshire, which in time of war was peculiarly exposed. Nor was his authority lefs in civil matters. Both military and civil authority he ufed with great differetion. In this latter, in one inftance, he rather exceeded, extending it to the ecclefiaftical affairs of the town of Springfield farther than he could well justify. Our best men have fometimes exceeded in their zeal for particular fystems, and have endeavored to promote religion by invading natural. and sitil rights.

had deferted. Deferters generally flee to fome of the 17471 neighbouring ports where they are out of danger of discovery. The commodore thought it reasonable that Bofton should supply him with as many men as he had loft, and fent his boats up to town early in the morning, and furprized not only as many feamen as could be found on board any of the ships, outward bound as well as others, but fwept the wharfs alfo, taking fome thip carpenters apprentices and labouring land men. However tolerable fuch a furprize might have been in London it could not be born here. The people had not been used to it and men of all orders refented it, but the lower clafs were beyond measure enraged and foon affembled with flicks, clubs, pitchmops, &c. They. first feized an innocent lieutenant who happened to be ashore upon other business. They had then formed no fcheme, and the fpeaker * of the house passing by and affuring them that he knew that the lieutenant had no hand in the prefs they faffered him to be led off to a place of fafety. The mob increasing and having received intelligence that feveral of the commanders were at the governor's houfe, it was agreed to go and demand fatiffaction. The houfe was foon furrounded and the court. or yard before the houfe, filled, but many perfons of diferention inferted themselves and prevailed fo far as to prevent the mob from entering. Several of the officers had planted themfelves at the head of the ftair way with loaded carbines and feemed determined to preferve their liberty or lofe their lives. A deputy sheriff attempting to exercise his authority, was feized by the mob and carried away in triumph and fet in the ftocks, which afforded them diversion and tended to abate their rage and difpofed them to feperate and go to dinner.

Assoon as it was dusk, feveral thousand people affembled in king-freet, below the town house where the general court was sitting. Stones and brickbatts were thrown through the glass into the council chamber. The 1747. The governor, however, with feveral gentle men of the council and houfe ventured into the balcony and, after filence was obtained, the governor in a well judged fpeech expressed his great disapprobation of the impress and promised his utmost endeavours to obtain the discharge of every one of the inhabitants, and at the fame time gently reproved the irregular proceedings both of the forenoon and evening. Other gentlemen also attempted to perfuade the people to disperse and wait to see what steps the general court would take. All was to no purpose. The feizure and restraint of the commanders and other officers who were in town was insisted upon as the only effectual method to procure the release of the inhabitants aboard the ships.

* The Author.

432

IT was thought adviseable for the governor to withdraw to his house, many of the officers of the militia and other gentlemen attending him. A report was raifed that a barge from one of the ships was come to a wharf in the town. The mob flew to feize it, but by mistake took a boat belonging to a Scotch ship and dragged it, with as much feeming eafe through the ftreets as if it had been in the water, to the governor's house and prepared to burn it before the house, but from a confideration of the danger of fetting the town on fire were diverted and the boat was burnt in a place of lefs hazard. The next day the governor ordered that the military officers of Boston should cause their companies to be mustered and to appear in arms, and that a military watch should be kept the fucceeding night, but the drummers were interrupted and the militia refused to appear. The governor did not think it for his honour to remain in town another night and privately withdrew to the caftle. A number of gentlemen who had fome intimation of his defign, fent a meffage to him by Col. Hutchinfon, affuring him they would ftand by him in maintaining the authority of government and reftoring peace and order, but he did not think this fufficient.

THE governor wrote to Mr. Knowles reprefenting 1747. the confusions occasioned by this extravagant act of his officers, but he refused all terms of accommodation until the commanders and other officers on shore were fuffered to go on board their ships, and he threatned to bring up his ships and bombard the town, and some of them coming to fail, caused different conjectures of his real intention. Capt. Erskine of the Canterbury had been feized at the house of Col. Brinley in Roxbury and given his parole not to go abroad, and divers inferior officers had been fecured.

THE 17th, 18th and part of the 19th, the council and house of representatives, fitting in the town, went on with their ordinary bufinefs, not willing to interpofe left they fhould encourage other commanders of the navy to future acts of the like nature, but towards noon of the 19th some of the principal members of the house began to think more feriously of the dangerous confequence of leaving the governor without fupport when there was not the least ground of exception to his conduct. Some high spirits in the town began to question whether his retiring fhould be deemed a defertion or abdication. It was moved to appoint a committee of the two houfes to confider what was proper to be done. This would take time and was excepted to, and the speaker was defired to draw up fuch refolves as it was thought neceffary the house should immediately agree to, and they were paffed by a confiderable majority and made public.

" In the house of representatives, Nov 19th, 1747.

RESOLVED, that there has been and ftill continues, a tumultuous riotous affembling of armed feamen, fervants, negroes and others in the town of Boston, tending to the destruction of all government and order.

RESOLVED, that it is incumbent on the civil and military officers in the province to exert themfelves to the utmost, to difcourage and suppress all such tumultuous riotous proceedings whenfoever they may happen-Vol. II. F f RESOLVED. 1747. RESOLVED, that this house will stand by and support with their lives and estates his excellency the governor and the executive part of the government in all endeavors for this purpose.

RESOLVED, that this houfe will exert themfelves by all ways and means poffible in redreffing fuch grievances as his majefty's fubjects are and have been under, which may have been the caufe of the aforefaid tumultuous diforderly affembling together.

T. Hutchinfon, Speaker." THE council paffed a vote ordering that Captain Erskine and all other officers belonging to his majesty's fhips should be forthwith fet at liberty and protected by the government, which was concurred by the house. Affoon as these votes were known, the tumultuous spirit began to fublide. The inhabitants of the town of Boston affembled in town meeting in the afternoon, having been notified to confider, in general, what was proper for them to do upon this occafion, and notwithstanding it was urged by many that all meafures to fupprefs the prefent fpirit in the people would tend to encourage the like oppreffive acts for the future, yet the contrary party prevailed and the town, although they expressed their sense of the great infult and injury by the impress, condemned the tumultuous riotous acts of fuch as had infulted the governor and the other branches of the legislature and committed many other, heinous offences.

THE governor, not expecting fo favorable a turn, had wrote to the fecretary to prepare orders for the colonels of the regiments of Cambridge, Roxbury and Milton and the regiment of horfe to have their officers and men ready to march at an hour's warning to fuch place of rendezvous as he fhould direct, but the next day there was an uncommon appearance of the militia of the town of Bofton, many perfons taking their muskets who never carried one upon any other occasion, and the governor was conducted to his house with as great parade as when he first assured the government.

THE

434

THE commodore difmiffed most, if not all, of the inha. 1747. bitants who had been impressed, and the squadron failed to the joy of the rest of the town.

By the expedition to. Louisburgh, the preparations for the reduction of Canada, and the feveral supplies of men for Nova-Scotia the province had iffued an immenfe fum in bills of credit, between two and three millions. according to their denomination in the currency. The greatest part of this fum had been iffued when between five and fix hundred pounds was equal to one hundred pounds sterling, and perhaps the real confideration the government received from the inhabitants who gave credit to them was near four hundred thousand pounds sterling; but by thus multiplying the bills they had fo much depreciated that, at the end of the war, eleven or twelve hundred pounds was not equal to more than an hundred pounds sterling, and the whole debt of the province did not much exceed two hundred thousand pounds fterling. Thus the people had paid two hundred thoufand pounds sterl. in two or three years, besides a large fum raifed by taxes each year, as much as it was fuppofed. the people were able to pay; but to pay by the depreciation of the bills, although infinitely unequal, yet, as they were fhifting hands every day, it was almost infensible, a poffeffor of a large fum for a few days not perceiving the difference in their value between the time when he received them and the time when he parted with them. The apprehension of their depreciation tended to increafe it, and occasioned a quick circulation and for fome time, even for English goods, which ordinarily fell for the longest credit, no body pretended to ask credit. They were constantly, however, dying in fome body's hand, though no body kept them long by them. Bufiness was brisk, men in trade increased their figures but were finking the real value of their flock and, what is worfe, by endeavors to shift the loss attending such a pernicious currency from one to another, fraudulent difpolitions and habits are acquired and the morals of the people depreciate with the currency.

Ff 2

THE

435

THE HISTORY OF

1747.

A.30

THE government was folliciting for the reimburfement of the charge in taking and fecuring Cape Breton, and by the addrefs, affiduity and fidelity of William Bollan, Efq; who was one of the agents of the province for that purpofe, there was a hopeful profpect that the full fum, about £.180,000 fterling, would be obtained.

SOME of the ministry thought it fufficient to grant fuch fum as would redeem the bills iffued for the expedition, &c. at their depreciated value, and Mr. Kilby, the other agent, feemed to defpair of obtaining more, but Mr. Bollan, who had an intimate knowledge of our public affairs, fet the injustice of this proposal in a clear light and made it evident that the depreciation of the bills was as effectually a charge born by the people as if the fame proportion of bills had been drawn in by taxes, and refused all proposals of accommodation, infisting upon the full value of the bills when iffued. He certainly has great merit for this and other fervices.

MR. Hutchinfon, who was then speaker of the house of reprefentatives, imagined this to be a most favorable opportunity for abolishing bills of credit, the fource of fo much iniquity and for establishing a stable currency of filver and gold for the future. About two million two hundred thousand pounds would be outstanding in bills in the year 1749. One hundred and eighty thoufand pounds sterling at eleven for one which was the lowest rate of exchange with London for a year or two before, and perhaps the difference was really twelve for one, would redeem nineteen hundred and eighty thousand pounds, which would leave but two hundred and twenty thousand pounds outstanding, it was therefore proposed that the fum granted by parliament should be shipped to the province in Spanish milled dollars and applied for the redemption of the bills as far it would ferve for that purpose, and that the remainder of the bills should be drawn in by a tax on the year 1749. This would finish the bills. For the future, filver, of sterling alloy at 6f. 8d. the ounce, if payment should be made in bullion, or otherwise milled dollars at 6/. each should be 1747. the lawful money of the province and no perfon should receive or pay within the province, bills of credit of any of the other governments of New-England. This propofal being made to the governor he approved of it as founded in justice and tending to promote the real interest of the province, but he knew the attachment of the people to paper money and fupposed it impracticable. The fpeaker, however, laid the propofal before the houfe, where it was received with a fmile and generally thought to be an Utopian project and, rather out of deference to the speaker, than from an apprehension of any effect, the house appointed a committee to confider of it. The committee treated it in the fame manner but reported that the fpeaker should be defired to bring in a bill for the confideration of the house. When this came to be known abroad, exceptions were taken and a clamour was raifed from every quarter. The major part of the people, in number, were no fufferers by a depreciating currency, the number of debtors is always more than the number of creditors, and although debts on specialties had allowance made in judgments of court for depreciation of the bills, yet on fimple contracts, of which there were ten to one fpecialty, no allowance was made. Those who were for a fixed currency were divided. Some supposed the bills might be reduced to fo fmall a quantity as to be fixed and ftable and, therefore, were for redeeming as many by bills of exchange as should be thought superfluous; others were for putting an end to the bills, but in a gradual way, otherwife it was faid a fatal shock would be given to trade. This last was the objection of many men of good fense. Douglas, who had wrote well upon the paper currency and had been the oracle of the anti-paper party, was among them and, as his manner was with all who differed from him, discovered as much rancor against the author and promoters of this new project as he had done against the fraudulent contrivers of paper money emiffions.

bullion,

ТЦЕ

THE bills it was faid had funk gradually in their value $747. from 61. 10d. + to 601. the ounce, by this means creditors had been defrauded, it was but reafonable they should rife gradually that justice might be done. But the creditors and debtors would not be the fame in one instance in a thoufand, and where this was not the cafe the injury was the fame, to oblige any one to pay more as to receive lefs than was justly due. Others were for exchanging the bills at a lower rate than the then current price of filver. The inhabitants had given credit to the government, when filver was at 30% the ounce, and ought to be paid accordingly. Two of the reprefentatives of Boston urged their being exchanged at 30f. which would have given a most unreasonable profit to the prefent poffeffor who had taken them at 55 or 60/. To draw over fome of this party, conceffions were made and the bills were exchanged at 50f. the ounce instead of 55 as was at first proposed.

> SOME of the directors and principal promoters of the land bank (cheme, † being at this time members of the general court, unexpectedly joined with the party who were for finishing paper money, but the opposition was fo great, that after many weeks spent in debating and fettling the several parts of the bill and a whole day's debate at last in a committee of the whole house upon the expediency of passing the bill, as thus settled, it was rejected and the report of the committee accepted.

> THE houfe, although upon fome occasions exceptions are taken to motions and proceedings which come before them as not being in parliamentary form, yet are not ftrict in conforming to fome of the most useful rules of parliament. A bill or motion is not only referred from one fession to another, but a bill, after rejecting upon a fecond or third reading, is fometimes taken up and passed fuddenly the fame fession. They have an order of the houfe, that when any affair has been confidered, it shall not be brought before the houfe again the fame feffion un- 1747. lefs there be as full a houfe as when it was paffed upon. This, if obferved, would ftill be liable to inconvenience as any defigning perfon might take an opportunity upon a change of faces, the number being as great as before, fuddenly to carry any point, but even this rule, like many other of what are called ftanding orders, is too frequently by votes, on particular occasions, dispensed with, which leffens the dignity of the house.

> > not

+ John Choate and Robert Hale.

IT feems to be of no confequence to the prerogative whether the currency of a colony be filver or paper, but the royal instructions from time to time for preventing a depreciating currency, caufed meerly by a gracious regard to the interest of the people, had generally engaged what was called the country party in opposition to them and in favor of paper. It was the cafe at this time. However, the next morning, two of the members of the house + zealous adherers to this party and who had been strong opposers of the bill, came early to the houfe to wait the coming of the speaker and, in the lobby let him know, that although they were not fatisfied with feveral parts of the bill yet they were alarmed with the danger to the province from the schemes of those perfons who were for a gradual reduction of the bills and, by that means, for raising the value of the currency without any provision for the relief of debtors and, therefore, they had changed their minds and, if the bill could be brought forward again, they would give their voice for it, and others who had oppofed it would do the fame. The fpeaker, who had looked upon any further attempt to be to no purpose, acquainted them that he did not think it proper to defire any of the favorers of the bill to move for a reconfideration of it, inafinuch as it had been understood and agreed in the house the day before, that if upon a full debate had, the Ff 4 bill

† Joseph Livermore the representative of Weston, and Samuel, Witt representative of Marlborough. 0

1749. bill fhould be rejected, no further motion fhould be made about it. Affoon as the houfe met, upon a motion by one of these members seconded by the other, the bill was again brought under confideration and passed the house as it afterwards did the council and had the governor's confent.

> THE provision made by this act for the exchange of the bills and for establishing a filver currency was altogether conditional and depended upon a grant of parliament for reimbursement of the charge of the Cape Breton expedition. This being at a diftance and not abfolutely certain, the act had no fudden effect upon the minds of the people, but when the news of the grant arrived the difcontent appeared more visible, and upon the arrival of the money there were fome beginnings of tumults, and the authors and promoters of the measure were threatned. The government paffed an act with a fevere penalty against riots, and appeared determined to carry the other act for exchanging the bills into execution. The apprehension of a flock to trade proved groundless; the bills being dispersed through every part of the province, the filver took place inftead of them, a good currency was infenfibly fubfituted in the room of a bad one, and every branch of business was carried on to greater advantage than befote. The other governments, especially Connecticut and Rhode Island, who refused, upon being invited, to conform their currency to the Maffachufets, felt a (back in their trade which they have not yet recovered. The latter had been the importers, for the Maffachufets, of Weft India goods for many years, which ceafed at once. New-Hampshire, after fome years, revived its bufinefs and increased their trade in English goods, which formerly they had been supplied with from the Maffachufets. Perhaps, they have rather exceeded.

WE

WE shall finish this second part of our history with a 1749few remarks upon the trade of the province at this day, compared with its trade in 1692.

THE other governments of New-England, fixty or feventy years ago, imported no English goods, or next to none, directly from England, they were supplied by the Maffachufets trader. Now although our trade with GreatBritain, upon the whole, is fupposed to cause no addition to our wealth, yet, at least fo far as we are the channel for conveying fupplies of goods to the other colonies for their confumption, a benefit undoubtedly accrues. New Hampshire, by their convenient fituation were induced to become their own importers in a great measure some years before the alteration of our currency. They made their returns by shipping lumber, &c. eafier than we did. At prefent, they probably import English goods equal to their confumption. Connecticut, until we abolished our bills of credit and theirs with them, continued their trade with us for English goods, but foon after turned great part of their trade to New-York, and fome perfons became importers from England. They foon discovered their error. The produce of New-York is fo much the fame with that of Connecticut that the Massachusets market will always be the best. The importer finds it more difficult to make his returns to England from Connecticut than from the Maffachufets. Connecticut trade therefore foon returned to the ftate it had formerly been in.

RHODE-ISLAND, in part, became their own importers alfo, which they still continue.

FOR the other colonies on the continent. Between South-Carolina and the Maffachufets, there never has been any confiderable trade. The chief benefit from that colony has been the affording freights for our flips in the European trade.

North-Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, the Jerfeys and Penfylvania, until within 20 or 30 years, ufed to furnish us with provisions for which we paid them in West India and

441

1749 and fometimes English goods and with our own produce and manufactures. Philadelphia of late is become the mart for the grain of great part of Maryland, which they manufacture into flour and fupply the Maffachusets, Rhode Island and New-Hampshire, and take little or no pay in return but money and bills of exchange. It seems agreed that the fouthern colonies as far as Virginia are designed by nature for grain countries. It behoves us therefore, either like the Dutch for the other nations in Europe, to become carriers for them with our shipping, or to contrive some articles of produce or manufacture for barter or exchange with them, rather than in vain to attempt raising to more advantage than they do, what nature has peculiarly formed them for.

Our trade with the West India islands was much more profitable to us, from the beginning of king William's to the end of Queen Anne's war with France, than at any time fince. Ever fince the peace of Utrecht it has been continually growing worfe. Barbados required, then, more northern produce than it does now. The other islands, except Jamaica, have very little increased their demand. From the growth of the northern colonies and the new methods of living, the produce of the illands is more than double the price it used to be. Perhaps tea and coffee, alone, caufe as great confumption of fugar as all other uses, to which it was applied, did formerly. The produce of the northern colonies is as low. in the illands as ever it was. Formerly their demand for northern produce not only afforded us in return, rum, fugar and Molaffes fufficient for our own confumption, but left a furplus which, in war time efpecially, every year gave freight to ships from Boston to England, and paid our debts there or procured a fupply of goods from thence, whereas, at this day, the whole fupply of northern produce to the British islands will not pay for one half the West India goods confumed or used in the northern colonies. The trade to the Dutch colonies, it is true, is fince increased and our goods from time to time find their their way into the French islands, fometimes through 1749. the Dutch, at other times, when French neceffity calls for them, by permiffion or other contrivances, and by this means we are able to procure the West India goods we want for our confumption over and above what we can obtain in pay for our produce from our own islands. Britain herfelf fuffers, with her northern colonies, and pays dearly by the advanced price of fugar, rum, &c. The Westindians, notwithstanding, are continually endeavoring to reftrain our trade with the foreign illands and colonies. If they could take of our produce as much as we have occasion for of theirs it would appear less unreasonable, or if, by our trade with the foreign colonies, the price of the produce of our own islands had fallen below the former rates they might have colour for complaint; but when the vent for northern produce by means of the great increase of the northern colonies, bears no proportion, from any one of them, to what it did formerly, and yet the produce of the islands is double the price it was formerly and their estates raifed to more than five times the value, it must be unreasonable to burden not only the inhabitants of the northern colonies but of Great-Britain alfo with a still further advanced price of West-India goods, and all to aggrandize the West-India planters. Such a burden would infallibly be the effect of a rigid execution of the laws reftraining or incumbering our trade with the French and Dutch colonies. But this is not all. If our trade with the foreign colonies be suppressed and our supplies of West-India goods are confined to our own islands, the balance above what they require of our produce, must be paid them in filver and gold or exchange upon England, either of which mult leffen our returns to England and will probably leffen. our confumption of their manufactures. Charlevoix fays the French of Canada live well if they can get fine cloaths, if not they retrench from the table to adorn the perfon. I think the English colonists would rather abate from their drefs than from their punch, tea, coffee, &c."

.

IF

444

1749. IF the question be, which is most for the interest of the British dominions in general, to restrain the French American trade or to give it all possible encouragement, it must be given in favor of encouragement. The fpeedy fettlement of this vaft continent is generally fupposed to be advantageous to Great-Britain. Every new house, new farm and new subject adds to the consumption of British manufactures. Nothing more contributes to this fpeedy fettlement than a vent for the lumber, a great help in clearing the lands near the fea and upon navigable rivers, and for provisions the produce of fettlements when made. But, on the other hand, admit that raising the price of West-India produce tends to increase the number of plantations in the islands, yet, those plantations, although more valuable, will never bear any proportion in number to the plantations and fettlements upon the continent, and the increase of white subjects will be ftill lefs in proportion. Blacks eat and drink nothing and wear next to nothing of British manufacture.

THERE has been a great alteration in our trade with Great-Britain. At the beginning of this period and until within 30 or 40 years past, merchants and manufacturers in England shipped goods upon their own accounts, which were fold here upon commission, and although there was appearance of profit from the fales, yet by the lofs upon returns, most adventurers in a course of years were great losers, Discerning perfons in London when they faw a man going deep into trade to the colonies would pronounce him fhort lived.

THE trade is now upon a more certain footing for the people of England. Few goods are fent to be fold upon commission. The manufacturer depends upon the merchant in England for his pay. The merchant receives his commiffion and generally agrees with his correspondent, for whom he is in advance, in the colonies that after 6 or 9 months credit, if payment be not made, interest shall be allowed. Bad debts must be expected. more or lefs in all extensive trade. Perhaps they are not more frequent in the colonies than among the like 1749number of traders in England.

nos

THE cod and whale fifthery are in a more flourishing flate than formerly. The veffels employed in cod fishing have been more numerous, but they were small fhallops and one of the schooners now employed in that fishery take as much fish in a feason as two shallops used to do.*

THE French are supposed to maintain a fisherman at lefs expence than the English. Be it so, the English catch and make their fish at less expence than the French notwithstanding. Five or fix well fed Marblehead or Cape Ann men catch as much fish as 10 or 12 meagre French men in the fame time. The French find their account in taking what they call their muid or mud fish when the English cannot. This is owing to the vent which the French markets afford for that fort of fish. In what they call a fedentaire and we a shore fishery we shall always outdo them, unless the ports of the other nations in Europe as well as those of the French should be shut against us. If every family in Britain should make one dinner in a week upon New-England cod fish it would cause an amazing increase of the confumption of British manufactures.

It is certain that before the war of 1744 the French fifhery declined. They ufed to go from Louisburgh to Canfo and buy the English fish for the French European markets, because it came cheaper to them than they could catch and make it.

THE increase of the confumption of oyl by lamps as well as by divers manufactures in Europe has been no fmall encouragement to our whale fifthery. The flourishing state of the island of Nantucket must be attributed to it. The cod and whale fishery, being the principal fource of our returns to Great-Britain, are therefore worthy not only of provincial but national attention.

* The fashion of the rigging and fails of a schooner is challenged as a New-England invention, the first is faid to have been built at Cape Ann, about the year 1714, by Capt. Andrew Robinson. 446

*749. FORMERLY the trade to Newfoundland was valuable. The increase of the northern colonies has carried from us great part of the fupplies we used to make. Our late began commerce with Nova-Scotia is valuable but will not compensate for this loss.

THE manufacture of pot all promifes great benefit to the colonies. It is to be wilhed, they may meet with no difcouragement. Frauds in package and adulteration cannot be of any long continuance. The leaft that can be done by every government, where it is manufactured, is a law to compel every perfon to fet his name and the name of the town where he lives upon the cafk in which he packs his pot-alh. This will go a great way towards preventing fraud. Should the Ruflia traders combine to underfell those who import from America, yet it will be confidered that the Ruflia trade is drawing every year from the nation a large balance in bullion, whereas the increase of imports from the colonies only tends to an increase of national exports, and the body of the nation will combine against the Ruflia traders.

I remember one advantage from paper money. Upon the depreciation, from time to time, the wages of feamen and the rate at which coafting veffels and others were hired did not immediately rife in proportion to the rife of filver and exchange with London and other parts of the world. We were thus led to employ our veffels as carriers to and from many parts of the continent, the Weft-Indies and Europe becaufe we let them upon cheaper freight and hire than any other colony would do. The war in 1744 gave a turn to this part of bufinefs, but we may learn from what happened then, without any premeditated plan or defign, what we are capable of, viz. navigating our veffels, efpecially if further improvements be made in the conftruction of them, with fo little expence as, like the Dutch in Europe, to become carriers for America. The advantage, in this particular inftance, of the reduction of the price of labour fhews us what improvements might be made in other branches of 1749. trade and manufacture if ever it should be reduced in proportion to the price in Europe, compared with the price of the necessfaries of life.

what

IT was hard parting with a free open trade to all parts of the world which the Maffachufets carried on before the present charter. The principal acts of parliament were made many years before, but there was no cultomhouse established in the colony nor any authority anxious for carrying those acts into execution. It was feveral years after the new charter, before they were generally observed. If we are under no other obligations, we certainly enjoy and cannot fubfift without the protection of our mother country, over our trade at fea, our personal estate ashore, the territory itself, our liberties and lives. It is owing, in a great measure, to the taxes, duties and excifes, the confequences of an enormous load of debt, that the manufactures of England come dearer to us than those of other countries. Great part of this debt was incurred by our immediate protection. Shall we think much of fharing in the burden when we have been fo great sharers in the benefit? There is no way in which we can more effectually contribute to the national relief than by fubmitting to regulations and reftraints upon our trade, and yet no way in which we should be so little sensible of it.

It has been the general voice that our trade to Great Britain should be contracted and that our inhabitants should be employed in the same kind of manufactures we import from thence, the materials for most of which we have or may have within ourfelves.

THE great creator of the universe in infinite wisdom has so formed the earth that different parts of it, from the foil, climate, &c. are adapted to different produce, and he so orders and disposes the genius, temper, numbers and other circumstances relative to the inhabitants as to render 1749. render some employments peculiarly proper for one country, and others for another, and by this provision a mutual intercourse is kept up between the different parts of the globe. It would be folly in a Virginian to attempt a plantation of rice for the fake of having all he confumes from the produce of his own labour, when South-Carolina, by nature, is peculiarly defigned for rice, and capable of fupplying one half the world. Old countries, flocked with people, are ordinarily best adapted to manufactures. Would it be the interest of New England, whilst thin of people, to turn their attention from the whale, cod, mackarel and herring filhery, their lumber trade and fhip building, which require but few hands compared with many other forts of bulinefs, to fuch manufactures as are now imported from Great Britain, or to take their fons from clearing the land and turning an uncultivated wildernefs into pleafant and profitable fields, and fet them to fpinning, weaving and the like employments ? I do not mean to difcourage any perfons who cannot improve their time to greater advantage from employing themselves and families, in any branch of manufacture whatfoever. Idleness is the certain parent of vice. Induftry, introduced, will ordinarily tend to produce a change of manners. A general philanthropy will induce us to delight in and contribute to the happines of every part of the human race, by which we our felves are no fufferers; the ftate from whence we fprang and upon which we still depend for protection, may justly expect to be diftinguished by us, and that we should delight in and contribute to its profperity, beyond all other parts of the globe.

APPENDIX.

(449)

APPENDIX.

NUMBER I.

A Summary of the affairs of the colony of New-Plimouth, from the first settlement until the incorporation with Massachusets-Bay, &c. in one province.

THE first fettlers of New-Plimouth, as we have observed in our history of the Massachusets colony, went in the beginning of the 17th century, from England to Holland. Their removal to Holland was attended with no fmall difficulty and hazard. One of the company * gives this account of it. " There was a large company of them propofed " to get paffage at Bofton in Lincolnshire and, for that " end, had hired a ship wholly to themselves, and made " agreement with the mafter to be ready at a certain day, " and take them and their goods in at a convenient place, " where accordingly they would all attend in readinefs. " So after long waiting and large expence, tho' he kept " not day with them, yet he came at length and took them " in, in the night. But when he had them and their " goods aboard he betrayed them, having before hand " complotted with the fearchers and other officers fo to " do, who took them and put them into open boats and " then rifled and ranfacked them, fearching them to their " fhirts for money, yea even the women, further then " became modefly, and then carried them back into the " town, and made them a spectacle and wonder to the " multitude, VOL. II. Gg

* Bradford,

" multitude, which came flocking on all fides to behold " them. Being thus, first by the catch-poles, rifled and-" ftript of their money, books and much other goods, " they were prefented to the magistrates, and messengers " fent to inform the lords of the council of them, and " fo they were committed to ward. Indeed the magif-" trates used them courteously and shewed them what " favor they could, but could not deliver them till order " came from the council table, but the iffue was that, "after a month's imprisonment, the greatest part were " difinified and fent to the places from whence they " came, but feven of the principal men were still kept " in prifon and bound over to the affizes. The next " fpring after there was another attempt made, by fome " of these and others, to get over at another place. And " fo it fell out that they light of a dutchman at Hull, " having a fhip of his own belonging to Zealand. They " made agreement with him and acquainted him with " their condition, hoping to find more faithfulnefs in him " than in the former of their own nation. He bad them , " not fear, for he would do well enough. He was by., " appointment, to take them in between Grimstone and "Hull, where was a large common a good way diftant " from any town. Now against the prefixed time, the " women and children, with the goods, were fent to the " place in a fmall barke, which they had hired for that " end, and the men were to meet them by land, but it " fo fell out that they were there a day before the ship, " came and, the fea being rough and the women very " fick, prevailed with the feamen to put into a creek hard " by, where they lay on ground at low water. The " next morning the ship came, but they were fast and " could not ftir till about noon. In the mean time, the " fhip mafter, perceiving how the matter was, fent his " boat to get the men aboard whom he faw ready, walk-" ing about the flore, but after the first boat full was got " aboard and the was ready to go for more, the mafter " espied a great company both horse and foot, with bills and

APPENDIX.

and guns and other weapons, for the country was raifed " to take them. The dutchman, feeing that, fwore his " country oath'' facramente' and, having the wind fair, "weighed anchor, hoifted fails and away .- After endur-" ing a fearful ftorm at fea for 14 days or more, 7 whereof " they never faw fun moon nor flars, and being driven " near the coaft of Norway, they arrived at their defired " haven, where the people came flocking, admiring " their deliverance, the florm having been fo long and " fore, in which much hurt had been done, as the master's " friends related to him in their congratulations. The " rest of the men that were in greatest danger made a " fhift to escape away before the troop could furprize " them, those only staying that best might be affisting un-" to the women. But pitiful it was to fee the heavy cafe " of these poor women in distress; what weeping and " crying on every fide, fome for their husbands that were " carried away in the fhip, others not knowing what " fhould become of them and their little ones, crying for " fear and quaking with cold. Being apprehended, they " were hurried from one place to another till, in the end, " they knew not what to do with them; for, to impri-" fon fo many women with their innocent children for "no other cause, many of them, but that they would go " with their hufbands, feemed to be unreafonable and all " would cry out of them, and to fend them home again. " was as difficult, for they alledged, as the truth was, " they had no homes to go to, for they had either fold " or otherwife disposed of their houses and livings: To " be fhort, after they had been thus turmoiled a good-" while and conveyed from one conftable to another, " they were glad to be rid of them in the end upon any " terms though, in the mean time, they poor fouls en-" dured mifery enough."

AFTER eleven or twelve years refidence in Holland, in which time they had contention among themfelves and divided and became two churches or congregations, one of the congregations, whole minister was Mr. John Gg 2 Robinson, Robinson, determined to remove to America. There were many obftacles in their way and it took up feveral years of their pilgrimage* to make the necessary preparations for fuch an undertaking. At length, in the year 1620, about one half the congregation embarked first from Holland to England, where two ships were ready to receive them and they actually failed at a very feafonable time, but meeting with contrary winds and one of the ships proving leaky, they put back and were obliged to leave her with part of their company behind, the other fhip proceeding upon her voyage late in the year, fo that it was about the 8th or 9th of November before they made the coast of America, and falling more to the northward than they intended they made another attempt to fail further fouthward, but meeting with contrary winds and hazardous fhoals they were glad to put into the harbour of Cape Cod, + determined to winter in the most convenient place they could find. This difappointment was grievous to them but, before spring, they confidered it as a favorable providence. They were fo reduced in the winter by fickness and death that they supposed they mult have fallen a facrifice to the Indians upon Hudfon's river, where they proposed to begin a colony. The master, or pilot, it is faid, bribed by the Dutch West-India company, had engaged, at all events.

- * I think I may with fingular propriety call their lives a pilgrimage. Molt of them left England about the year 1609, after the truce with the Spaniards, young men between 20 and 30 years of age : They fpent near 12 years, firangers among the Dutch, first, at Amsterdam, afterwards, at Leyden. After having arrived to the meridian of life, the delining part was to be spent in another world, among favages, of whom every European must have received a most unfavorable if not formidable idea. Tantum religio potuit fuadere.
- November 10th. Cape Cod was the name which Gofnold gave it in 1692. Smith afterwards called it Cape James, but the first name having obtained among feamen the other could not prevail against it. Both French and Dutch called it Malebar for a long time, their writers do so perhaps to this day, from a fhipwreek there.

events, not to land them at Hudfon's river, but they were determined upon it and earlier in the year he would have found it very difficult to have diverted them.

THE ship lay five weeks in Cape Cod harbour. They could not expect to find a better harbour, but the land was of no value. The paffengers were employed, fome times travelling by land fometimes by water, in fearch of fome other harbour where there was better land, but could find none capable of receiving veffels of any burden. At length, December 6th, they refolved upon one attempt more and, after coasting many leagues, a violent ftorm arofe and their pilot made for the first harbour which he fuppofed to be Sagaquabe, where he was well acquainted, but foon found himfelf in a cove* full of breakers, and crying out, 'my eyes never faw this place before,' would have run the shallop ashore before the wind, if a ftout feaman who was at the helm had not called to the oars men, 'about with her if you are men,' and by this means he faved their lives, for he difcovered an opening or found ahead and, in a flort time, run the boat under the lee of an island now well known by the name of Clark's island. Here they rode out the storm. and in the morning went ashore, kindled a fire and rested, it being the first day of the week. The next day they founded many parts of the harbour and found good water for thips and were pleafed with the land, and judged it the best place they had feen, and the Indian cornfields round the harbour encouraged them that they should be able also to raife bread for their support. Upon their return to the ship with this good news, they weighed anchor and the whole company arrived the 16th of December. The whole number exclusive of the mariners, amounted to 101, about one fourth part heads of families, the reft wives, children and fervants. They supposed fome at least of the company which they left Gg 3 behind

? Since called the Gurnet's nole, behind in England, and most of the congregation in Leyden, with Mr. Robinson the minister,* would follow; and this seems to have been the whole number expected, upon their plan, for complexing the colony.

THEY

* Thirty five did arrive the 9th of November the next year, but their minister never came. He encouraged them from year to year and feems to have been prevented by difappointments from those in England, who undertook to provide for the passage of him and his congregation, until the year 1625, when he died and his congregation difperfed, although fome found their way to their brethren before and some after his death. He was at first a thorough feperatist, and Mr. Hubbard fays " was tran-" fported with their principles fo far as to publish his opinions " against hearing any of the preachers of the church of England " were they never fo learned and pious, but afterwards ac-" knowledged his error in a judicious and godly difcourfe" &c. He is faid to have been a man of good learning and of a benevolent disposition. Mr. Bradford relates an anecdote which fhews him, as well as their congregation in general, to have been in no Imall effeem among the dutch. " The magistrates of the " city about the time of their coming away, or a little before, in " the public place of justice, gave this commendable testimopy " of them in the reproof of the Walloons who were of the French " church in the city. Thefe English, faid they, have lived " among us now thefe 12 years and yet we never had any fuit " or accufation come against any of them, but your strifes " and quarrels are continual &c. --- In these times also were " great troubles raifed by the Arminians, who, as they greatly " molefted the whole ftate, fo this city, in which was the chief " univerfity, in particular, and the two professors or divinity " readers themfelves were divided in their opinions, the one " teaching for it and the other against it .- Episcopius, the " Arminian professor, put forth his best strength and fet forth " fundry thefes which by publick difpute he would defend " against all men. Now Poliander, the other professor, and the " chief preachers of the city, defired Mr. Robinfon to difpute against him, but he was loth being a stranger, yet the other " " did importune him and told him that fuch was the abilities " and nimblenefs of the adverfary that the truth would fuffer " if he did not help them, fo that he condescended and pre-" pared himfelf against the time, and when the day came the " Lord did fo help him to defend the truth and foil his adver-" fary as he put him to an apparent nonplus in this great and " public audience, and fo he did a fecond and a third time up-C OL

454

THEY had obtained a grant of part of the continent near Hudfon's river, before the year 1620, and expected to be under the government of the colony in Virginia, but before they embarked they heard that the lands within their grant were made part of a new patent to the council of Plimouth in Devon, fo that they were going into a part of the world where there was no government fubfifting by authority from any European flate, nor did they carry other powers or authority with them than what each of them brought into the world.

THEY were convinced, upon their paffage, that they could not long fubfift without government. Some of the inferior clafs among them muttered that, when they fhould get afhore, one man would be as good as another, and they would do what feemed good in their own eyes. This led the graver fort to confider how to prevent it, and, for this purpofe, they prepared the following inftrument for every man to fign before he landed.

"IN the name of God amen. We whole names are " underwritten, the loyal fubjects of our dread fove-"reign lord king James, by the grace of God of Great-" Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith " &c. Having undertaken for the glory of God and " advancement of the chriftian faith, and honor of our " king and country, a voyage to plant the firft colony in " the northern parts of Virginia, do by these prefents, " folemnly and mutually in the prefence of God and one " of another, covenant and combine ourfelves together " into a civil body politick for our better ordering and " prefervation and furtherance of the ends aforefaid, and " by virtue hereof to enact, conflitute and frame fuch " juft and equal laws and ordinances, acts, conflitutions " and offices, from time to time, as shall be thought most G g 4 " meete

" on fuch like occafions, which procured him much honor and " refpect, &c.—and fo far were they from being weary of him " and his people, or defiring their abfence, as was faid by fome, " of no fmall note, that, were it not for giving offence to the " flate of England, they would have preferred him, and allow-" edthem fome public favor." " meete and convenient for the general good of the " colonie, unto which we promife all due subjection and "obedience. In witness whereof we have hereunto " fubscribed our names at Cape Cod the 11th of No-" vember, in the year of the reign of our fovereign lord "King James of England, France and Ireland the 18th, " and of Scotland the 54th, Anno Dom. 1620. Signed by " John Carver, Wm. Bradford, Edw. Winflow, Wm. " Brewster, Ifaac Allerton, Miles Standish, John Alden, " Sam. Fuller, Christopher Martin, Wm. Mullins, " Wm. White, Richard Warren, John Howland, Ste-" phen Hopkins, Edw. Tilley, John Tilley, Francis "Cook, Thomas Rogers, Thomas Tinker, John " Ridgfdale, Edw. Fuller, John Turner, FrancisEaton, " James Chilton, John Croxton, John Billington, Jofes " Fletcher, John Goodman, Digory Prieft, Thomas " Williams, Gilbert Winflow, Edw. Margefon, Peter " Brown, Richard Bitteridge, George Soule, Richard " Clarke, Richard Gardner, John Allerton, Thomas " English, Edw. Doten, Edw. Liester." +

+ Thefe I suppose to have been all the males, of age, in the company, twenty one of whom died before the end of March, of the fourvey and other fickness, caufed by bad lodging and bad diet and the hardships of the winter. About the fame proportion of the women and children died alfo, 50 being the whole number then furviving. In 1650 there were 30 remaining alive, in 1679 only 12, in 1694 only 2, and Mary Cufhman only, daughter of Isaac Allerton, was alive in 1698. 1 will give a brief account of feveral of these persons. John Carver had been deacon of their church in Holland, was effected for his diferete difeharge of that office and being a grave judicious man, their eyes were upon him for their chief ruler before they embarked. He lived but a fhort time. His grandfon died about 10 or 12 years fince, at Marshfield at the age of 102. Not long before his death this grandfon with his fon, his grandfon and great grandfon were all at work together without doors, and the great great grand fon was in the house at the fame time. This is not common. William Bradford was one of the younger men of the company. Douglass fays he was a man of no family and no learning. His manufcripts they that he was a plain fenfible man and in his public truft

he

Br

By this inftrument they formed themfelves into a proper democracy, and if they had gone no further perhaps they would have done but little towards preferving order.

he was effeemed as a difcrete, upright and faithful officer, and he deferves a better character than many of fuperior birth and His fon was deputy governor after his death, his education. grand fon and two of his great grandfons, one of them now living have been of the council for the province. Edward Winflow was of a very reputable family and of a very active genius which fitted him for employment abroad, and in a great measure prevented a competition between Bradford and him for the governor's place. He was concerned in managing their treaties with the Indians, and with the neighbouring colonies, made feveral voyages to the eastward and to Connecticut river, as well as four or five voyages to England in the fervice of the colony first and, afterwards, of the Massachufets and fo eftablished himself in the favor of the then supreme authority in England as to be employed in fome very important fervices. In 1651, he was one of the commissioners of Haberdashers-hall, as they were called from the place of meeting and in 1655 was one of the three fuperintendents in Cromwell's West-India expedition. In one of his embassies, viz. in 1635 he had hard measure in England, the particular circumstances his friend Bradford has preferved from oblivion, "It " came to pass that having occasion to answer some complaint " made against the country at council board, chiefly concerning " his neighbours in the bay, the which he did to great effect, " and further profecuting fuch things as might tend to the good " of the whole as well themfelves as others about the wrongs " and encroachments that the French and other ftrangers both " had done and were like further to do unto them if not pre-"" vented, he preferred the petition following to their honors " that were deputed commissioners for the plantations.

To the right honorable the Lords Commissioners for the plantations in America.

The humble petition of Edward Winflow on behalf of the plantations in New-England humbly fheweth unto your Lordfhips, that whereas your petitioners have planted themfelves in New-England under his majefly's moff gracious protection, now fo it is, right honorable, that theFrench and Dutch do endeayour to divide the land between them, for which purpofe the French have upon the eaft fide entered and feized upon one of our houfes and carried away the goods, flew two of the men in another place and took the reft prifoners with their goods : and order. But one great reason of this covenant seems to have been of a meer moral nature, that they might remove all scruples of inflicting necessary punishments, even and the Dutch in the weft have also made entry upon Conecticut river within the limits of his majefty's letters patents, where they have raifed a fort and threaten to expel your petitioners thence who are also planted upon the same river, maintaining possession for his majefty to their great charge and hazard both of lives and goods. In tender confideration hereof your petitioners humbly pray, that your lordships will either procure their peace with those foreign states or elfe give special warrant unto your petitioners and the English colonies to right and defend themse wes against all foreign enemies. And your petitioners shall ever pray, %c.

" This petition found good acceptation with most of them, and " Mr. Winflow was heard fundry times by them, and appoint-" ed further to attend for an answer from their lordships, espe-" cially having upon conference with them laid down a way " how this might be done without any other charge or trouble " to the flate, only by furnishing fome of the chief of the " country here with authority, who would undertake it at " their own charge, and in fuch a way as should be without " any public diffurbance. But this croffed both Sir Ferdi-" nando Gorges and Capt. Mason's defign, and that of the " archbishop of Canterbury by them, for Sir F. Gorges, by " the archbishop's favor, was to have been fent over general " governor into the country and to have had means from the " ftate for that end, and was now upon difpatch and conclu-" fion of the bulinefs. And the archbishop's intent was by his "means and fome he fhould fend with him (to be furnished " with epifcopal power) to difturb the peace of the churches " here, and to overthrow their proceedings and prevent their " further growth, which was the thing he aimed at. But it " fo fell out, by God's providence, that though he in the end " croffed this petition from taking any further effect in this " kind, yet by this as a chief means the plot and whole bufinefs " of his and Sir Ferdinando's fell to the ground and came to " nothing. When Mr. Winflow fhould have had his fuit " granted, as indeed, upon the point it was, and should have " been confirmed, the archbishop put a stop upon it, and Mr. "Winflow, thinking to get it freed, went to the board again, " but the bishop, Sir Ferdinando and Capt. Mason had, as it "feems, procured Morton to complain, to whole complaints " Mr. Winflow made anfwer to the good fatisfaction of the " board who checked Morton and rebuked him fharply, and " alfa even capital ones, feeing all had voluntarily fubjected themfelves to them. By common confent they agreed apon Mr. John Carver to be their first governor, " con-" fiding

458

" alfo blamed Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Mafon for counte-" nancing him, but the bifhop had further end and use of his " prefence, for he now began to question Mr. Winflow of many " things, as of teaching in the church publickly, of which " Morton accufed him and gave evidence that he had feen and " heard him do it, to which Mr. Winflow answered that some-" times, wanting a minister, he did exercise his gift to help " the edification of his brethren when they wanted better " means, which was not often. Then about marriage, the " which he also confessed, that having been called to place of " magistracy he had fometimes married fome ; and further " told their lordfhips that marriage was a civil thing and he " found no where in the word of God that it was tyed to a " minister, again, they were necessitated fo to do, having for " a long time together at first no minister, besides, it were no " new thing, for he had been fo married himfelf in Holland " by the magistrates in their state house. But, in the end, to " be fhort, by these things, the bishop by vehement importu-" nity got the board at last to confent to his commitment, fo " he was carried to the fleet and lay there 17 weeks or there-" abouts before he could get to be releafed. The other defign !! by this bufinefs and other things concurring, was fruftrated, " which was no fmall bleffing to the people here." Mr. Winflow fettled at Marshfield upon a valuable tract of land which now belongs to his eldeft male descendant. A rare instance among us. To his effate he gave the name of Carefwell, and from thence dated many of his letters to governor Winthrop, with whom he was very intimate, and frequently came from thence to Bolton to vifit him, fometimes, perhaps, by water but often by land, not as governors travel at this day in a chariot or post-chaife, but for some of the first years at leaft, upon his feet. In the fame manner governor Endicot travelled from Salem to Bofton. I was pleafed with this paragraph of a letter from him to his fucceffor, governor .Winthrop, "Salem, 12th of April 1631, Right worshipful, "I did hope to have been with you in perfon at the court, " and to that end I put to fea yesterday and was driven back " again, the wind being fliff against us and, there being no " canoe or boat at Sawgus (Lyn) I must have been constrained " to go to Miflick and thence about to Charleston which, at this " time I durft not be fo bold, my body being at prefent in an 11

"fiding in his prudence that he would not adventure "upon any matter of moment without confent of the "reft or, at leaft, advice of fuch as were known to be the "wifeft

" ill condition to wade or take cold and therefore I defire you " to pardon me." I can't help revering our good forefathers who chearfully exposed themfelves to these hardships. Mr. Winflow's fon was first an affistant, then governor of the colony, his grandfon one of the council for the province, and many years at the head of the county of Plimouth, one of his great grandions loft his life fighting for his country, (p 307) and two others are now living in repute, and in offices of honor and truft, and there are many reputable branches of the name and family in different parts of the province. William Brewster was highly effeemed by the whole company, was their ruling elder in Holland, which feems to have been the bar to his being their governor, civil and ecclesialtical office in the fame perfon being then deemed incompatible. Mr. Bradford gives this account of him. " After he had attained " the knowledge of the latin tongue and fome infight into the " greek, and spent some small time at Cambridge; and then, " being first seafoned with the feeds of grace and virtue, he " went to the court and ferved that religious and godly gen-" tleman Mr. Davison divers years, when he was fecretary of " ftate, who found him fo diferete and faithful, that he truffed " him above all other that were about him, and only employed " him in all matters of greatest trust and secrecy. He esteemed " him rather as a fon than a fervant, and for his wildom and " godlinefs, in private, he would converfe with him more like " a friend and familiar than a master. He attended his master, " when he was fent in ambaffage by the queen into the low " countries, in the earl of Leicelter's time.- He afterwards re-" mained with him till his trouble, when he was put from his " place about the death of the queen of Scots, and some time " after, doing him many faithful offices of fervice in the time " of his troubles. Afterwards he went and lived in the coun-" try in good efteem among his friends and the gentlemen of " those parts, especially the godly and religious ----- He was the " chief of those that were taken at Bolton and fuffered the " greatest lofs. ____ After he came into Holland he fuffered " much hardfhip, having spent most of his means, having a " great charge and many children, and in regard of his former " breeding and course of life not fo fit for many employments " as others were, efpecially fuch as were toilfome and laborious. 11 In the latter part of the time fpent in Holland, his outward " condition " wifest among them." (Hubbard.) They feem cautiously to have referved as much of their natural liberty as could be confistent with the maintenance of government and

" condition was mended.----He fell into a way, by reafon he " had the latin tongue, to teach many fludents who had a de-" fire to learn the English tongue, for he drew rules to learn " it after the latin manner, and many gentlemen both Danes and " Germans, reforted to him, as they had time from their other " ftudies, fome of them being great mens fons. --- Removing " into this country thefe things were laid afide, and a new " course of living must be submitted to, in which he was no " way unwilling to take his part and to bear his burthen with " the reft, living many times without bread or corn many " months together, many times having nothing but fifh, and "often wanting that alfo, and drank nothing but water for " many years together, yea till within five or fix years of his " death, and yet he lived by the bleffing of God in health till " very old age," &c. He lived until 1643, and then died at the age of 34. His grandson, William Brewster, was deacon of the church at Duxbury. Many of his pofterity, I am informed, are living in that colony. Ifaac Allerton or Alderton, the first affiftant, was employed feveral times to negociate matters in England, relative to their trade, and at length left them and fettled there. His male posterity fettled in Maryland. If they be extinct, point Alderton, which took his name, will probably preferve it many ages. Miles Standish is faid, by Morton, to have been "a gentleman of Lancashire, heir to a great estate. " furreptitioully detained from him, his great grandfather being " a fecond or younger brother of the houfe of Standifh." had been a foldier in the low countries, and was thought, although of remarkably fmall flature, the moft proper perfon for their chief military officer as long as he lived. Many things are faid of his notable firength and courage. When the news of the first Indians being killed, by him, came to Mr.Robinton in Holland, he writes to his church to confider the difpolition of their captain, who it feems was of a warm temper, and he hoped the Lord had fent him among them for good, if they used him right, but Mr. Robinfon doubted whether there was not wanting that tendernefs of the life of man, made after God s image. which was meet, and he thought it would have been a happy this g if they had converted fome before they had killed any. leems Standish was not of their church, at first, and Mr Huhhard fays he had more of his education in the fchool of Mars i in the school of Christ. He acquired however the effects is the whole colony, and died in 1656, much lamented. His farm and otder. This was rational and every thinking man when he first quitted the state of nature would do the fame. Lord chief justice Holt said, in the case of Blankald v. Galdy.

farm in Duxbury retains the name of Captain's hill to this day; and some part of it yet remains in the possession of one of his polterity. William White was remarkable for being the father of the first born child, Peregrine White, who lived until 1704. (p. 198.) Stephen Hopkins was one of the affiftants, and feems to have been much employed in their publick affairs. Purchafe mentions one Stephen Hopkins, one of Sir George Somers's company at Bermudas, as being difaffected to their civil and ecclefiallical regulations and a promoter of feparation, and not unlikely to be the fame perion. He was the anceftor of Mr. Hopkins of Providence, the prefent governor of Rhode Island. Richard Warren is mentioned by Bradford as a most useful man among them the fhort time he lived, dying in 1628; his fon, grandfon and great grandfon have been fince employed in publick pofts in the colony and province. John Alden was many years an affistant, and feveral of his descendants have fustained publick offices and fome of them are now living : So are the defcendants of John Howland. I can give no account of the reft of this company. Timothy Hatherly was a merchant in London, en--gaged with them from the beginning, and came over two or three years after the first. He was the principal founder of the town of Scituate, and was an affiftant : So was Thomas Willett who came from London in 1629, and was a principal trader with the Dutch at Manhados, and in fuch effeem with them that they chose him a referree to settle their controverted boundary with the colony of Newhaven. He lived many years after, and died at Swanzey. His fon was one of the first fettlers of the Naraganfet country in the beginning of this century, and his grandfon Francis Willett, Efq; is a perfon of diffinguished character in that colony. William Thomas, Edmund Freeman, James Cudworth, Thomas Southworth, were all affistants, and their families still remain in the colony. I may not omit taking notice of Richard Bourne, an early fettler, and a most zealous and indefatigable promoter of the gospel among the Indians, and though I do not find him named in the magiftracy himfelf, yet two of his defcendants have been of the council for the province, and feveral more are now living of very reputable characters, and diftinguished by posts of honot and truft. These were the founders of the colony of New-Plimouth. The fettlement of this colony occasioned the fettlement of Maffachulets bay, which was the fource of all the other

11-14

Galdy, that in cafe of an uninhabited country newly, found out by English subjects, all laws in force in England are in-force there, and the court agreed with him. Until they fhould agree upon laws fuited to their peculiar circumstances, our Plimotheans refolved to make the laws of England their rule of government, which, Mr. Hubbard fays, " they were willing to be subject " unto, although in a foreign land," and it feems they differed much in this respect from the Massachusets colonists, and never established any diffinet code or body of laws, but: " added fome particular municipal laws of "their own, fuitable to their conflictution, in fuch cafes "where the common law and the statutes of England. " could not well reach and afford them help in emer-" gent difficulties, following the advice of Pacuvius to " his neighbours of Capua; not to cashier their old ma-" giftrates till they could agree upon better to place in " their room." Cartwright, who had a chief hand in reducing puritanism to a system, held, that the magistrate was bound to adhere to the judicial law of Mofes and might not punish nor pardon otherwise than they prefcribed, and him the Maffachufets people followed. It must be allowed that, in fome instances, the Plimotheans run into the fame errors with the Maffachufets. and established penalties disproportioned to the offences. A young factor, who came from Virginia, was captivated with the charms of an Indian girl and the effects of a criminal conversation foon appeared. He found fuspicions rifing against him, and had no other way to avoid. whipping but to leave the colony. Accordingly he privately departed to the colony from whence he came, where I suppose his offence would not have been thought very heinous. If he had forged a deed he might have efcaped .

other colonies of New-England. Virginia was in a dying ftate and feemed to revive and flourish from the example of New-England. I am not preferving from oblivion the names of heroes whole chief merit is the overthrow of cities, provinces and empires, but the names of the founders of a flourishing. town and colony if not of the whole British empire in America. efcaped with a moderate fine. I would not be under flood to intend that fornication should pass with impunity but, certainly; forgery requires a more infamous punishment. But this was not all. It was thought by one,* at least, among themselves, that fome enormous fodomitical crimes committed by profligate perfons who had mixed among them were owing to the fevere penalties annexed to lascivious acts which, though less criminal. were more fuspected and more likely to be difcovered by their confequences. We do not condemn the laws for reftraining human paffions and natural propenfities, but they will fometimes, like waters close dammed or pent up, feek vent and break through with greater violence. They thought the magistrates, being God's ministers, were bound to punish all offences in their courts in the fame proportion as the fupreme judge would punish them in the court of heaven.

THEY had no fcruples of their authority by virtue of their combination to inflict corporal punishment for leffer offences. They had been ten years combined before any capital offence was committed. In-1630, John Billington, who had flipped in among them when they were at London. not being one of their church, lay in wait for his companion with whom he was offended and wounded him fo that he died prefently after. They were in doubt of their authority to pass fentence of death. They had just obtained their patent from the council of Plimouth, which gave all the powers which they had authority to give, but if the council, by their patent, had no authority to inflict capital punifhment themfelves it might well be enquired how they could give this power to their substitutes. Their chief reliance, therefore, feems to have been upon the voluntary fubmission of this offen. der among the reft to the laws and orders of the whole body. This, from a meer moral confideration, night. induce them to proceed to trial and punifiment, but as they were within the dominions of Great-Britain and had no constitutional authority to erect courts of justice fcruple:

* Bradford,

fcruples of the legality still remained. They therefore applied to their neighbours in the Mallachufets and prayed their advice. Mr. Winthrop, having confulted with " the ablest gentlemen there," concurred with the opinion at Plimouth, that the man ought to die and "the land be purged from blood." This was founded upon the divine command, "Whofoever fheddeth man's blood," &c. which was not in any cafe to be difpenfed with. Although they were not cloathed with legal authority they observed, nevertheless, the forms of law, and both grand jury and petty jury were impannelled, and, after indictment, verdict and fentence, the criminal was executed. I find no fcruple, afterwards, of as full authority in all cafes whatfoever as any of the charter governments or any government by royal commission, until after the reftoration of King Charles the fecond.

MR: Carver, the first governor, died fuddenly a few months after their arrival. They chofe William Bradford to fucceed him and Ifaac Allerton his affiftant, but gave this reason for chusing an affistant, that Mr.Bradford was upon recovery from a fit of fickness and unable to bear the whole burden; however, it ferved for a precedent and the fame perfons were annually elected governor and affiftant until 1624 when they added four perfons more for affiliants and gave the governor a double voice, and in 1633 two more, after which they kept to the number of leven affiliants until they fubmitted to king James the fecond his commission to Andros. In 70 years they had no more than fix different perfons governors. In popular governments, where the elections dre frequent and changes rare, it is, ordinarily, a proof of a spirit of virtue and a prefumption arises that they have pitched upon perfons well qualified, and, on the contrary, frequent shifting from one perfon to another and from one fet of officers to another, with continual animolities, contentions and ftruggles between the two parties, which we have feen inftances of in the colonies, is a proof that this spirit is not predominant. VOL. II. Hh

BRADFORD,

BRADFORD, who fucceeded Carver, was chofen anhually from 1621 until he died in 1657, except in 1633; 1636 and 1644, when Edward Winflow was chofen and 1634 when Thomas Prince was chofen, who alfo fucceeded Bradford and was annually elected, until his death in 1673, when Jofias Winflow fucceeded and continued until he died in 1680 and was fucceeded by Thomas Hinkley, who held the place, except in the interruption by Andros, until the junction with the Maffachufets iff 1692.

I do not find when they first chose a deputy governot or gave an affistant the name of deputy governor, for I know of no peculiar share of power, but in the latter part of the patent, William Bradford, fon to the first governor, is named deputy governor. The charters of the three New-England charter governments mentioning fuch an officer probably led them to a conformity. They had no house of representatives until the year 1639.* There feems to have been no occasion for one before, Their number was finall, the election of governor and affiftants annual; they were to all intents and purpofes the reprefentatives of the people and, indeed when the colony increafed, the increasing the number of affisiants might have answered all the purposes of chusing the same number with another name; The Maffachusets had fome special reasons which Plimouth had not. They were limited by charter to eighteen affiftants. The people were not fatisfied that the whole powers of government should be in fo few hands. They could have a remedy in no other way than by creating a diftinct body of men to share with the governor and affiftants in acts of government. The Maffachufets, from the beginning, endeavored to preferve two diffinet ranks or

At the general court held the 4th of June 1639, committees or deputies fent from each town; 4 from Plimouth, 2 from Duxborough, 2 from Scituate, 2 from Sandwich, 2 from Cohannet (Taunton) 2 from Yarmouth, 2 from Barnflable. Colony records. In June 1639 it was ordered that Plimouth fhould fend only 2. et orders of men, gentry and commonalty.* There was a general difpolition to elect the governor, &c. from the former rank ; their minifters preached it as a chriftian, and moral duty. That the commonalty or; as they expreffed themfelves; the generality might come in for a fhare, they formed a new body by the name of reprefentatives although their charter knew nothing of it.

WHILST they were few in number fo that the whole body could affemble in one place, the whole were frequently convened to determine upon matters executive as well as legiflative.[†] When they were increafed and were divided into towns remote from the center, this became impracticable. They then feem to have followed the model of the Maffachufets, the governor and affiftants being the fupreme judiciary power and fole in judging high offences, leffer offences being cognizable before inferior courts and fingle magiftrates and in civil matters appeals also lay from inferior jurifdictions to the fupreme.

I shall briefly touch upon their ecclesiaftical affairs. I suppose this people were the first who took or received the name of Independents which, in a few years after, was the name given to a body of men in England who affumed the government there. When they first went to Holland they were known by the name of Brownists. Some of the characteristicks of Brownism they afterwards disclaimed and, at the same time, disclaimed the name, which was generally odious, the character of the founder of the fect being, at best, problematical. Besides, he renonnced his principles and returned to episcopacy. The Puritans they could not conform to and, therefore, considered themselves as a distinct church or by themfelves independent of all other. Cardinal Bentivoglio H h 2

* Vol. I. p. 490.

At a general court held the 27th of March 1634 it was ordered that all actions eicher of debt or trespais, under 40% be tried by the governor and affiftants without the trouble of the whole body. Colony records: makes them a diffinct fect in Holland by the name of Puritans, though he was unacquainted with their inducement to leave England and fuppofes it commerce and not religion.* The Maffachufets people refined and took the name of congregationalifts, although it will perhaps be difficult, at this day, to fnew any material difference between the churches of the two colonies, for although Plimouth never established by act of government the Maffachufets platform, yet in practice they feem generally to have conformed to it.

WHILST they expected their minister from Holland they were without the facraments, they had constant public worship, their pious elder generally praying and preaching, or as they then termed it prophefying, and fometimes one or other of the brethren best gifted or qualified. After their minister's death, they made trial of four or five, but fome were of bad morals, others of principles not approved and others met with better offers, fo that they had no minister settled to their satisfaction until Mr. John Reyner came among them in the year 1636. The whole colony made but one church until the year 1622, when those brethren who lived on the fide of the bay opposite to the town, where Duxbury now is, broke from the reft because of the difficulty of travel and became a diffinet fociety. Perhaps their being fo long without a minister at first, might be the reafon why they were lefs anxious to be furnished with ministers, immediately upon their spreading and forming new towns and fettlements, than their neighbours in Maffachufets and Connecticut.

CONSIDERING the rapid increase of the Maffachusets and Connecticut it may not be amiss to give the reasons of the very flow growth of Plimouth, for in 13 or 14 vears

 I Puritani ancora vi fon tolerati, che fono i più puri e i più rigidi Calvinisti, i quali non vogliono riconoscere autorità alcuna ne' magistrati politici sopra il governo de' loro ministri heretici, e sono quasi tutti de' Puritani d'Inghilterra, che per occasion di commercio frequentan l'Ollanda, e le altro Provincie Unite. Della relatiene delle Provincie, &c. years the whole colony was not become too numerous for one middling town. They had pitched upon fome of the pooreft land in New-England and had frequent thoughts of quitting it. In 1623, their brethren write from Leyden and defire that feeing by God's providence " that place fell to their lot, they would not leave it nor " languifh after other places though they had difcovered " more rivers and more fertile places than where they " were" but in 1633, they took poffeffion of Connecticut river and built and fortified a houfe for trade, where Hartford now is and, aftewards, when the Maffachufets difpoffeffed them they urged, among other reafons for holding poffeffion, that " they lived upon a barren place where they were by neceffity caft, and neither they nor theirs could long continue upon the fame, and why fhould they be deprived of that which they had provided and intended to remove to affoon as they were able.*

Hh 2

* Mr. Bradford among the proceedings of the year 1633 places their possellion of Connecticut river. " Having had formerly converte and familiarity with the Dutch, as is before remembered, they feeing them feated here in a barren guarter told them of a river called by them the fresh river, but now is known by the name of Conighticute river, which they often commend. ed to them for a fine place both for plantation and trade and withed them to make use of it, but their hands being full otherwife they let it pafs; but, afterwards, there coming a company of banished Indians into these parts that were driven out from thence by the potency of the Pequads, they often follicited them to go thither and they fhould have much trade, especially if they would keep a house there, and they began to fend that way for difcovery and trade with the natives. They found it to be a fine place but no great flore of trade, but the Indians excufed it by reason of the fear they were in of their enemies. They tried divers times and not without profit, but faw the most certainty would be by keeping a house there to receive the trade when it came down out of the inland. The Indians, feeing they were not very forward to build there, follicited them of the Maffachusets in like fort (for their end was to be reftored to their country again) but they in the bay being lately come were not fit for the fame, and some of their chiefs made a motion to join with the partners here to trade jointly in that river, which

.IN

In the next place, the plan they fet out upon was not to make a great colony in a little time, but to preferve a pure and diffinct congregation, they neither defired

which they were willing to embrace and fo they would have built and put in equal flock together. A time of meeting was appointed at the Maffachufets and fome of the chief here were appointed to treat with them and went accordingly, but they call many fears of danger and lofs and the like, which were perceived to be the main obflacles, though they were not provided of trading goods, but those here offered to put in fufficient for both, provided they would become engaged for the half and prepare against the next year. They contessed more could not be offered, but thanked them and told them they had no mind to it. They then faid they hered it would be no offence if they went on without them.' They faid there was no reason they should, and thus the treaty broke off. Those here took convenient time to make a beginning there, and were the first English who both discovered that place and built in the fame. But the Dutch began now to repent, and hearing of their purpose and preparation endeavored to prevent them, and got in a little before them, and made a flight fort, and planted two pieces of ordnance, threatning to llop their paftage; but they having made a fmall frame of a houfe ready, having a great new bark they flowed their frame in her hold and boards to cover and finilh it, having nails, &c. fitting for their ufe, this they did the rather that they might have a prefent defence against the Indians, who were much offended that they brought home and reftored the right fachem of that place, called Natuwannute; fo that they were to encounter with a double danger in this attempt, both the Dutch and the Indians. When they came up the river, the Dutch demanded what they intended and whither they would go, they answered up the river to trade, now their order was to go and feat above them; they bid them Arike and flay or elfe they would thoot them and flood by their ordnance ready fitted. They anfwered they had commission from the governor of Plimouth to go up the river to fuch a place and if they did floot they muft abey their order and proceed, they would not moleft them but would go on.' 'So they paffed along and though the Dutch threatned them hard yet they flot not. "Coming to their place they clapped up their house quickly and landed their provisions and left the company appointed and fent the bark home, and afterwards pallifadoed their house about and fortified themferres better. They did the Datch no wrong, for they took 203 defired any people of a different perfusion to mix with them nor did any fuch incline to go among them. When one of their number was hanged ten years after the fettlement began it was remarked that he had been a profane perfon and guilty of other mifcarriages before that for which he fuffered and that by means of fome of his friends in London he had been fhuffled in among them. If all in England, who called themfelves Brownifts and Independents, at that day, had come over with them they would fcarcely have made one confiderable town. Indeed, a few years after, most of those who had before been called Puritans, were willing enough to own the fame principles with them, though they did not like the name.

Hh4

not a foot of any land they bought, but went to the place above them and bought that tract of land which belonged to those Indians which they carried with them and their friends, with whom the Dutch had nothing to do." Bradford MS.

I cannot let this extract pais without an observation relative to the Maffachusets. In the controversy between New-York and the two governments of Massachusets and Connecticut, the charters to which give them a territory well to the S. fea, except fuch parts as were possessed by any prince or flate, the government of New-York claims to Connecticut river because the Dutch were in poff fion and it was part of the exception and therefore the grant of it afterwards to the Duke of York was good. This manufcript of Bradford is the most ancient memorial relative to this part of the country which is now extant and it appears from it that until divers years after the date of the Maffachusets charter the Dutch had no fort of possession in the fresh or Connecticut river nor any intention of settling there, but encouraged the people of New-Plimouth, with whom they had begun a correspondence and trade, to guit their fettlement and remove thither and thereupon the Plimotheans, feveral times before the year 1623, went up the river and had began a trade there; but the Dutch, probably alarmed by the formidable appearance of the Maffachufets colony, then repented of the advice they had given, purchased a tract in the lower part of the river and would have prevented the English from passing but failed in the attempt, and they were, foun after, obliged to quit the river themselves and, in 1650, formally relinquished all claim or pretence to jurifdiction there.

WE

WE may add one caufe more, viz. that their views when they left England, were rather to establish a factory than a colony. They had no notion of cultivating any more ground than would afford their own neceffary provisions, but proposed that their chief fecular employment should be commerce with the natives, and they entered into contract with a company of 20 or more merchants and others, many of them belonging toBriftol, who were to furnish them with goods, and at the end of feven years the profits were to be divided 'equally between the merchants in England and the colonifts, all the houfes and improved land to be valued in the joint ftock. This laft circumftance was a fufficient bar to any extraordinary improvement of the lands. Here I cannot help remarking that they had a fine opportunity of making fortunes, having few or no rivals, and the Indians were charmed with European goods, as well to adorn as to cloath themfelves, and goods fold at great advance and the furrs came cheap, but a variety of misfortunes and loffes by fea for feveral years together kept the balance against them. They were but little acquainted with trade and, perhaps, our forefathers were not fo worldly minded as their posterity have fince been. At first they made every man a partner. Every man's perfon was valued at ten pounds interest in the flock, and his whole time was to be employed for the common benefit. He that had f. 90 in the general flock, with the addition of f. to for his perfon, was to fhare ten times as much as he who had no fubftance at all. This was a hard bargain for the poor, and I fhould not wonder if perfons who could bring no money to put in the flock were difcouraged from fettling among them. After the expiration of the feven years, and a fettlement with their partners in England, the principal perfons were obliged to become bound for the balance which remained in the hands of the colony or factory, and from that time took the trade into their own hands, exclusive of the poorer fort, who had fpent feven years in labour and toil, and had received subfissance only, and that oftentimes scant enough. THEY

THEY had for eight or ten years almost the whole supply of the Indians who were near neighbours to them, but their greatest expectations were from the eastern Indians, and they fet up a truck houle at Penobfcot and another upon Kennebeck river. The latter they found most advantageous and fought for a grant of a convenient tract from the council of Plimouth which they obtained in the year 1628, but it was " fo ftrait and ill bounded'e that the next year, 1629, when a grant was made of the lands intended for the whole colony. the tract of country at Kennebeck was granted anew, and the limits enlarged. They met with fome opposition in 1624 from perfons employed by Lord Say and Lord Brook who claimed a right of trading at the fame place with the Plimouth people, I suppose by a grant from Gorges, and a fray happened in which one was killed on each fide. Lord Say's company were Puritans and those of Plimouth Independents. The enemies of both reproached both for making religion the profeffed motive to colonizing and fo foon after killing one another for the fake of beaver.* This grant upon Kennebeck, within twelve or fifteen years paft, from a different construction of the words which describe the limits, has been the caufe of great contention. Perhaps the relation of this action by governor Bradford may afford fome light in the controverfy. I fhall therefore caufe it to be inferted in the margin exactly as I find the words and points in his manufcript.+

For

* Nollem vi et cæde pro evangelio certari. LUTH.

† "I am now to enter upon one of the faddeft things that befell them fince they come. But before I begin it will be needful to premife fuch parte of their patente as gives them right and priviledge at Kenebeck. As followeth. The faid counfell hath further given, granted, bargained, fold, infeoffed, allotted, affigned and fet over, and by thefe prefents, doe clearly and abfolutely give, grante, bargane, fell, alliene, enffeofe, allote, affigne and confirme unto the faid William Bradford, his heires, affociates, and affignes, All that tracte of land or part of New-England in America afforefaid, which lyeth within or betweene FOR two or three years after their arrival all things were in common, no man having any property but what was put into the common flock and every perfon furnifhed with cloathing and provisions out of this flock. A certain hetweene, and extendeth it felfe, from the utmost limits of Cobifeconte which adjoyneth to the river of Kenebeck, towards the westerne ocean, and a place called the falls of Nequamkick in America aforefaid, And the space of 15 English myles, on each fide of the faid river, commonly called Kenebeck river, and all the faid, river called Kenebeck, that lyeth within the faid limits and bounds eastward, westward, northward and southward, last above mentioned; and all lands, grounds, foyles, rivers, waters, fishing, &c. And by vertue of the authority to us derived by his faid late Ma^{tis} L'res patents to take, apprehend, feise, and make prise of all such perfons their ships and goods, as shall attempte to inhabite, or trade, with the favage people of that countrie within the feverall prefincts, and limits of his, and their feverall plantations, &c.

Now it fo fell out that one Hocking, belonging to the plantation of Pifcataway, wente with a barke, and comodities to trade in that river, and would needs prefs into their limits. and not only fo but would needs goe up the river above their house (towards the falls of the river) and intercept the trade that thould come to them. He that was cheefe of the place forbad them, and prayed him that he would not offer them that injurie, nor goe about to infringe their liberties, (which had coft them fo dear) but he answered he would go up and trade there in difpite of them, and lye there as longe as he pleafed; the other told him he must then be forced to remove him from thence, or make feafure of him if he could. he bid him do his worfte, and fo wente up and anchored there. The other took a boat, and fome men, and went up to him, when he faw his time, and againe entreated him to departe, by what perfuafion he could. But all in vaine, he could get nothing of him but So he confidered that now was the feafon for the ill words. trade to come downe, and if he thould fuffer him to lye, and take it from them, all their former charge would be loft, and they had better throw up all. So confulting with his men, (who were willing therefor) he refolved to put him from his anchores, and let him drive downe the river with the ftreame; but commanded the men that none should shoote a shote upon any occasion except he commanded them. He spoake to him againe but all in vaine, then he fent a cuple in a canow to cutte his cable, the which one of them performes, but Hocking takes gertain quantity of land in the beginning of the year was affigned for planting, and every man had fuch a proportion of the labour affigned him. Mr. Bradford remarks. upon this occasion, that the ill fuccess of this community of goods even among godly and fober men fully evinced the vanity of that conceit of Plato, that the taking away property and bringing in community into a common wealth would make them happy and flourishing, and in fact they raifed fo little provisions that once, at least, they were in danger of flarving, and before their crops were fully ripe, great part would be stolen out of the fields to fatisfy hungry bellies, and fevere whipping of the offenders would not deter others in the like circumstances from committing the like offence, befides, it occasioned conftant difcontent and murmuring, the young men, most capable of labour, who had no families, thought much of labouring for other men's wives and children, those in their full flrength complained that it was unjust to allow them no more in the division of victuals and cloathing than them who were weak and could not do a quarter part of the labour; the aged and grave men thought it an indignity and difrespect to be upon a level, as in labour fo in victuals and cloaths, with the younger. and in other refpects inferior fort. Husbands could not brook it that their wives should be commanded to do menial up a pece which he had layded ready, and as the barke fhered by the canow he fhot him clofe under her fide, in the head (as I take it) fo he fell downe dead inflantly. One of his fellows (which loved him well) could not hold, but with a mufket fhot Hocking, who fell downe dead and never fpoake word; this was the truth of the thing; the reft of the men carried home the veffel and the fad tidings of thefe things. Now the Lord Saye and the Lord Brooke with fome other great perfons had a hand in this plantation; they write home to them, as much as they could to exafperate them in the matter; leaving out all the circumftances, as if he had been killed without any offence of his parte, conceling that he had killed another firft, and the juft occafion that he had given in offering fuch wrong; at which their Lordf.^{ps} were much offended till they were truty informed of the matter." Bradford's MS.

menial fervices, dreffing meat, washing cloaths, &c. for other men; all being to do and all to receive alike, it was inferred that in all other refpects they ought to be alike, and one man was to all intents and purpofes as good as another, and no fubordination no civil diffinction could be preferved. After three years, they found it abfolutely neceffary to come into fome new meafures and began with affigning to each family a certain quantity of land fufficient to raife corn enough for their fupport, but in all other respects to continue in the general way until the feven years for which they had contracted with their partners in England for the profits of their labour were expired. There was immediately a new face upon their affairs, much more corn was planted than the governor, by the exertion of all his authority, could ever caufe them to plant in any year before, women and children, who were weak and unable before, went chearfully with their husbands and parents to plant corn, and every family had enough for their fupport, and many of them fome to fpare. An emulation was created and increafed every year to exceed in quantity, and in a few years they were able to raife fufficient to make it a valuable article in their Indian trade, being then worth fix shillings sterling a'bushel; the Indians in a great measure left off raising it, the hunting life being more agrecable to them, when they found with their furrs they could purchase what they wanted.

THE colony had ftruggled for feven or eight years, and had made but fmall improvements in cultivating the ground, and were not numerous enough to think of dividing and extending to the inland parts of the country when Mr. Endicot arrived at Salem to prepare the way for the grand undertaking of fettling the Maffachufets. This muft have given fresh spirits to the Plimotheans. Without this, I think, there is great reason to question whether the plantation would not in a few years have been deferted and the fettlers have removed to fome more fertile part of America or, which is more probable, have have returned to England where, from the change of times, they might have enjoyed civil and religious liberty, for the fake of which they first quitted it, in as great a latitude as their hearts could with.

In a fmall colony it cannot be expected that we should meet with many events of moment after they had grappled with the hardships which attended their first fettlement. Mr. Bradford remarks, that the Spaniards were thought by Peter Martyr to have fuffered hardthips which none but a Spaniard could endure, when they were obliged to live for five days together upon the parched grain of maize only, and that not to faturitie, whereas the Plimotheans the first two or three years thought a meal of their maize as good as a feast and, fometimes, not for five days only, but for two or three months together, were destitute of ihat and all other corn or bread of any kind, but with their miferies, he fays, they opened a way to thefe new lands, for other men to come afterwards with cafe and inhabit them. The 4th year after their arrival, they were threatned with the total destruction of their crop, and absolute famine. From about the middle of May to the middle of July, they had not one fhower of rain, and the extreme heat of the fan upon their fandy foil had fo dried up their corn, that they were almost in defpair of its ever being reftored, but in the evening after a day of fafting and prayer, it began to rain and, by repeated showers, their corn recovered its verdure and they had a plentiful harvest. They afterwards found by experience that such droughts are frequent in this climate, but the infinitely wife and good creator has fo ordered the feafons, that these droughts have always been followed, before the end of the fummer, with refreshing rains, and although the fruits of the earth have been much diminished, yet harvest hath never failed, men and beafts have been fupported and, ordinarily, in the next fucceeding year, there has been a remarkable plenty.

dec.v

THE

THE terror which fire arms ftruck into the Indians, prevented them from deftroying this finall company. There were not above feven men capable of bearing arms in the time of fickness the first winter. Soon after. the potent nation of Naraganfet fent to the English a bundle of arrows tied with a fnake's skin as a defiance and denunciation of war. The English filled the skin with bullets, and fent it back with this answer, that they had done them no wrong, did not fear them and were provided for them, come when they would. The Naraganfets would not fuffer the bullets to come near them, and they were moved about from place to place; till they found their way back to the English again, and the Indians remained quiet. As the Indians learned the use of fire arms, the Énglish increased in number, and until the year 1675 there was no open rupture, except the fhort offenfive war with the Pequots in their own country which ended in their destruction.

HOWEVER rigid the New-Plimouth colonifts may have been at their first seperation from the church of England, yet they never discovered that perfecuting spirit which we have feen in the Maffachufets. When Mrs. Hutchinfon and her adherents were banished from that colony, they applied to the colony of Plimouth, for leave to fettle upon Aquidnick or Rhode-Island; which was then acknowledged to be within Plimouth patent; and it was readily granted, although their tenets were no more approved by Plimouth than by the Maffachufets. Some of the Quakers also fled to Plimouth bounds, and probably faved their lives, for although they made laws fevere enough against erroneous opinions; yet in no cafe capital, and the baptifts were still more favorably received, the town of Swanzey being principally fettled by baptift refugees from the Maffachufets colony, and when one of their ministers fettled in the church of Plimouth, they were content that he fhould baptize by immersion or dipping any who defired it, provided he took no exception to the other minister's sprinkling fuch for whom immersion was not judged necessary.

UNTIL

UNTIL 1629, they were in doubt about their title to their lands. They were conftantly folliciting a grant or, as they term it, an affurance from the council of Plimouth. In 1624, they employed one John Pierce, who procured a grant to himfelf for about fifty pounds; but he kept it in his own hands, and refufed to affign it for lefs than five hundred pounds. This they juftly complained of as a great breach of truft, and attribute to it feveral loffes and difappointments he met with in his intended voyage, which frightened him and made him alfo look upon them as the punishment of his perfidy and to relinquish his claim. I do not find that those who employed him reaped any benefit from the grant. After they had their patent in 1629, they were eafy until the reftoration, but when Connecticut and Rhode Island who held their lands, or most of them, under patents from the council of Plimouth, thought it neceffary to follicit and had obtained a royal confirmation and charter, giving authority to govern, New-Plimouth follicited alfo, but they were rather too late. The court began to be jealous of the colonists. Such fort of charters as had been granted left them, it was faid, too much to themfelves, and although they were not peremptorily refufed, they were put off from time to time, and told that the only difficulty was to fettle fuch a form of government as should fecure their dependence as a colony, and fhould neverthelefs afford to them liberties and privileges to their fatisfaction.

THIS was no eafy matter for both fides to agree upon. This flate of fufpenfe made the colony more pliable and obfequious than their neighbours of Maffachufets, and particularly, when the commissioners from king Charles came to New-England in 1664, Plimouth fubmitted to their determination a controverfy between that colony and Rhode-Island about bounds, and gave fatisfactory answers to the feveral queries proposed to them.* They received a very gracious letter from the king, but all ended ended in bona verba. We can eafily conceive of a parent state growing every day more and more popular in its government, and neverthelefs at the fame time reftraining the liberties of its colonies for the fake of continuing the connexion, but when there is a fcheme of establishing absolute power in the parent state how can it be expected that popular governments should be esta-blished in the colonies? However, no advantage was ever taken of their want of authority, and their proceedings were connived at until the general flipwreck of charters in 1684, when an arbitrary government was established in the other colonies, and they could not expect to escape. All their hopes being at an end, they made as loud complaints of oppreffion, under Andros, as any people of his government, and perhaps with as much reason, and when the Massachusets imprisoned him and re-affumed their charter, Plimouth affumed their old form of government alfo. Now it was that they first fenfibly found the want of a charter. Connecticut and Rhode Island, who had refigned their charters, were juf-tified, by the example of the corporations in England, in affuming them again, but Plimouth had none to af-Their first attempt was to procure a charter and fume. to continue a diffinct government. In this they could not fucceed. Perhaps, if it had been follicited in the best manner, they might have fucceeded, but interior divifions prevented any proper measures being pursued: Mr. Hinkley, their governor, wrote to Mr. Mather, the Maffachufets agent, to defire him to follicit in their behalf, but the people refused to advance any money, and fo fmall a fum as two hundred pounds fterling could not be raifed. The inhabitants of fome of the principal towns fubscribed, upon condition the whole fum should be raifed, and some of the towns refusing, the whole fubscription failed. Such was the effect of their divisions. that neither party would acknowledge the authority of the government when any act paffed which they did not approve of. Mr. Wifwall, one of their ministers, by advice advice of some gentlemen in Boston, went to England. but having no commission and, which is more fatal to those who have affairs at court, no money, he never could make a public appearance, and ferved only to give offence to the ministry by offering exceptions to the propofal of joining Plimouth to the Maffachufets and occafioned their being annexed to New-York. It is faid they were taken out of Slaughter's commission by Mr. Mather's intereft. Slaughter arrived at New-York the year before Phips arrived in the Maffachulets and fent his orders, copy of which I have feen, to Little Compton, in Plimouth colony, in terms as high and authoritative as if he had been their governor or depended upon being fuch, fo thar their junction with New-York feemed rather suspended than superfeded until they were actually included in the Maffachufets,

* Vol. I. p. 233.

WE certainly are not in a proper temper when, becaule we cannot obtain all which we think of right belongs to us, we are indifferent whether we retain any part of it. I dare fay there is not a man in the colony of Plimouth, at this day, who does not think it a moft happy circumfrance that they were annexed to Maffachufets rather than to New-York. And although, at firft, there might be jealoufies of unequal diffinctions, upon fome occafions, in favour of the Maffachufets, yet they have long fince been at an end and, the cuftoms, manners and religious opinions of the two colonies being much the fame, they mutually confider themfelves as having one joint general intereft as fully in all refpects as if they had been one colony from the beginning,

VOL. II.

NU,MB. II,

APPENDIX.

1,82

NUMBER II.

November 1637.

The Examination of Mrs. Ann Hutchinson at the court at Newtown.

Mr.Winthrop RS. Hutchinfon, you are called governor. RS. Hutchinfon, you are called here as one of those that have troubled the peace of the commonwealth and the churches here; you are known to be a woman that hath had a great fhare in the promoting and divulging of those opinions that are causes of this trouble, and to be nearly joined not only in affinity and affection with fome of those the court hath taken notice of and paffed cenfure upon, but you have fpoken divers things as we have been informed very prejudicial to the honour of the churches and ministers thereof, and you have maintained a meeting and an affembly in your houfe that hath been condemned by the general affembly as a thing not tolerable nor comely in the fight of God nor fitting for your fex, and notwithstanding that was cried down you have continued the fame, therefore we have , thought good to fend for you to understand how things are, that if you be in an erroneous way we may reduce you that fo you may become a profitable member here among us, otherwife if you be obstinate in your courfe that then the court may take fuch couffe that you may trouble us no further, therefore I would intreat yon to express whether you do not hold and affent in practice to those opinions and factions that have been handled in court already, that is to fay, whether you do not justify Mr. Wheelwright's fermon and the petition.

Mrs. I am called here to answer before you but Hutchinfon, I hear no things laid to my charge.

Goy.

Gov. I have told you fome already and more I can tell you. (Mrs. H.) Name one Sir. Gov. Have I not named fome already?

Mrs. H. What have I faid or done?

Gov. Why for your doings, this you did harbour and countenance those that are parties in this faction that you have heard of. (Mrs.H.) That's matter of confcience, Sir.

Gov. Your confcience you must keep or it must be kept for you.

Mrs. H. Must not I then entertain the faints becaufe I must keep my conscience.

Gov. Say that one brother flould commit felony or treason and come to his other brother's house, if he knows him guilty and conceals him he is guilty of the fame. It is his confcience to entertain him, but if his confcience comes into act in giving countenance and entertainment to him that hath broken the law he is guilty too: So if you do countenance those that are transgreffors of the law you are in the fame fact.

Mrs. H. What law do they tranfgreis ?

Gov. The law of God and of the flate. Mrs. H. In what particular?

Gov. Why in this among the reft, whereas the Lord, doth fay honour thy father and thy mother. Mrs. H. Ey Sir in the Lord. (Gov.) This honour you have broke in giving countenance to them.

Mrs. H. In entertaining those did I entertain them against any act (for there is the thing) or what God hath appointed?

Gov. You knew that Mr. Wheelwright did preach this fermon and those that countenance him in this do break a law.

Mrs. H. What law have I broken ?

Gov. Why the fifth commandment;

Mrs. H. I deny that for he faith in the Lord.

Gov. You have joined with them in the faction.

Mrs. H. In what faction have I joined with them ? Gov. In prefenting the petition.

Mrs. H.

Mrs. H. Suppose I had fet my hand to the petition what then ? (Gov.) You faw that cafe tried before. Mrs. H. But I had not my hand to the petition.

Gov. You have councelled them. (Mrs.H.) Wherein? Gov. Why in entertaining them.

Mrs. H. What breach of law is that Sir? Gov. Why difhonouring of parents.

Mrs. H. But put the cafe Sir that I do fear the Lord and my parents, may not I entertain them that fear the Lord because my parents will not give me leave?

Gov. If they be the fathers of the commonwealth, and they of another religion, if you entertain them then you difhonour your parents and are justly punishable.

Mrs. H. If I entertain them, as they have difhonoured their parents I do.

Gov. No but you by countenancing them above others put honor upon them.

Mrs. H. I may put honor upon them as the children of God and as they do honor the Lord.

Gov. We do not mean to difcourse with those of your fex but only this; you do adhere unto them and do endeavour, to fet forward this faction and fo you do dishonour us.

Mrs. H. I do acknowledge no fuch thing neither do I think that I ever put any dishonour upon you.

Gov. Why do you keep fuch a meeting at your house as you do every week upon a set day ?

Mrs. H. It is lawful for me fo to do, as it is all your practices and can you find a warrant for yourfelf and condemn me for the fame thing? The ground of my taking it up was, when I first came to this land because I did not go to fuch meetings as those were, it was prefently reported that I did not allow of fuch meetings but held them unlawful and therefore in that regard they faid I was proud and did defpife all ordinances, upon that a friend came unto me and told me of it and I to prevent fuch aspersions took it up, but it was in practice before I came therefore I was not the first.

Gov.

Goy. For this, that you appeal to our practice you need no confutation. If your meeting had answered to the former it had not been offensive, but I will fay that there was no meeting of women alone, but your meeting is of another fort for there are fometimes men among you.

Mrs. H. There was never any man with us.

Gov. Well, admit there was no man at your meeting and that you was forry for it, there is no warrant for your doings, and by what warrant do you continue fuch a courfe?

Mrs. H. I conceive there lyes a clear rule in Titus, that the elder women fhould inftruct the younger and then I must have a time wherein I must do it.

Gov. All this I grant you, I grant you a time for it, but what is this to the purpofe that you Mrs. Hutchinfon must call a company together from their callings to come to be taught of you?

Mrs. H. Will it pleafe you to anfwer me this and to give me a rule for then I will willingly fubmit to any truth. If any come to my houfe to be inftructed in the ways of God what rule have I to put them away?

Gov. But suppose that a hundred men come unto you to be instructed will you forbear to instruct them?

Mrs. H. As far as I conceive I crofs a rule in it.

Gov. Very well and do you not fo here?

Mrs. H. No Sir for my ground is they are men.

Gov. Men and women all is one for that, but fuppofe that a man should come and fay Mrs. Hutchinfon I hear that you are are a woman that God hath given his grace unto and you have knowledge in the word of God I pray instruct me a little, ought you not to instruct this man? Mrs. H. I think I may.—Do you think it not

Mrs. H. I think I may. Do you think it not lawful for me to teach women and why do you call me to teach the court?

Gov. We do not call you to teach the court but to lay open yourfelf.

Mrs. H. I defire you that you would then fet me down a rule by which I may put them away that come unto me and fo have peace in fo doing.

485

Ii 3

Goy.

Gov. You must shew your rule to receive them. Mrs. H. I have done it. Gov. I deny it because I have brought more arguments than you have.

Mrs. H. 1 fay, to me it is a rule.

Mr. Endicot. You fay there are fome rules unto you. I think there is a contradiction in your own words. What rule for your practice do you bring, only a cuflom in Boston.

Mrs. H. No Sir that was no rule to me but if you look upon the rule in Titus it is a rule to me. If you convince me that it is no rule I shall yield.

Gov. You know that there is no rule that croffes another, but this rule croffes that in the Corinthians. But you must take it in this sense that elder women must instruct the younger about their buliness and to love their hufbands and not make them to clafh.

Mrs. H. I do not conceive but that it is meant for fome publick times.

Gov. Well, have you no more to fay but this ? Mrs. H. I have faid fufficient for my practice.

Goy. Your course is not to be fuffered for, besides that we find fuch a courfe as this to be greatly prejudicial to the state, besides the occasion that it is to seduce many honeft perfons that are called to those meetings and your opinions being known to be different from the word of God may feduce many fimple fouls that refort unto you, belides that the occafion which hath come of late hath come from none but fuch as have frequented your meetings, fo that now they are flown off from magistrates and ministers and this fince they have come to you, and befides that it will not well fland with the commonwealth that families should be neglected for fo many neighbours and dames and fo much time fpent, we fee no rule of God for this, we fee not that any should have authority to fet up any other exercises belides what authority hath already fet up and fo what hurt comes of this you will be guilty of and we for fuffering you. Mrs. H.

Mrs. H. Sir I do not believe that to be fo.

Gov. Well, we fee how it is we must therefore put it away from you or restrain you from maintaining this course.

Mrs. H. If you have a rule for it from God's word you may.

Gov. We are your judges, and not you ours and we must compel you to it.

Mrs. H. If it pleafe you by authority to put it down I will freely let you for I am subject to your authority.

Mr. Bradstreet.* I would ask this question of Mrs. Hutchinson, whether you do think this is lawful? for then this will follow that all other women that do not are in a fin.

Mrs. H. I conceive this is a free will offering.

Bradst. If it be a free will offering you ought to forbear it because it gives offence.

Mrs.H. Sir, in regard of myfelf I could, but for others I do not yet fee light but fhall further confider of it.

Bradft. I am not against all women's meetings but do think them to be lawful.

Mr. Dudley, ? Here hath been much spoken con-dep. gov. S cerning Mrs. Hutchinfon's meetings and among other anfwers the faith that men come not there, I would alk you this one queftion then, whether never any man was at your meeting?

Gov. There are two meetings kept at their house.

Dep. gov. How; is there two meetings?

Mrs. H. Ey Sir, I fhall not equivocate, there is a meeting of men and women and there is a meeting only for women.

Dep. gov. Are they both conftant?

Mrs. H. No, but upon occasions they are deferred. Mr. Endicot. + Who teaches in the men's meetings none but men, do not women fometimes?

Mrs. H. Never as I heard, not one.

Dep. gov. 1 would go a little higher with Mrs. Hutchinson. About three years ago we were all in peace.

* Qne of the allifants.

† One of the affiftants.

peace. Mrs. Hutchinfon from that time the came hath made a disturbance, and some that came over with her in the fhip did inform me what fhe was as foon as fhe was landed. I being then in place dealt with the paftor and teacher of Boston and defired them to enquire of her. and then I was fatisfied that the held nothing different from us, but within half a year after, she had vented divers of her strange opinions and had made parties in the country, and at length it comes that Mr. Cotton and Mr. Vane were of her judgment, but Mr. Cotton hath cleared himfelf that he was not of that mind, but now it appears by this woman's meeting that Mrs. Hutchinfon hath fo forestalled the minds of many by their refort to her meeting that now she hath a potent party in the country. Now if all these things have endangered us as from that foundation and if the in particular hath disparaged all our ministers in the land that they have preached a covenant of works, and only Mr. Cotton a covenant of grace, why this is not to be fuffered, and therefore being driven to the foundation and it being found that Mrs. Hutchinfon is the that hath depraved all the ministers and hath been the cause of what is fallen out, why we must take away the foundation and the building will fall.

Mrs. H. I pray Sir prove it that I faid they preached nothing but a covenant of works.

Dep. Gov. Nothing but a covenant of works, why a Jefuit may preach truth fometimes.

Mrs. H. Did I ever fay they preached a covenant of works then?

Dep. Gov. If they do not preach a covenant of grace clearly, then they preach a covenant of works.

Mrs. H. No Sir, one may preach a covenant of grace more clearly than another, fo I faid.

D. Gov. We are not upon that now but upon polition, Mrs. Fl. Prove this then Sir that you fay I faid.

D. Goy. When they do preach a covenant of works do they preach truth?

Mrs. H. Yes Sir, but when they preach a covenant of works for falvation, that is not truth.

D. Gov. I do but afk you this, when the ministers do, preach a covenant of works do they preach a way of falvation?

Mrs. H. I did not come hither to answer to questions of that fort.

D. Gov. Becaufe you will deny the thing.

Mrs. H. Ey, but that is to be proved first.

D. Gov. I will make it plain that you did fay that the ministers did preach a covenant of works.

Mrs. H. I deny that.

D. Gov. And that you faid they were not able minifters of the new testament, but Mr. Cotton only.

Mrs. H. If ever I fpake that I proved it by God's word. Court. Very well, very well.

Mrs. H. If one shall come unto me in private, and defire me feriously to tell them what I thought of such an one. I must either speak false or true in my answer.

D. Gov. Likewife I will prove this that you faid the golpel in the letter and words holds forth nothing but a covenant of works and that all that do not hold as you do are in a covenant of works.

Mrs. H. I deny this for if I should fo fay I should speak against my own judgment.

Mr. Endicot. I defire to fpeak feeing Mrs. Hutchinfon feems to lay fomething against them that are to witness against her.

Gover. Only I would add this. It is well differend to the court that Mrs. Hutchinfon can tell when to fpeak and when to hold her tongue. Upon the anfwering of a queftion which we defire her to tell her thoughts of fhe defires to be pardoned.

Mrs. H. It is one thing for me to come before a public magiftracy and there to fpeak what they would have me to fpeak and another when a man comes to me in a way of friendship privately there is difference in that.

Gov. What if the matter be all one?

Dylr.

Mr. Hugh Peters.* That which concerns us to fpeak unto as yet we are fparing in unlefs the court command us to fpeak, then we fhall anfwer to Mrs. Hutchinfon notwithstanding our brethren are very unwilling to anfwer.

Govern. This fpeech was not fpoken in a corner but in a public affembly, and though things were fpoken in private yet now coming to us, we are to deal with them as public.

Mr. Peters. We shall give you a fair account of what was faid and defire that we may not be thought to come as informers against the gentlewoman, but as it may be ferviceable for the country and our posterity to give you a brief account. This gentlewoman went under suspicion not only from her landing, that fhe was a woman not only difficult in her opinions, but also of an intemperate spirit. What was done at her landing I do not well remember, but affoon as Mr. Vane and our felves came this controverfy began yet it did reflect upon Mrs, Hutchinfon and fome of our brethren had dealt with her, and it fo fell out that fome of our ministry doth fuffer as if it were not according to the gospel and as if we taught a covenant of works instead of a covenant of grace. Upon thefe and the like we did address ourfelves to the teacher of that church, and the court then affembled being fenfible of thefe things, and this gentlewoman being as we understood a chief agent, our defire to the teacher was to tell us wherein the difference lay between him and us, for the fpring did then arife as we did conceive from this gentlewoman, and fo we told him. He faid that he thought it not according to God to commend this to' the magistrates but to take some other courfe, and fo going on in the difcourfe we thought it good to fend for this gentlewoman, and the willingly came, and at the very first we gave her notice that such reports there were that the did conceive our ministry to be different from the ministry of the gospel, and that we tanght taught a covenant of works, &c. and this was her table talk and therefore we defired her to clear herfelf and deal plainly. She was very tender at the first. Some of our brethren did defire to put this upon proof, and then her words upon that were. The fear of man is a fnare why thould I be afraid. These were her words. 1 did then take upon me to alk her this question. What difference do you conceive to be between your teacher and us? She did not request us that we should preferve her from danger or that we should be filent. Briefly, fhe told me there was a wide and a broad difference between our bröther Mr. Cotton and our felves. I defired to know the difference. She answered that he preaches the covenant of grace and you the covenant of works, and that you are not able ministers of the new testament and know no more than the apostles did before the refurrection of Christ. I did then put it to her, What do you conceive of fuch a brother? She answered he had not the feal of the fpirit. And other things we asked her but generally the frame of her course was this, that fhe did conceive that we were not able ministers of the gospel. And that day being past our brother Cotton was forry that the thould lay us under a covenant of works, and could have wished the had not done fo. The elders being there prefent we did charge them with her, and the teacher of the place faid they would fpeak further with her, and after fome time fhe anfwered that we were gone as far as the apoftles were before Chrift's afcenfion. And fince that we have gone with tears fome of us to her.

Miniller of Sa'em, afterwards famous in England.

Mrs. H. If our paftor would fhew his writings you fhould fee what I faid, and that many things are not fo as is reported.

Mr. Wilfon.* Sifter Hutchinfon, for the writings you fpeak of I have them not, and this I must fay I did not write down all that was faid and did pass betwixt one and another, yet I say what is written I will avouch.

Dep. Gov. I defire that the other elders will fay what Mr. Peters hath faid.

Mr. Weld.

Mr. Weld.* Being defired by the honoured court. that which our brother Peters hath fpoken was the truth and things were fpoken as he hath related and the occafion of calling this fifter and the paffages that were there among us. And myfelf alking why fhe did caft fuch afperfions upon the ministers of the country though we were poor finful men and for our felves we cared not but for the precious doctrine we held forth we could not but grieve to hear that fo blafphemed. She at that time was fparing in her speech. I need not repeat the things they have been truly related. She faid the fear of man is a fnare and therefore I will speak freely and she spake her judgment and mind freely as was before related, that Mr. Cotton did preach a covenant of grace and we a covenant of works. And this I remember the faid we could not preach a covenant of grace becaufe we were not fealed, and we were not able ministers of the new testament no more than were the disciples before the refurrection of Chrift.

Mr. Phillips,+ For my own part I have had little to do in these things only at that time I was there and yet not being privy to the ground of that which our brother Peters hath mentioned but they procuring me to go along with them telling me that they were to deal with her; at first she was unwilling to answer but at length she faid there was a great deal of difference between Mr. Cotton and we. Upon this Mr. Cotton did fay that he could have wished that she had not put that in, Being asked of particulars she did instance in Mr. Shephard that he did not preach a covenant of grace clearly and she instanced our brother Weld. Then I asked her of myfelf (being fhe fpake rafhly of them all) becaufe fhe never heard me at all. She likewife faid that we were not able ministers of the new testament and her reason was becaufe we were not fealed.

Mr.

Minister of Roxbury. He wrote the history of antinomianism. † Minister of Watertown.

Mr. Simmes.* For my own part being called to fpeak in this cafe to discharge the relation wherein I stand to the commonwealth and that which I fland in unto God. I shall speak briefly. For my acquaintance with this perfon I had none in our native country, only I had occafion to be in her company once or twice before I came, where I did perceive that fhe did flight the ministers of the word of God. But I came along with her in the fhip, and it fo fell out that we were in the great cabin together and therein did agree with the labours of Mr. Lothrop and myfelf, only there was a fecret opposition to things delivered. The main thing that was then in hand was about the evidencing of a good eftate, and among the reft about that place in John concerning the love of the brethren. That which I took notice of was the corruptness and narrowness of her opinions, which I doubt not but I may call them fo, but fhe faid, when fhe came to Boston there would be something more seen than I faid, for fuch speeches were cast about and abused as that of our faviour, I have many things to fay but you cannot bear them now. And being come and the defiring to be admitted a member, I was defired to be there, and then Mr. Cotton did give me full fatisfaction in the things then in question. And for things which have been here spoken, as far as I can remember they are the truth, and when I asked her what she thought of me, fhe faid alas you know my mind long ago, yet I do not think myfelf disparaged by her testimony and I would not trouble the court, only this one thing I shall put in, that Mr. Dudley and Mr. Haines were not wanting in the caufe after I had given notice of her.

Mr. Wilfon. I defire you would give me leave to fpeak this word becaufe of what has been faid concerning her entrance into the church. There was fome difficulty made, but in her anfwers fhe gave full fatisfaction to our teacher and myfelf, and for point of evidencing juftification by fanctification fhe did not deny, but only juftification must be first. Our teacher told her then then that if the was of that mind the would take away the fcruple; for we thought that matter, for point of order we did not greatly fland upon, becaufe we hoped the would hold with us in that truth as well as the other:

* Minister of Charlestown,

Mr. Shephard.* I am loth to fpeak in this affembly concerning this gentlewoman in question, but I can do no lefs than speak what my confeience speaks unto me. For perfonal reproaches I take it a man's wildom to conceal. Concerning the reproaches of the ministry of our's there hath been many in the country, and this hath been my thoughts of that. Let men speak what they will not only against perfons but against ministry, let that pass, but let us strive to speak to the consciences of men, knowing that if we had the truth with us we shall not need to approve our words by our practice and our min ftry to the hearts of the people, and they should speak for us and therefore I have fatisfied myself and the brethren with that. Now for that which concerns this gentlewoman at this time I do not well remember every particular, only this I do remember that the end of our meeting was to fatisfy ourfelves in fome points. Among the reft Mrs. Hutchinfon was defired to speak her thoughts concerning the ministers of the Bay. Now I remember that the faid that we were not able ministers of the new teftament. I followed her with particulars, fhe inftanced myfelf as being at the lecture and hearing me preach-when as I gave fome means whereby a christian might come to the affurance of God's love. She inftanced that I was not fealed. I faid why did she fay fo. She faid because you put love for an evidence. Now I am fure she was in an error in this speech for if affurance be an holy estate then I am fure there are not graces wanting to evidence it.

Mr. Eliot. † I am loth to fpend time therefore I shall confent to what hath been faid. Our brethren did intreat us to write and a few things I did write the substrate of which hath been here spoken and I have it in writing therefore I do avouch it.

* Minister of Cambridge.

+ Minister of Roxbury.

Mr.

Mr. Shephard. I defire to fpeak this word, it may be but a flip of her tongue, and I hope fhe will be forry for it, and then we fhall be glad of it.

Dep. Gov. I called these witneffes and you deny them. You see they have proved this and you deny this, but it is clear. You faid they preached a covenant of works and that they were not able ministers of the new testament; now there are two other things that you did affirm which were that the scriptures in the letter of them held forth nothing but a covenant of works and likewise that those that were under a covenant of works cannot be faved.

Mrs. H. Prove that I faid fo. (Gov.) Did you fay fo? Mrs. H. No Sir it is your conclusion.

D. Gov. What do 1 do charging of you if you deny what is fo fully proved.

Gov. Here are fix undeniable ministers who fay it is true and yet you deny that you did fay that they did preach a covenant of works and that they were not able ministers of the gospel, and it appears plainly that you have spoken it, and whereas you say that it was drawn from you in a way of friendship, you did profess then that it was out of conficience that you spake and faid The sear of man is a star wherefore should. I be assorid. I will speak plainly and freely.

Mrs. H. That I abfolutely deny, for the first question was thus answered by me to them. They thought that I did conceive there was a difference between them and Mr. Cotton. At the first I was somewhat referved, then faid Mr.Peters I pray answer the question directly as fully and as plainly as you defire we should tell you our minds. Mrs. Hutchinfon we come for plain dealing and telling you our hearts. Then I faid I would deal as plainly as I could, and whereas they fay I faid they were under a covenant of works and in the state of the apostles why these two speeches cross one another. I might fay they might preach a covenant of works as did the apostles, but to preach a covenant of works and to be under a covenant of works is another busines. Dep. Dep. Gov. There have been fix witneffes to prove this and yet you deny it.

Mrs. H. I deny that these were the first words that were spoken.

Gov. You make the cafe worfe, for you clearly fhew that the ground of your opening your mind was not to fatisfy them but to fatisfy your own conficience.

Mr. Peters. We do not defire to be fo narrow to the court and the gentlewoman about times and feafons, whether first or after, but faid it was.

Dep. Gov. For that other thing I mentioned for the letter of the fcripture that it held forth nothing but a covenant of works, and for the latter that we are in a flate of damnation, being under a covenant of works, or to that effect, these two things you alfo deny. Now the cafe flands thus. About three quarters of a year ago I heard of it, and speaking of it there came one to me who is not here, but will affirm it if need be, as he did to me that he did hear you fay in so many words. He fet it down under his hand and I can bring it forth when the court pleases. His name is subscribed to both these things, and upon my peril be it if I bring you not in the paper and bring the minister (meaning Mr. Ward) to be deposed.

Gov. What fay you to this, though nothing be directly proved yet you hear it may be.

Mrs. H. I acknowledge using the words of the apoftle to the Corinthians unto him, that they that were ministers of the letter and not the spirit did preach a covenant of works. Upon his faying there was no such foripture, then I setched the bible and shewed him this place 2 Cor. iii. 6. He faid that was the letter of the law. No faid I it is the letter of the gospel.

Gov. You have fpoken this more than once then.

Mrs. H. Then upon further difcourse about proving a good effate and holding it out by the manifestation of the spirit he did acknowledge that to be the nearest way, but yet said he, will you not acknowledge that which which we hold forth to be a way too wherein we may have hope; no truly if that be a way it is a way to hell.

496

Gov. Mrs. Hutchinfon, the court you fee hath laboured to bring you to acknowledge the error of your way that fo you might be reduced, the time now grows late, we fhall therefore give you a little more time to confider of it and therefore defire that you attend the court again in the morning.

- The next morning.

Gov. We proceeded the last night as far as we could in hearing of this caufe of Mrs. Hutchinfon. There were divers things laid to her charge, her ordinary meetings about religious exercifes, her speeches in derogation of the ministers among us, and the weakning of the hands and hearts of the people towards them. Here was fufficient proof made of that which the was accufed of in that point concerning the ministers and their ministry. as that they did preach a covenant of works when others did preach a covenant of grace, and that they were not able ministers of the new testament, and that they had not the feal of the fpirit, and this was fpoken not as was pretended out of private conference, but out of confcience and warrant from fcripture alledged the fear of man is a fnare and feeing God had given her a calling to it fhe would freely fpeak. Some other fpeeches fhe ufed, as that the letter of the fcripture held forth a covenant of works, and this is offered to be proved by probable grounds. If there be any thing elfe that the court hath to fay they may fpeak.

Mrs. H. The ministers come in their own cause. Now the Lord hath faid that an oath is the end of all controversy; though there be a sufficient number of witness yet they are not according to the word, therefore I desire they may speak upon oath. Gov. Well, it is in the liberty of the court whether

Gov. Well, it is in the liberty of the court whether they will have an oath or no and it is not in this cafe as in cafe of a jury. If they be fatisfied they have fufficient matter to proceed.

VOL. II.

Mrs.

Mrs. H. I have fince I went home perused fome notes out of what Mr. Wilson did then write and I find things not to be as hath been alledged.

Gov. Where are the writings?

Mrs. H. I have them not, it may be Mr. Wilfon hath.

Gov. What are the inftructions that you can give, Mr. Wilfon?

Mr. Wilfon. I do fay that Mr. Vane defired me to write the difcourfe out and whether it be in his own hands or in fome body's elfe I know not. For my own copy it is fomewhat imperfect, but I could make it perfect with a little pains.

Gov. For that which you alledge as an exception against the elders it is vain and untrue, for they are no profecutors in this cause but are called to witness in the cause.

Mr. H. But they are witneffes of their own caufe.

Gov. It is not their caufe but the caufe of the whole country and they were unwilling that it should come forth, but that it was the glory and honour of God.

Mrs. H. But it being the Lord's ordinance that an oath should be the end of all strife, therefore they are to deliver what they do upon oath.

Mr. Bradstreet. Mrs. Hutchinson, these are but circumstances and adjuncts to the cause, admit they should mistake you in your speeches you would make them to fin if you urge them to swear.

Mrs. H. That is not the thing. If they accuse me I defire it may be upon oath.

Gov. If the court be not fatisfied they may have an oath.

Mr. Nowel.* I fhould think it convenient that the country alfo fhould be fatisfied becaufe that I do hear it affirmed, that things which were fpoken in private are carried abroad to the publick and thereupon they do undervalue the minifters of congregations.

Mr. Brown. + I defire to fpeak. If I mistake not an oath is of a high nature, and it is not to be taken but in a controverfy, and for my part I am afraid of an oath and fear that we shall take God's name in vain, for we may take the witness of these men without an oath.

* An affisiant.

† A deputy for Watertown and a ruling elder there.

3

Mr. Endicot. I think the ministers are fo well known unto us, that we need not take an oath of them, but indeed an oath is the end of all strife.

Mrs. H. There are fome that will take their oaths to the contrary.

Mr. Endicot. Then it shall go under the name of a controversy, therefore we defire to see the notes and those also that will swear.

Gov. Let those that are not fatisfied in the court speak. Many fay.—We are not fatisfied.

Gov. I would fpeak this to Mrs. Hutchinfon: If the minifters shall take an oath will you fit down fatisfied?

Mrs. H. I can't be notwithstanding oaths fatisfied against my own confcience.

Mr. Stoughton.* I am fully fatisfied with this that the ministers do speak the truth but now in regard of censure I dare not hold up my hand to that, because it is a course of justice, and I cannot fatisfy myself to proceed so far in a way of justice, and therefore I should defire an oath in this as in all other things. I do but speak to prevent offence if I should not hold up my hand at the censure unless there be an oath given.

Mr. Peters. We are ready to fwear if we fee a way of God in it.

Here was a parley between the deputy governor and Mr. Stoughton about the oath.

Mr. Endicot. If they will not be fatisfied with a tellimony an oath will be in vain.

Mr. Stoughton. I am perfuaded that Mrs. Hutchinfon and many other godly-minded people will be fatisfied without an oath.

Mrs. H. An oath Sir is an end of all strife and it is God's ordinance.

Mr. Endicot. A fign it is what refpect flie hath to their words, and further, pray fee your argument, you will have the words that were written and yet Mr. Wilfon faith he writ not all, and now you will not believe all these godly ministers without an oath.

K k z

* An allistant.

13:19

Mrs. H. Mr. Wilfon did affirm that which he gave in to the governor that then was to be true. (Some reply) But not all the truth.

Mr. Wilfon. I did fay fo far as I did take them they were true.

Mr. Harlakenden.* I would have the fpectators take notice that the court doth not fuspect the evidence that is given in, though we fee that whatever evidence is brought in will not fatisfy, for they are refolved upon the thing and therefore I think you will not be unwilling to give your oaths.

Gov. I fee no neceffity of an oath in this thing feeing it is true and the substance of the matter confirmed by divers, yet that all may be fatisfied, if the elders will take an oath they shall have it given them.

Dep. Gov. Let us join the things together that Mrs. Hutchinfon may fee what they have their oaths for.

Mrs. H. I will prove by what Mr. Wilfon hath written that they never heard me fay fuch a thing.

Mr.Sims. We defire to have the paper and have it read.

Mr. Harlakenden. I am perfuaded that is the truththat the elders do fay and therefore I do not fee it neceffary now to call them to oath.

Gov. We cannot charge any thing of untruth upon them.

Mr. Harlakenden. Besides, Mrs. Hutchinson doth fay that they are not able ministers of the new testament.

Mrs. H. They need not fwear to that.

Dep. Gov. Will you confess it then.

Mis. H. I will not deny it nor fay it. Dep. Gov. You must do one.

Mrs. H. After that they have taken an oath, I will make good what I fay.

Gov. Let us flate the cafe and then we may know what to do. That which is laid to Mrs. Hutchinfon's charge

in the

charge is this, that fhe hath traduced the magistrates and ministers of this jurifdiction, that the hath faid the ministers preached a covenant of works and Mr. Cotton a covenant of grace, and that they were not able ministers of the gospel, and she excuses it that the made it a private conference and with a promise of secrecy, &c. now this is charged upon her, and they therefore fent for her second the made it her table talk, and then she faid the fear of man was a snare and therefore the would not be affeared of them.

Mrs. H. This that your felf hath fpoken, I defire that they may take their oaths upon.

Gov. That that we should put the reverend elders unto is this that they would deliver upon oath that which they can remember themselves.

Mr. Shepard. I know no reafon of the oath but the importunity of this gentlewoman.

Mr. Endicot, You lifted up your eyes as if you took God to witnefs that you came to entrap none and yet you will have them fwear.

Mr. Harlakenden, Put any paffage unto them and fee what they fay.

Mrs. H. They fay I faid the fear of man is a fnare, why fhould I be afraid. When I came unto them, they urging many things unto me and I being backward to anfwer at first, at length this foripture came into my mind 29th Prov. 15. The fear of man bringeth a fnare, but whoso putteth his trust in the Lord shall be fafe.

Mr. Harlakenden. This is not an effential thing.

Gov. I remember his testimony was this.

Mrs. H. Ey, that was the thing that I do deny for they were my words and they were not fpoken at the. first as they do alledge.

Mr. Peters. We cannot tell what was first or last, we fuppose that an oath is an end of all strife and we are tender of it, yet this is the main thing against her that the charged us to be unable ministers of the gospel and to preach a covenant of works.

Kk 3

Gover.

Gover. You do understand the thing, that thecourt is clear for we are all fatisfied that it is truth but becaufe we would take away all fcruples, we defire that you' would fatisfy the spectators by your oath.

Mr. Bifhop.* I defire to know before they be put to oath whether their testimony be of validity.

Dep. Gov. What do you mean to trouble the court with fuch questions. Mark what a flourish Mrs. Hutchinfon puts upon the bufinefs that fhe had witneffes to difprove what was faid and here is no man to bear witnefs.

Mrs.H. If you will not call them in that is nothing tome.

Mr. Eliot. We defire to know of her and her witneffes what they deny and then we shall speak upon oath. I know nothing we have spoken of but we may swear to.

Mr. Sims. Ey, and more than we have fpoken to.

Mr. Stoughton. I would gladly that an oath fhould be given that fo the perfon to be condemned should be fatisfied in her confcience and I would fay the fame for my own confcience if I should join in the cenfure -Two or three lines in the MS are defaced and not legible.

Mr. Coggeshall. + I defire to speak a word - It is defired that the elders would confer with Mr. Cotton before they fwear.

Govern, Shall we not believe fo many godly elders in a caufe wherein we know the mind of the party without their teftimony?

Mr. Endicot to 71 will tell you what I fay. I think Mr. Coggeshall. Sthat this carriage of your's tends to further casting dirt upon the face of the judges.

Mr. Harlakenden. Her carriage doth the fame for fhe doth not object any effential thing, but fhe goes upon circumstances and yet would have them fworn.

Mrs. H. This I would fay unto them. Forafmuch as it was affirmed by the deputy that he would bring proof of these things, and the elders they bring proof in their own cause, therefore I defire that particular witneffes be for these things that they do speak. GOF.

* One of the deputies or reprefentatives,

- One of the deputies for Bolton,

Gov. The elders do know what an oath is and as it is an ordinance of God fo it should be used.

Mrs. H. That is the thing I defire and because the deputy spake of witnesses I have them here present.

Mr. Colborn.* We defire that our teacher may be called to hear what is faid.—Upon this Mr. Cotton came and fat down by Mrs. Hutchinfon.

Mr. Endicot. This would cast fome blame upon the ministers—Well, but whatfoever he will or can fay we will believe the ministers.

Mr. Eliot. We defire to fee light why we should Mr Shepard. S take an oath.

Mr. Stoughton. Why it is an end of all strife and I think you ought to fwear and put an end to the matter.

Mr. Peters. Our oath is not to fatisfy Mrs. Hutchinion but the court.

Mr. Endicot. The affembly will be fatisfied by it.

Dep. Gov. If the country will not be fatisfied you must fwear.

Mr. Shepard. I conceive the country doth not requireit.

Dep. Gov. Let her witneffes be called.

Gov. Who be they?

Mrs. H. Mr. Leveret and our teacher and Mr. Coggeshall.

Gov. Mr. Coggeshall was not prefent.

Mr. Coggeshall. Yes but I was, only I defired to be filent till I should be called.

Gov. Will you Mr. Coggeshall fay that she did not fay fo?

Mr. Coggeshall. Yes I dare fay that she did not fay all that which they lay against her.

Mr. Peters. How dare you look into the court to fay fuch a word?

Mr. Coggeshall. Mr. Peters takes upon him to forbid me. I shall be filent.

Mr. Stoughton. Ey, but fhe intended this that they fay.

Gov. Well, Mr. Leveret, what were the words? I pray fpeak.

Kk4

A deputy for Bolton and a ruling elder in the church.

Mr.

Mr. Leveret.* To my best remembrance when the elders did fend for her, Mr. Peters did with much vehemency and intreaty urge her to tell what difference there was between Mr. Cotton and them, and upon his urging of her she faid. The fear of man is a snare, but they that trust upon the Lord shall be faste. And being asked wherein the difference was, she answered that they did not preach a covenant of grace so clearly as Mr. Cotton did, and she gave this reason of it because that as the apostles were for a time without the spirit fo until they had received the witness of the spirit they could not preach a covenant of grace so the spirit they

Gov. Don't you remember that the faid they were not able ministers of the new testament?

Mrs. H. Mr. Weld and I had an hour's difcourfe at the window and then I fpake that, if I fpake it.

Mr. Weld. Will you affirm that in the court? Did not I fay unto you, Mrs. Hutchinfon, before the elders. When I produced the thing, you then called for proof. Was not my answer to you, leave it there, and if I cannot prove it you shall be blamelefs?

Mrs. H. This I remember I fpake, but do not you remember that I came afterwards to the window when you was writing and there fpake unto you.

Mr.Weld. No truly. (Mrs. H.) But I do very well. Gov. Mr. Cotton, the court defires that you declare what you do remember of the conference which was at that time and is now in quefition.

Mr. Cotton.[†] I did not think I fhould be called to bear witnefs in this caufe and therefore did not labour to call to remembrance what was done; but the greateft paffage that took imprefion upon me was to this purpofe. The elders fpake that they had heard that fhe had fpoken fome condemning words of their miniftry, and among other things they did first pray her to answer, wherein fhe thought their ministry did differ from mine, how the comparison sprang I am ignorant, but forry I

W25

* A ruling elder in Boston church. > Teacher of Boston church. was that any comparison should be between me and my brethren and uncomfortable it was, fhe told them to this purpose that they did not hold forth a covenant of grace as I did, but wherein did we differ ? why fhe faid that they did not hold forth the feal of the fpirit as he doth. Where is the difference there ? fay they, why faith fhe fpeaking to one or other of them, I know not to whom. You preach of the feal of the fpirit upon a work and he upon free grace without a work or without respect to a work, he preaches the feal of the spirit upon free, grace and you upon a work. I told her I was very forry that the put comparisons between my ministry and their's, for fhe had faid more than I could myfelf, and rather I had that fhe had put us in fellowship with them and not have made that difcrepancy. She faid, the found the difference. Upon that there grew fome fpeeches upon the thing and I do remember I inftanced to them the ftory of Thomas Bilney in the book of martyrs how freely the fpirit witneffed unto him without any refpect unto a work as himfelf profeffes. Now upon this other speeches did grow. If you put me in mind of any thing I shall speak it, but this was the sum of the difference, nor did it feem to be fo ill taken as, it is and our brethren did fay alfo that they would not fo eafily believe reports as they had done and withall mentioned that they would speak no more of it, some of them did; and afterwards fome of them did fay they were less fatisfied than before. And I must fay that I did not find her faying they were under a covenant of works, nor that she faid they did preach a covenant of works. Gov. You fay you do not remember, but can you fay fhe did not speak so-Here two lines again defaced.

Mr. Cotton. I do remember that fhe looked at them as the apoftles before the afcenfion.

Mr. Peters. I humbly defire to remember our reverence teacher. May it pleafe you to remember how this came in. Whether do you not remember that fhe faid we were not fealed with the fpirit of grace, therefore could not not preach a covenant of grace, and the faid further you may do it in your judgment but not in experience, but the fpake plump that we were not fealed.

Mr. Cotton. You do put me in remembrance that it was afked her why cannot we preach a covenant of grace? Why, faith fhe, becaufe you can preach no more than you know, or to that purpofe, fhe fpake. Now that fhe faid you could not preach a covenant of grace I do not remember fuch a thing. I remember well that fhe faid you were not fealed with the feal of the fpirit.

Mr. Peters. There was a double feal found out that day which never was.

Mr. Cotton. 1 know very well that fhe took the feal of the fpirit in that fenfe for the full affurance of God's favour by the holy ghost, and now that place in the Ephesians doth hold out that feal.

Mr. Peters. So that was the ground of our difcourfe concerning the great feal and the little feal.

Mr. Cotton. To that purpose I remember fomebody speaking of the difference of the witness of the spirit and the seal of the spirit, some to put a distinction called it the broad seal and the little seal. Our brother Wheelwright answered if you will have it so be it so.

Mrs. H. Mr. Ward faid that.

Some three or four of the ministers, Mr. Wheelwright faid it.

Mr. Cotton, No, it was not brother Wheelwright's speech but one of your own expressions, and as 1 remember it was Mr. Ward.

Mr. Peters. - - - - - - -

Mr. Cotton. Under favour I do not remember that,

Mr. Peters. Therefore her anfwer clears it in your judgment but not in your experience.

Mrs. H. My name is precious and you do affirm a thing which I utterly deny.

D. Gov. You fhould have brought the book with you. Mr. Now II. The witneffes do not answer that which you require.

Goy.

Gov. I do not fee that we need their testimony any further. Mr. Cotton hath expressed what he remembred, and what took impression upon him, and so I think the other elders also did remember that which took impression upon them.

Mr. Weld. I then faid to Mrs. Hutchinfon when it was come to this iffue, why did you let us go thus long and never tell us of it?

Gov. I should wonder why the elders should move the elders of our congregation to have dealt with her if they faw not fome cause.

Mr. Cotton. Brother Weld and brother Shepard, I did then clear myfelf unto you that I understood her speech in expressing herself to you that you did hold forth some matter in your preaching that was not pertinent to the seal of the spirit—Two lines defaced.

Dep. Gov. They affirm that Mrs. Hutchinson did fay they were not able ministers of the new testament.

Mr. Cotton. I do not remember it.

Mrs. H. If you pleafe to give me leave I shall give you the ground of what I know to be true. Being much troubled to fee the falfeness of the constitution of the church of England, I had like to have turned feparatift; whereupon I kept a day of folemn humiliation and pondering of the thing; this fcripture was brought unto me-he that denies Jesus Christ to be come in the flesh is antichrist-this I confidered of and in confidering found that the papifts did not deny him to be come in the flesh, nor we did not deny him-who then was autichrift? Was the Turk antichrift only? The Lord knows that I could not open fcripture; he must by his prophetical office open it unto me. So after that being unfatisfied in the thing, the Lord was pleafed to bring this scripture out of the Hebrews. He that denies the restament denies the testator, and in this did open unto me and give me to fee that those which did not teach the new covenant had the fpirit of antichrift, and upon this he did difcover the ministry unto me and ever fince,

1

I blefs the Lord, he hath let me fee which was the clear miniftry and which the wrong. Since that time I confefs I have been more choice and he hath let me to diftinguish between the voice of my beloved and the voice of Moses, the voice of John Baptist and the voice of antichrist, for all those voices are spoken of in scripture. Now if you do condemn me for speaking what in my conficience I know to be truth I must commit myself unto the Lord.

Mr. Nowell. How do you know that that was the fpirit?

Mrs. H. How did Abraham know that it was God that bid him offer his fon, being a breach of the fixth commandment?

Dep. Gov. By an immediate voice.

Mrs. H. So to me by an immediate revelation.

Dep. Gov. How! an immediate revelation.

Mrs. H. By the voice of his own fpirit to my foul. I will give you another fcripture, Jer. 46. 27, 28—out of which the Lord fhewed me what he would do for me and the reft of his fervants.—But after he was pleafed to reveal himfelf to me I did prefently like Abraham run to Hagar. And after that he did let me fee the atheifm of my own heart, for which I begged of the Lord that it might not remain in my heart, and being thus, he did fhew me this (a twelvemonth after) which I told you of before. Ever fince that time I have been confident of what he hath revealed unto me.

Obliterated. } another place out of Daniel chap.7. and he and for us all, wherein he fhewed me the fitting of the judgment and the ftanding of all high and low before the Lord and how thrones and kingdoms were caft down before him. When our teacher came to New-England it was a great trouble unto me, my brother Wheelwright being put by alfo. I was then much troubled concerning the miniftry under which I lived, and then that place in the 30th of Ifaiah was brought to my mind. Though the Lord give thee bread of adverfity.

APPENDIX.

adverfity and water of affliction yet shall not thy teachers be removed into corners any more, but thine eyes shall fee thy teachers. The Lord giving me this promife and they being gone there was none then left that I was able to hear, and I could not be at reft but I must come hither. Yet that place of Isaiah did much follow me, though the Lord give thee the bread of advertity and water of affliction. This place lying I fay upon me then this place in Daniel was brought unto me and did shew me that though I should meet with affliction yet I am the fame God that delivered Daniel out of the lion's den, I will also deliver thee. ----- Therefore I defire you to look to it, for you fee this fcripture ful-filled this day and therefore I defire you that as you tender the Lord and the church and commonwealth to confider and look what you do. You have power over my body but the Lord Jefus hath power over my body and foul, and affure yourfelves thus much, you do as much as in you lies to put the Lord Jefus Chrift from you, and if you go on in this courfe you begin you will bring a curfe upon you and your posterity, and the mouth of the Lord hath fpoken it.

Dep. Gov. What is the fcripture fhe brings?

Mr. Stoughton. Behold I turn away from you.

Mrs. H. But now having feen him which is invisible I fear not what man can do unto me.

Gov. Daniel was delivered by miracle do you think to be deliver'd fo too?

Mrs. H. I do here speak it before the court. I look that the Lord should deliver me by his providence.

Mr. Harlakenden. I may read foripture and the most glorious hypocrite may read them and yet go down to hell. Mrs. H. It may be fo.

Mr. Bartholomew.* 1 would remember one word to Mrs. Hutchinfon among many others. She knowing that I did know her opinions, being fhe was at my houfe at London, fhe was afraid I conceive or loth to impart herfelf unto me, but when the came within fight of Bofton

* A deputy I fuppole for Salem,

Bofton and looking upon the meannels of the place, I conceive, the uttered thele words, if the had not a fure word that England thould be deftroyed her heart would thake. Now it feemed to me at that time very ftrange that the thould fay fo.

Mrs. H. I do not remember that I looked upon the meannefs of the place nor did it difcourage me, becaufe I knew the bounds of my habitation were determined, &c.

Mr. Bartholomew. I speak as a member of the court. I fear that her revelations will deceive.

Gov. Have you heard of any of her revelations ?

Mr. Barthol. For my own part I am forry to fee her now here and I have nothing against her but what I faid was to discover what manner of spirit Mrs. Hutchinson is of; only I remember as we were once going through Paul's church yard she then was very inquisitive after revelations and faid that she had never had any great thing done about her but it was revealed to her beforehand. (Mrs. H.) I say the same thing again.

Mr. Bartholomew. And alfo that the faid that the was come to New-England but for Mr. Cotton's fake. As for Mr. Hooker (as I remember) the faid the liked not his fpirit, only the fpake of a fermon of his in the low countries wherein he faid thus—it was revealed to me yefterday that England thould be deftroyed. She took notice of that paffage and it was very acceptable with her

Mr. Cotton. One thing let me intreat you to remember. Mr. Bartholomew, that you never spake any thing to me.

Mr. Barth. No Sir, I never spake of it to you and therefore I defire to clear Mr. Cotton.

Gov. There needs no more of that.

Mr. Barth. Only I remember her eldest daughter faid in the ship that she had a revelation that a young man in the ship should be faved, but he must walk in the ways of her mother.

Mr. Sims. I could fay fomething to that purpofe, for fhe faid—then what would you fay if we fhould be at New-England within these three weeks, and I reproved her vehemently for it. Mr. Eliot Mr. Eliot. That fpeech of Mr. Hooker's which they alledge is against his mind and judgment. +

Mr. Sims. I would intreat Mrs. Hutchinfon to remember, that the humble he will teach—I have fpoken before of it and therefore I will leave the place with her and do defire her to confider of many expressions that she hath spoken to her husband, but I will not enlarge myself.

Mr. Endicot. I would have a word or two with leave of that which hath thus far been revealed to the court. I have heard of many revelations of Mr. Hutchinfon's, but they were reports, but Mrs. Hutchinfon I fee doth maintain fome by this difcourfe, and I think it is a fpecial providence of God to hear what fhe hath faid. Now there is a revelation you fee which fhe doth expect as a miracle. She faith fhe now fuffers and let us do what we will fhe. fhall be delivered by a miracle. I hope the court takes notice of the vanity of it and heat of her fpirit. Now becaufe her reverend teacher is here I fhould defire that he would pleafe to fpeak freely whether he doth condefcend to fuch fpeeches or revelations as have been here fpoken of, and he will give a great deal of content.

Mr. Cotton. May it pleafe you Sir. There are two forts of revelations, there are [defaced] or against the word besides scripture both which

[defaced] taffical and tending to danger more ways than one _____ there is another fort which the apoftle prays the believing Ephefians may be made partakers of, and those are fuch as are breathed by the spirit of God and are never dispensed but in a word of God and according to a word of God, and though the word revelation be rare in common speech and we make it uncouth in our ordinary expressions, yet notwithstanding, being understood in the foripture fense I think they are not only lawful but such as christians may receive and God bear witness to it in his word, and usually he doth

[†] Mr. Eliot was miltaken. The paffage from his fermon is in print and Mr. Hooker avowed it afterwards at Hartford. Magn. B. iii. P.62. doth express it in the ministry of the word and doth accompany it by his spirit, or else it is in the reading of the word in some chapter or verse and whenever it comes it comes flying upon the wings of the spirit.

Mr. Endicot. You give me fatisfaction in the thing and therefore I defire you to give your judgment of Mrs. Hutchinfon; what fhe hath faid you hear and all the circumftances thereof.

Mr. Cotton. I would demand whether by a miracle fhe doth mean a work above nature or by fome wonderful providence for that is called a miracle often in the pfalms.

Mrs. H. I defire to fpeak to our teacher. You know Sir what he doth declare though he doth not know himfelf [fomething wanting.]

now either of these ways or at this present time it shall be done, yet I would not have the court so to understand me that he will deliver me now even at this present time.

Dep. Gov. I defire Mr. Cotton to tell us whether you do approve of Mrs. Hutchinfon's revelations as the hath laid them down.

Mr. Cotton. I know not whether I do understand her, but this I fay, if she doth expect a deliverance in a way of providence—then I cannot deny it.

Dep. Gov. No Sir we did not speak of that.

Mr. Cotton. If it be by way of miracle then I would fuspect it.

Dep.Gov. Do you believe that her revelations are true?

Mr. Cotton. That fhe may have fome fpecial providence of God to help her is a thing that I cannot bear witnefs against.

Dep. Gov. Good Sir I do ask whether this revelation be of God or no?

Mr. Cotton. I fhould defire to know whether the fentence of the court will bring her to any calamity, and then I would know of her whether fhe expects to be delivered from that calamity by a miracle or a providence of God. Mrs. H. By a providence of God I fay I expect to be delivered from fome calamity that shall come to me.

Gover. The cafe is altered and will not ftand with us now, but I fee a marvellous providence of God to bring things to this pafs that they are. We have been hearkening about the trial of this thing and now the mercy of God by a providence hath anfwered our defires and made her to lay open her felf and the ground of all thefe diffurbances to be by revelations; for we receive no fuch made out of the ministry of the word

and fo one feripture after another, but all this whild there is no use of the ministry of the word nor of any clear call of God by his word, but the ground work of her revelations is the immediate revelation of the spirit and not by the ministry of the word, and that is the means by which she hath very much abused the country that they shall look for revelations and are not bound to the ministry of the word, but God will teach them by immediate revelations and this hath been the ground of all these tumults and troubles, and I would that those were all cut off from us that trouble us, for this is the thing that hath been the root of all the mischief.

Court. We all confent with you.

Gov. Ey it is the most desperate enthusias in the world, for nothing but a word comes to her mind and then an application is made which is nothing to the purpose, and this is her revelations when as it is impossible but that the word and spirit should speak the fame thing.

Mr. Endicot: I fpeak in reference to Mr. Cotton. I am tender of you Sit and there lies much upon you in this particular, for the anfwer of Mr. Cotton doth not free him from that way which his last anfwer did bring upon him, therefore I befeech you that you'd be pleafed to speak a word to that which Mrs. Hutchinfon hath spoken of her revelations as you have heard the manner of it. Whether do you witness for her or against her. Yoz. II. L 1 Mr. Cotton, Mr. Cotton. This is that I faid Sir, and my answer is plain that if the doth look for deliverance from the hand of God by his providence, and the revelation be in a word or according to a word, that I cannot deny.

Mr. Endicot. You give me fatisfaction.

Dep. Gov. No, no, he gives me none at all.

Mr. Cotton. But if it be in a way of miracle or a revelation without the word that I do not affent to, but look at it as a delution, and I think to doth the too as I understand her.

Dep. Gov. Sir, you weary me and do not fatisfy me.

Mr. Cotton. I pray Sir give me leave to express my felf. In that sense that the speaks I dare not bear witness against it.

Mr. Nowell. I think it is a devilish delusion.

Gover. Of all the revelations that ever I read of 1 never read the like ground laid as is for this. The Enthuliasts and Anabaptists had never the like.

Mr. Cotton. You know Sir, that their revelations broach new matters of faith and doctrine.

Gover. So do thefe and what may they breed more if they be let alone. I do acknowledge that there are fuch revelations as do concur with the word but there hath not been any of this nature.

Dep. Gov. I never faw fuch revelations as thefe among the Anabaptifts, therefore am forry that Mr. Cotton flould fland to justify her.

Mr. Peters. I can fay the fame and this runs to enthufiafm, and I think that is very difputable which out brother Cotton hath fpoken [wanting] an immediate promife that he will deliver them [wanting] in a day of trouble. Gover. It overthrows all.

Dep. Gov. These diffurbances that have come among the Germans have been all grounded upon revelations, and fo they that have vented them have stirred up their hearers to take up arms against their prince and to cut the throats one of another, and these have been the fruits fruits of them, and whether the devil may infpire the fame into their hearts here I know not, for I am fully perfuaded that Mrs. Hutchinfon is deluded by the devil, becaufe the fpirit of God fpeaks truth in all his fervants.

Gov. I am perfuaded that the revelation fhe brings forth is delution.

All the court but fome two or three ministers cry out we all believe it—we all believe it.

Mr. Endicot. I fuppose all the world may see where the foundation of all these troubles among us lies.

Mr. Eliot. I fay there is an expectation of things promifed, but to have a particular revelation of things that fhall fall out; there is no fuch thing in the fcripture.

Gov. We will not limit the word of God.

Mr.Collicut.* It is a great burden to us that we differ from Mr. Cotton and that he fhould justify these revelations. I would intreat him to answer concerning that about the destruction of England.

Gov. Mr. Cotton is not called to answer to any thing but we are to deal with the party here standing before us:

Mr. Bartholomew. My wife hath faid that Mr. Wheelwright was not acquainted with this way until that the imparted it unto him.

Mr. Brown. Inafinuch as I am called to fpeak, I would therefore fpeak the mind of our brethren. Though we had fufficient ground for the cenfure before, yet now the having vented herfelf and I find fuch flat contradiction to the fcripture in what the faith, as to that in the first to the Hebrews—God at fundry times fpake to our fathers—For my part I understand that fcripture and other fcriptures of the Lord Jefus Christ, and the apostle writing to Timothy faith that the fcripture is able to make one perfect—therefore I fay the mind of the brethren —I think the deferves no lefs a centure than hath been already past but rather fomething more, for this is the foundation of all mitchief and of all those bastardly things L 1 2 which

* A deputy, I know not for what town, but I take him to be an inhabitant of Bolton and a principal merchant. which have been overthrowing by that great meeting. They have all come out from this curfed fountain.

Gov. Seeing the court hath thus declared itfelf and hearing what hath been laid to the charge of Mrs. Hutchinfon and efpecially what fhe by the providence of God hath declared freely without being afked, if therefore it be the mind of the court, looking at her as the principal caufe of all our trouble, that they would now confider what is to be done to her.

Mr. Coddington. I do think that you are going to cenfure therefore I defire to fpeak a word.

Gov. I pray you fpeak.

Mr. Coddington. There is one thing objected against the meetings. What if she designed to edify her own family in her own meetings may none else be present?

Gov. If you have nothing elfe to fay but that, it is pity Mr. Coddington that you should interrupt us in proceeding to censure.

Mr. Coddington. I would fay more Sir, another thing you lay to her charge is her fpeech to the elders. Now I do not fee any clear witnefs against her, and you know it is a rule of the court that no man may be a judge and an accufer too. I do not speak to disparage our eiders and their callings, but I do not fee any thing that they accule her of witneffed against her, and therefore I do' not fee how the thould be centured for that. And for the other thing which hath fallen from her occasionally by the spirit of God, you know the spirit of God witneffes with our fpirits, and there is no truth in fcripture but God bears witnefs to it by his fpirit, therefore I would entreat you to confider whether those things your have alledged against her deferve such censure as you are about to pais; be it to banishment or imprisonment. And again here is nothing proved about the elders, only that fhe faid they did not teach a covenant of grace fo' clearly as Mr.Cotton did, and that they were in the flate of the apofles before the afcenfion. Why I hope this may not be offensive nor any wrong to them. Goy.

Gov. Pafs by all that hath been faid formerly and her own speeches have been ground enough for us to proceed upon.

Mr. Coddington. I befeech you do not speak fo to force things along, for I do not for my own part fee any equity in the court in all your proceedings. Here is no law of God that she hath broken nor any law of the country that fhe hath broke, and therefore deferves no cenfure, and if the fay that the elders preach as the apostles did, why they preached a covenant of grace and what wrong is that to them, for it is without queftion that the apostles did preach a covenant of grace, though not with that power, till they received the manifestation of the fpirit, therefore I pray confider what you do, for here is no law of God or man broken.

Mr. Harlakenden. Things thus fpoken will flick. I would therefore that the affembly take notice that here is none that condemns the meeting of christian women; but in fuch a way and for fuch an end that it is to be detefted. And then tho' the matter of the elders be taken away yet there is enow belides to condemn her, but I shall speak no further.

Dep. Gov. We shall be all fick with fasting.

Mr. Colburn. I diffent from censure of banithment.

Mr. Stoughton. The cenfure which the court is about to pals in my confcience is as much as the deferves, but becaufe fhe defires witnefs and there is none in way of witnefs therefore I shall defire that no offence be taken if I do not formally condemn her because she hath not been formally convicted as others are by witneffes upon oath.

Mr. Coddington. That is a fcruple to me alfo, becaufe Solomon faith, every man is partial in his own caufe, and here is none that accufes her but the elders, and the spake nothing to them but in private, and I do not know what rule they had to make the thing publick; fecret things ought to be fpoken in fecret and publick things in publick, therefore I think they have broken the rules of God's word. LI3

Goy.

Gov. What was fpoken in the prefence of many is not to be made fecrer.

Mr. Coddington. But that was spoken but to a few and in private.

Gov. In regard Mr. Stoughton is not fatisfied to the end all fcruples may be removed we shall defire the elders to take their oaths.

Here now was a great whifpering among the minifters, fome drew back others were animated on.

Mr. Eliot. If the court calls us out to fwear we will fwear.

Gov. Any two of you will ferve.

Mr. Stoughton. There are two things that I would look to difcharge my confcience of, 1st to hear what they testify upon oath and 2dly to ---

Gov. It is required of you Mr. Weld and Mr. Eliot. Mr. Weld. } We fhall be willing.

Gov. We'll give them their oaths. You shall fwear to the truth and nothing but Mr. Peters held up ? the truth as far as you know. his hand alfo. S So help you God. What you do remember of her fpeak, pray fpeak.

Mr. Eliot. I do remember and I have it written, that which the fpake first was, the fear of man is a fnare, why thould the be afraid but would fpeak freely. The question being asked whether there was a difference between Mr. Cotton and us, fhe faid there was a broad difference. I would not Rick upon words-the thing fhe faid-and that Mr. Cotton did preach a covenant of grace and we of works and fhe gave this reafon-to put a work in point of evidence is a revealing upon a work. We did labour then to convince her that our doctrine was the fame with Mr. Cotton's : She faid no, for we were not fealed. That is all I fhall fay. Gov. What fay you Mr. Weld?

Mr. Weld. I will speak to the things themfelvesthese two things I am fully clear in - the did make a difference difference in three things, the first I was not fo clear in, but that fhe faid this I am fully fure of, that we were not able ministers of the new testament and that we were not clear in our experience becaufe we were not fealed.

Mr. Eliot. I do further remember this alfo, that the faid we were not able ministers of the gospel because we were but like the apostles before the ascension. Mr. Coddington. This was I hope no disparagement to you.

Gov. Well, we see in the court that she doth continually fay and unfay things.

Mr. Peters. I was much grieved that the should fay that our ministry was legal. Upon which we had a meeting as you know and this was the fame fhe told us that there was a broad difference between Mr. Cotton and us. Now if Mr. Cotton do hold forth things more clearly than we, it was our grief we did not hold it fo clearly as he did, and upon those grounds that you have heard.

Mr. Coddington. What wrong was that to fay that you were not able ministers of the new testament or that you were like the apostles-methinks the comparifon is very good.

Gov. Well, you remember that fhe faid but now that the thould be delivered from this calamity.

Mr. Cotton. I remember fhe faid fhe ihould be delivered by God's providence, whether now or at another time the knew not.

Mr. Peters. I profess 1 thought Mr. Cotton would never have took her part.

Mr. Stoughton. I fay now this teftimony doth convince me in the thing, and I am fully fatisfied the words were pernicious, and the frame of her fpirit doth hold forth the fame.

Gov. The court hath already declared themfelves fatisfied concerning the things you hear, and concerning the troublefomnels of her fpirit and the danger of her courfe among us, which is not to be fuffered. Therefore fore if it be the mind of the court that Mrs. Hutchlníou for thefe things that appear before us is unfit for our fociety, and if it be the mind of the court that fhe shall be banished out of our liberties and imprisoned till she be fent away, let them hold up their hands.

All but three.

Those that are contrary minded hold up yours.

Mr. Coddington and Mr. Colborn, only.

Mr. Jennifon.* I cannot hold up my hand one way or the other, and I shall give my reason if the court require it.

Gov. Mrs. Hutchinfon, the fentence of the court you hear is that you are banished from out of our jurifdiction as being a woman not fit for our fociety, and are to be imprifoned till the court shall fend you away.

Mrs. H. I defire to know wherefore I am banifhed ?

Gov. Say no more, the court knows wherefore and is fatisfied.

* A deputy I fuppole of Ipswich,

(521)

DE

A CADIANS, their fufferings, p. 146, vol. ii. p. 97. Acadie, bickering with the French there, 127. Acts of Parliament, how far allowed to be obligatory, 322. Acts of trade, not observed, 269.

Addington Isaac, secretary, 414. His death, ii. 212.

Addrefs to K. Charles the fecond, moved for without fuccefs, 21c. Agreed to, 211. To K. Charles the first, 507. To the parliament, 516. To Oliver Cromwell, 523. To K. Charles the fecond, 537.

Admiralty, judge of, first appointed, ii. 80.

Adultery, female, not male, capital, 441. On either part ground for divorce a vinculo, 445.

Agawam, Indian name of Ipswich, 28. Of Springfield, 98.

Agents, Weld, Peters and Hibbins, 98. Edward Winflow, 149. John Leveret, 190. Bradfireet and Norton, 219. Stoughton, and Bulkley, 312. Dudley and Richards, 334. Mather, 366. Afhurft, Cooke, Mather and Oakes, 392. Conftantine Phips, ii. 85. Wait Winthrop, ii. 129. Sir Wm. Afhurft, ii. 186. Jeremiah Dummer, ii. 187. Anthony Sanderfon, ii. 292. E. Cooke, ii. 302. Francis Wilks, ii. 353. Jonathan Belcher, ii. 354. Chriftopher Kilby, ii. 392. William Bollan, ii. 436. Remarks upom the agency, ii. 132.

Alden, Capt. John, accufed of witchcraft and imprisoned, ii. 48. Alexander, Sir William, fells Nova Scotia to the French, 28.

Allen, fecretary of Connecticut, ii. 60.

Andover, troubles there, ii. 42, 48,

Andros, Sir Edmund, governor of New York, 324. Of Maffachufets, and his arrival and mild beginning of administration, 353. Grows more arbitrary, 354. List of his council, 354. fuspected without grounds of being a papist, 355. Other groundless jealousies, 370. A kind general, 371. Governor from Delaware to Nova Scotia, 371. Seized and confined, 373. Demands his release, 387. Ordered to England, 391. Escapes from the castle and retaken, 392. Made governor of Virginia, 395. Death, ii. 208.

Anglesey, Lord. his letter to governor Leverett, 309. Antinomianism, rise and progress, 55 to 75. Ay

Appleton,

Appleton, Mr. an affiftant, imprisoned by Sir Ed. Andros, 365. Articles of war for New-England forces, 297.

- Achurst family, friends to New-England, 389. Sir Henry appears for the colony, 389. His death, ii. 132. Sir William chofen agent, ii. 186.
- Affembly of divines at Westminster invite Mr. Cotton, &c. to fit with them, 115.
- Affistants contend with deputies, 35, 143. Vote to furrender the charter, 338.

B.

BANK, private, ii. 206, 392.

- Baptists perfecuted, 226 to 228.
- Baxter, George, an arbitrator between English and Dutch, 159.
- Belcher, Jonathan, agent, ii. 354. Governor, 367. Arrives, 369. Removed, judged and retaliated, 375. Oppofes the land bank, 296. Falfely charged, 397. Difplaced, 399.
- Bellamont, Lord, governor, ii. 87. Arrives at New-York, 108. At Boston, 112. His character, 112 to 116. Death, 121.
- Bellingham, Richard, arrives, 41. Deputy governor, 43. Go. vernor, 97. Ordered to England to answer, 253. Governor, 258, 269. Dies, 269.
- Bermudas charter vacated, 336.
- Bigotry in England fettled America, 2. Prevails in N. England, 189. Bills of credit first isfued, 402. Increased, ii. 208, 245, 335, 380,
 - 403. Abolished, 436.
- Blaxton, Mr. an epifcopalian, 20.
- Bollan, William, his great fervices, ii. 436.

Bomazeen, a noted Indian chief, ii. 87, 164. Killed, 311.

- Borland, John, his trial, ii. 154.
- Boston first called Trimontaine, 21. Inhabitants favor Mr. Vane and flight Mr. Winthrop, 62. Sixty of them difarmed, 74.

Impowered to try causes, 175, Great tumult there, ii. 430.

Bounds of the first charter, 8. Of the second, ii. 10.

Boyle, Robert, governor of corporation for propagating gofpel, 165. Dies, 363.

Boylstone, Zabdiel, promotes inoculation in Boston, ii. 273.

Bradford, William, governor of Plimouth, his death, 206.

Bradford, Major, account of Indian fight, 300.

Bradftreet, Simon, 18. Agent to England, 219. Governor, 323. Of the moderate party, 331. Refules to act under Dudley, 351. Vindicates the titles to lands, 360. Governor or prefident, 382.

Refigns to Phips, ii. 13. Death and character, 105.

Brenton, Jahleel, controverfy with Sir Wm. Phips, ii. 75. Brereton, Sir William, of the New-England company, 18.

Bridges

INDEX.

Bridges, Robert, an affistant, 149. Bridges, John, furveyor of woods, ii. 223. Brown, John and Samuel, churchmen, and therefore fent back to England, 12. Brook, Lord, A2. Bulkley, Peter, agent, 312. Bullivant, one of Andros's justices, feized, 374. His reply to lord Bellamont, ii. 113. Burgels, William, first fecretary, 10. Burnet, William, governor, ii. 325. Arrives, 332. Controversy with the house, 333 to 366. Death; 364. Eurrill, John, his character, ii. 234. C. CAMBRIDGE petition to the King, 367. Canada expedition proposed, 256, 271.-ii. 100, Unsuccessful, 190 to 198. 398 to 401. Canonicus, Naraganset sachem, 138. Candy, a negro witch, ii. 33. Cape Ann, fishery there in 1624, 7. Cape Breton expedition, ii. 405 to 423. Cape Fear, contribution for, 260. Carr, Sir Robert, commillioner, 230. Indiscrete, 249. Carrier, Sarah, a witch child, ii. 44. Cartwright, George, commissioner, 230. Cary, Mrs. imprisoned and escapes, ii. 47. Cafco fort taken, 397. Castine, Baron, 364. ii. 93. Cattle, number in 1640, 93. Charles II. news of his reftoration, 210. Motion to address him fails, id. Proclaimed in Bofton, 217. No man to drink his health, 219. Grants his pardon and confirms the charter, 221. A prefent made him, 257. Letter to Plimouth, 546. To Massachusets, 547. Charlestown church settled, 22. Charter first passes the feals, 9. Removed to New-England, 13. Process against it, 86 to 89. Saved by change of times in England, 88. Affiltants vote to furrender it, 338. Judgment or decree against it, 340. Purchased, ii. 1. Charter second, drawn by Blaithwait, 411. Charlevoix, erroneous, ii. 73, 82, 88, 261, 309. Chauncy, Charles, prefident, 174. Death, 259. Cheever, Ezekiel, his death, ii. 175. Child, Doctor, concerned in a faction, 145. Christianity preached to Indians, 161 to 169. Church

523

524

Church, Benjamin, fortunate, 306. His actions in eastern parts, ii. 69. Expedition to Chignecto, 95. Superseded and of-fended, 99. Expedition, 144. His Death, 223. Church of England first fet up, 355. Church government, fum of it, 419. Chubb, Capt. furrenders Pemaquid, ii, 93. Cruelty, 94. Killed, 106. Civil subjection, notions upon it, 251. Clark, Thomas, proprietor of Kenebec, 346. Clark, Nathaniel, a time ferver, 360. Seized and fecured, 382. Clark, John, fpeaker, ii. 249. Clams received by the first planters with pious gratitude, 23. Coin of New-England in 1652, 177, 178. Coddington, William, 18, 61. Collectors of customs first established ii. 80. College, Harvard, 110, 171, 175. Colonies form their own legiflature, 95. Colonies, state of in Cromwell's time, 194. Commerce free, proposed from Canada, 166. Commerce, flourishing state of, 189. Commissioners from KingCharles, 230 to 256. Commission, 535. Commiffionersof united colonies, 133, 138, 153, 165, 169, 180, 185. Comet, remarkable, 226, 348. Connecticut their first combination, 99. Controversy about duties, 153 to 156. Forces successful, 305, 306. Surrender their charter, 339. Revolution there, 384. Re-affuming their charter, 406. Line settled, ii. 202. Convers, Captain, ii. 67, 73. Cooke, George, a Massachusets captain, asterwards a colonel in Ireland, 120. Cooke, Elisha, zealous for liberty, 231. Assistant, 341. Agent, 393. For old charter or none, 408. Negatived, ii. 70. Death, 211. Cooke, Elifha, begins the controverfy with governor Shute, ii. 221. Chosen speaker and negatived, 233. Agent, 302. Proceedings in England, 319 to 321. Returns, 324. Conant, Roger, at Cape Ann, 7. Salem, 8. Coram, Thomas, projector, ii. 224. Corn, Indian, 10s. sterling the bushel, 24. Mean distasteful diet to Europeans, 26. Cornbury; Lord, persecutes diffenters, ii. 123. Corporation for propagating gospel, 160, 164. Inquired into by A. Sancroft, 363. Cory, Giles, pressed to death, ii. 59. Council for fafety of the people, 381. Covenant, Scotch, proposed, 146. Counties first made, 117.

Council

Council under Dudley, 350. Andros, 354. Council of Plimonth conflituted, 5. Make a grant to Welton, 5. To Robert Gorges, 6. Divide New-England in 12 provinces, 50. Council of Maffachusets province, their powers by charter, ii. 8.9.

Nominate civil officers, 13. The first councellors, 14. first election, 70. Affume government, 125, 210. The Court of affiltants at Charlestown, 25, General, 25.

Course of judicial proceedings, 449.

Cranfield, governor of New-Hampfhire, 337.

Cotton, John, arrives, 34. Engaged in controverfy, 55 to 75. Invited to the affembly of divines, 115. Death, 179. Cows, milch, f.25 per head, 27.

Cradock, Matthew, first governor, 9. Account of him, 18. Intended to settle at Medford, 22.

Cromwell, Oliver, defigned for New-England, 42. Writes to Maffachufets to join against the Dutch, 182. To remove to Ireland, 190. Urges their removal to Jamaica; 191. His conversation with Wheelwright, 193. Sees the importance of the colonies, 195.

Cromwell, Richard, not proclaimed when ordered, 209 ... Crown law taken from Mofes, 439.

Culpeper, Lord, at Bollon, 332.

D:

DEANE, Francis, accused of witchcraft, and escapes, ii. 38. D'Anville, Duke of, his expedition, ii. 424.

Danforth, Thomas, assistant, 189. Deputy governor, 323. President of Main, 329. Zealous; 331. In terror, 380. Treat's with the Indians, 404.

Davenport, John, comes over, 82. Invited to Westminster affembly, 115. Conceals Whaley and Goffe, 215. Death, 260.

Davenport, Captain, killed at the caffle, 253.

D'Aulney, a French governor at Penobfcot, bickerings with him, 128 10 134.

Davis Silvanus, action at Kenebeck, 346. Councellor, ii. 14. Deeds registered, 455.

Deerfield destroyed by the French, ii. 137.

Denison, George, great success, 305.

Deputies and affistants contention, 35, 143.

Dixwell, Colonel, one of King Charles's judges, known by the name of J. Davids, 217.

Dod, John, charges New-England puritans with feperation, Sr. Douglass, erroneous, 208, 314, 355, 358, 474. ii. 25, 50, 80. Downing, Sir George, anecdotes, 111.

Dudley, Thomas, 12. Account of him, 14. Deputy governor. 17. No friend to toleration, 75. Governor, 35, 144. Death and character, 182. Dudley, Dudley, Jofeph, member for Roxbury, 287. His account of Narraganiet fight, 302. Agent, 334. Prefident, 340. Seized and imprifoned, 374. Suffers much, 391. Sent to England, 393. Chief jultice of New-York, 395. Sollicits for the government, ii. 85. Member of parliament, 86. Governor, 124. Negatives five councellors, 136. Severely cenfured, 146, 147, 152, 157, 162. In danger in a florm, 148. Gains friends, 188. Superfeded by the council, 210. By Col. Tailer, 212. Character, 213.

Dudley, Paul, offends the house, ii. 256.

Dummer, Richard, first arrives, 41. Assistant, 43. Left out, 61. Dummer, Shubael, killed at York, 405.

Dummer, Jeremiah, Agent, ii. 187. Raises a bubble in 1720. 244. Slighted by the house, 255.

Dummer, William, lieut. governor, ii. 291. Reprimanded, 322. Retires and his character, 368.

Dunstan, Hannah, an heroine, ii. 106.

Dunstar, Henry, college prefident, 174.

Dutch bribe English pilot to go to Cape-Cod. 5. Settle bounds with New-Haven, 157. Suspected of plot against the English, 175 to 185. Surrender Manhados, 231.

E.

EARTHQUAKE, memorable, 90. ii. 326,

Eaton, Nath. first master of Harvard college, 90. Displaced 91. Eaton, Theophilus, account of him, 17. Comes to N. England, 82. Elders confulted by general court, 181. 223. 253. 311. 337.

Jealous of power of the magistrate, 270 to 274. Prophecy in fackeloth, 274. Concerned in all matters of moment, 424. Election contentious, 61. 97.

Eliot, John, Indian apostle, 162 to 169. Recants his opinions against monarchy, 212.

Eliot; John, capt. gallant action, 295.

Elizabeth illands, fo called by Gosnold, 1.

Embarkation, first, for Massachusets-Bay, 9. Second, 10. Third and principal with the chartar, 19.

Endicot, John, a patentee, 8. Goes to Naumkeak or Salem, fubgovernor, 9. His character, 17. Cuts the crofs out of the king's colours and cenfured, 38. Sent against the Pequots without fuccefs and reflected on, 58. Governor, 134, 151,172, 188. His death, 235.

Errors condemned in the fynod, 75.

Effex county in 1643, 117.

Excommunication' chablished, 423.

Expedition,

Expedition, French, defigned against Boston, 102. ii. 424. Against Canada, ii. 190. 398. Against Louisburgh, ii. 405. Expence of first transportation computed £. 192,000 sterl. 93.

F.

Faction suppressed, 145 to 149.

Fast turned to thanksgiving, 23, 142.

Fenwick, George, agent for Lord Say, Brooke, &c. 100. Leaves a legacy to New England, 101.

Fire of London, collection in the colony for fufferers, 257-In Boston in 1676 and 1679, 34. In 1711, ii. 200.

Flint, Thomas, affistant, 110.

Foster, John, an active revolutioner, 377. His death, ii. 195. Foxcroft, justice, imprisons Winflow, 373.

Frarey, deacon, fined, 356.

Freemen, none admitted, except church members, 26.

French drove from Acadie, 28. Drive the English from Penobleot, 30. Immediately after peace, take measures for war, ii. 110. French protestants ask leave to fettle, 224.

Frontenac, governor of Canada, appointed to command forces against New-England, ii, 101.

G.

- Gardner, Sir Christopher, knight of the Sepulchre, a great enemy to the colony, 25.
- General court first confisting of house representatives &c. 35. Offended with Boston and meet at Cambridge, 60. Pass an order of neutrality in the war between king & parliament, 136. Restrain churches in choice of ministers, 188. Their proceedings with commissioners from King Charles the second, 250, to 255. Amplify their jurisdiction, 260.
- General court interpose in the disputes of Boston church 270. Acknowledge their error 273. Message upon dissolution of the government 342. Déclaration of right, 529.
- George, captain of a king's fhip feized 374.
- George the first proclaimed with unufual marks of joy, ii. 209.
- Gibbons, Major general of forces, 137. Affiftant, 160. Anecdote, 160.
- Goffe, colonel, one of king Charles judges, 213, to 219. Letter from his wife, 532.
- Soffe, Thomas, first deputy governor, 9.
- Goodwin, John, his children bewitched, ii. 18.
- Gookins, Daniel, arrives, 136. Zealous, 331.
- Gorges, Robert, his grant from colony of Plimouth, 6. Sells it to Sir William Brierton, 6. Gorges, Gorges, Sir Ferdinando, fpent £. 20,000 fettling colonies, 3. A molt active member of the council of Plimouth, 5. Joins with Mason in endeavours to hurt the Massachusets, 48.

Gorges, Thomas, mayor of Acamenticus alias York, 176.

Gorton, Samuel, founder of a sect, 117. A brief history of him, to 124. His defence, 549.

Gofnold Bartholomew first discovered New-England, 1. Governor expected from England 31, 48, 225. Old charter-governor prays in publick upon a fast day, 295.

H.

HADLEY men headed by Goffe the regicide, 219. Hair, long, affociation against it, 151. Ranked among the fins of the land, 320. Hale, Sir Matthew's, witch trials, a precedent for N. England, ii. 22. Hale, John, his wife accused, &c. ii. 60. Hampden, John, intended for New-England, 42. Hampden, Mr. anecdote, 332. Hamond, major, taken pritoner, ii. 89. Hampton settled, 69. Hampshire county established, 225. Harlakenden, Mr. arrives, 41. Dies, 91. Harley, Mr. tradition of him, ii. 122. Harvard college founded, 90, 91. 110, 171. Growth, 171 to 175. Harman, Capt. expedition, ii. 309. Haflerigg, Sir Arthur, intended for New-England, 42. Haverill destroyed, ii. 173. Haugh, Mr. affistant, 43. Slighted, 61. Hawthorne, John, examines witches, il. 30. Hawthorne, William, speaker, 160. Sent for to aaswer in England, 253. Haynes, John, arrives, 34. Affistant, 35. Governor, 42. Goes to Connecticut, 53. Hereditary honoars, plan for them, 490. Higginson, Francis, first minister of Salem, 10. Higginson, John, ordained, 325. Death, ii. 176. Higginson, Nathanael, ii. 160. High treason, first law against it, 323. Hiacoomes, an Indian convert, 161. Hibbins, William, agent, 98. Affistant, 127. Hibbins, Ann, executed, 187. Hinkley, Thomas, governor of Plimouth, petitions K. James, 369. Death, ii. 154. Hoar, Leonard, president, 174. Hobby, Sir Charles, follicits for the government, ii. 153. Death, 271.

Holyoke,

Holycke, Edward, prefident, 175.

Hooke, counfellor, his opinion upon the Maffachusets charter, 410. Hooker, Thomas, arrives, 34. Coldness between Mr. Cotton and him, 43. Removes to Hartford, 45. Invited to the assembly at Westminster, 115.

Hopkins, governor of Connecticut; 82.

Hudibras, the author ridicules the pious New-Englanders for the deeds of a profligate crew, 6.

House of commons vote the surrender of plantation charters illegal, &c. 389. Bill passed to reflore N. England charters, 390.

Houfe of representatives offended with governor Shute for negativing their speaker, ii. 242. Infert themselves in dispute about pine trees, 246. With-hold part of the governor's falary, 243. Adjourn for fix days, 257: Take the direction of the war, 269: Remarks upon their conduct, 288. Order lieutenant governor's seal to be defaced, 298. Accept an explanatory charter, 321.

Hubbard, William, ii. 147.

Hubbard, Nathaniel, ii. 147, 403.

Hutchinfon, William, comes to New-England, 55.

Hutchinfon, Ann, comes from Alford to New-England, 55. Treated with great respect, but watched by Mr. Winthrop, id. The principal women attend her lectures, 56. She condemns the ministers for being under a covenant of works, id. Mr. Cotton countenances her opinions, 57. The colony in a flame by reason of them, id. Lost her support when Mr. Vane removed, 66. Called to trial, for laken by Mr. Cotton, and her tragical fate, 70 to 73.

Hutchinfon, Edward, banished, 73. Sent to treat with Nipmug Indians, 291. Ambushed and killed, 292.

Hutchinson, Elisha, a zealous member, 331. Affistant, 347. Joins with Mather in a remonstrance, 367. Treats with Indians, 404. Commander in chief of forces; ii. 67, 168.

Dies, 223.

Hutchinson, Eliakim, his death, ii. 223.

Hutchinson, William, his character, ii. 249.

Hutchinion, Tho. arrelts Kidd, i. 119. Death & character, 392, J.

JACOBS, Margaret, accufes herfelf and grandfather of witchcraft and then recants, ii. 38.

James the first grants all the continent from 34 to 45 degrees, 3, Refuies to grant liberty of commerce, 4.

James the fecond proclaimed in Bofton, 340.

fanson, Sir Bryant, affistant, 16.

V91. 11.

M m

Iberville,

Iberville takes the Newport, Capt. Paxton, ii. 92. The fort st Pemaquid, ii. 93.

Idolatry, Indian, learnt from the French, 472.

Jermayne, Sir Thomas, speaks in favor of the colony, 33.

Increase of the colonies, remarks, ii. 201.

Indians, no idea of what the English intend by subjects, 276.
Their way of fighting must succeed when they exceed greatly innumbers, 295. Hardly used, 296. Captives made flaves, 307.
Their number in Plimouth colony, 349. The feveral nations; 456. The mohawks or cannibals; 457 Customs, manners, language, &c. 461 to 479. The French made them idolaters, 472.
Said to call the feven stars the bear, 478. Alarm the colonies, ii. 120. Destroy Deerfield, 137. Haverhill, 173. Treacherous, 178. Attempts to gospelize them, 161. Their towns, 167, 168.

Indians, Pequods, threaten war, 27, 58. War with them, 76 to 81. Indians, Naraganfets, come to Bolton; 28. Treaty with them;

59. Plot against the English, 112. At war with Mohegins, 136. Indians, Wompanoags, or Philip's Indians, war with them, &c:

275 to 310. Their first subjection to King James, 273.

Indians, Eastern, affault Ipfwich Indians, 27. Begin war, 307. Hostilities, 346 to 348, 364, 395, 404. Treaty of peace, ii. 73. 109, 201; 218, 317, 318. Hollilities, ii. 277, 362 to 305.

306 to 316.

Inoculation in Boston, ii. 273.

Invalion, French, threatned, ii. 101.

Jocelyn, his voyage to New-England, 267.

Johnson, Isaac, an affiltant, 10. Resolves to become a planter, 12. His family, estate, &c. 16. His lady daughter of Earl of Lina coln, 20. His death greatly lamented, 20.

Jones, Margaret, executed, 150.

Spfwich men fined and imprifoned by Sir Edmund Andros, 365⁴⁴ Ireland claim an exemption from British acts of parliament, 322. Judges dependent, ii. 376.

Judicial proceedings, course of, 449.

K.

KENEBECK river, first entered by Europeans, 2. Indian spoils there, 346.

Kieft, a Dutch governor at Manhadoes, 158.

Kidd, the famous bucaneer, feized at Boston, ii. 119.

Kilby Christopher, representative, ii. 392. Agent, id.

Kirk, Colonel, appointed governor of New-England, 341.

Knowles, Admiral, impress made by him at Boston, ii. 430.

LACONIA, an ideal province, 104. The province of Main for called, 267.

Lancafter burnt by the enemy, 302. -

Land

- Land bank, ii. 206, 392.
- Lake, Capt. Thomas, killed, 346.
- La Tour, French governor, 127 to 134.
- Laud, archbishop, jealous of New-England, 86. Employs Burdett to give intelligence, id. First commissioner for regulating plantations, 502.
- Laws framed from the judicial of Mofes, 439. Provincial, ii. 63 to 66.
- Lawlon, Roger, tried for supplying the French and Indian enemies, ii. 154.
- Lechford, Thomas, a tractious attorney, 451.
- Ledea, William, a quaker, hanged, 202.
- Leete, William, deputy governor of Connecticut, favors Whaley and Goffe, 216.
- Legislature in general formed by the colonies, 95.
- Leigh, Lord, accompanies Mr. Vane to England, 63.
- Leverett, Thomas, ruling elder, 34.
- Leverett, John, fent to Naragansets to treat, 112. Commissioner from Oliver Cromwell, 183. Deputy governor, 269. Governor, 270. His death, 323.
- Leverett, John, college prefident, 175,
- Leyden, puritans or seperatists there, 3.
- Lieutenant governor confidered as a councellor though not elected, ii. 70.
- Long Island in New York, first peopled from Lyn in Massachusets, 89, Lothrop, Capt. and company defeated, 294.
- Lovewell, Capt. ii. 314.
- Louisburgh, expedition against it, ii. 405 to 423
- Ludlow, Roger, deputy governor, 35. Removes to Connecticut, 43, 98.
- Lyford, a minister of New-Plimouth, 7
- Lyman, Caleb, his exploit, ii. 146.

Μ.

- MAIN, province of, deferted by Gorges the proprietor, the people put themfelves under the Maffachusets, 176. Made a county, id. Purchased, 326. Made part of Massachusets province, ii. 5.
- Manhados (New-York) furrenders to Col. Nichols, &c. 231,
- Maquas and the reft of the 5 nations treaty, 348.
- Marblehead, rage of women there, 307.
- Martha's vineyard first fo called, 1.
- Mason, Capt. John, spent 20,000 l. settling colonies, 3. Molests the Massachusets, 48. His several alledged grants, 313.
- Mason, John, commands Connecticut forces against Pequods, 76. Chief share in Pequod war, 77, 78.

Mm z

Maffasoite

Maffafoit, Indian chief, chufes King James for his fovereign rather than his ally, 275. An enemy to christianity, 276.

Malls for royal navy, ii. 253.

532

Mather, Richard, arrives, 41. His death, 259.

- Mather, increase, college prelident, 174. Sued by Randolph for defamation, 366. Goes secretly to England to sollicit for the colony, 366. A faithful agent, 389. Saves New-Plimouth from being annexed to New-York, 406. Not fatisfied with the new charter, 409. Has the fole nomination of the first governor and council, 413. Arrives at Boston, 416. His death, ii. 305
- Mather, Cotton, drew the manifesto upon the New-England revolution, 381. Intercedes with his father for governor Stoughton, 414. The first mover in favor of inoculation, ii. 273. Matthews, a minister, fined for preaching without licence, 423.

Maverick, Samuel, at Noddles Island, 21. Obnoxious for stirring up a faction, 145. Commissioner from King Charles II. 230.

Delivers a letter from King Charles to the colony, 253.

Mavoshen, the Indian name for the eastern country, 1.

Mayhew, Thomas, inftructs the Indians, 161. Purchase of Martha's vineyard, Nantucket and Elizabeth islands, 161.

Medfield burnt, 303.

Miantinomo, Naraganset chief, comes to Boston, 28. Plots against the English, 112, 113. Taken prisoner, 137. Put to death, 138.

Middlefex county, 117.

Militia in the year 1665, 244-

Ministry, poorly supported, 274.

Mitchel, Jonathan, friend to Whaley and Goffe, 218. Oppofes the fending over the magistrates upon King Charles's order, 253. A licenser of the press, 259. Death, 260. Money granted by parliament brought over, ii. 177. 178. Mortality among Indians, 35.

Morton, an attorney at Mount Wollaston, 8. Seized and fent to England, id. Complains of the colony, 31. Fined £.100. 32. Mount Hope and the country round granted to N.Plimouth, 345.

Moulton, Col. behaves well at Norridgewock, ii. 309.

N:

NANTASKET first began, 7.

Naraganfet Indians, treaty, 59, Plotting, 112. At war with the Mohegins, 136. Further quarrels, 155. 186. Treaty, 289. Break their treaty, 297. Famous fight, 299.

Naumkeak (Salem) fettlement began there, 9.

Nellon, John, a revolutioner, 376. His friendly intelligence, 378. New-England discovered, 1. First so called, 2. First colony there, 2. Division into 12 provintes, 50,

Newfoundland

Newfoundland taken by the French, ii. 100.

New-Hampshire settled, 102 to 110. Three distinct governments, 108. Swallowed up by Massachusets, 110. Of the fame disposition with Massachusets, 268. Grateful return, 328. Controversy about it, 312 to 318. Boundary line settled, ii. 382. New-Haven first planted, 82 to 86. Settle bounds with the Dutch, 157. Apply to Cromwell, 182.

New-Plimouth colony begins, 5. Trade at Penobscot, 28. Brief state of affairs, 206 to 208. Boundary line fettled, 208. 229. Conduct approved by King Charles the second's commillioners, 233. Desirous of chassing the Indians, 286. Further state of affairs there, 343 to 346. Revolution there, 383. Annexed to New-York, 405. Recalled and annexed to Maffachusets, 406 A summary of their affairs, ii. 449 to 481. New-Somersetschire, the same with the province of Main, 267. New-York, revolution there, 384. Neutrality with French, ii. 140. Nichols, K.Charles's commissioner, 230. Discreet behaviour, 250. Nicholson, Francis, 384. ii. 176. 178, 180. 190.

Nocake, for Nuichicke, Indian food, 465.

Norfolk county, 117.

Norridgewock, successful expedition there, ii. 309.

Norton, John, arrives, 41. Difapproves Mrs. Hibbins's execution, 188. In favor of addrefs to K. Charles the fecond, 210-

Agent to England, 219. His death and quakers remark, 223-Notaries public, first chosen, ii. 238.

Nova-Scotia made part of the Maffachusets province, ii. 5. Affairs there, 127 to 134. ii. 90, 97. 180 to 186.

Nowell, Increase, his character, 17. Settles at Charlestown, 22. Nowell, Samuel, joins with Mather in England, 367. Noyes, Oliver, his death, ii. 249.

0.

OAKES, Thomas, agent, 393. Affistant, id.

Oakes, Urian, prefident of the college, 174.

Oldham, John, flirs up a faction in New-Plimouth, 7. A grantee from the council of Plimouth, 7.

Olgood, Mary, examination, ii. 31. Recantation, 41. Teffimonial, 42.

Owen, John, invited to New-England, 226,

P.

PAPER money first made, 402. Parliament, memorable act or ordinance, $14. Parris, Samuel, witchcraft begins in his family, ii. 25. Too officious in prolecutions, 26.

Parlone,

Parsons, Hugh, tried for witchcraft, 179.

Passengers the first ten years, 21200, 93.

Patrick, Captain in Pequod war, 76. ...

Patch, Eliz. her death, ii. 216.

Paxton, Capt. taken in the Newport man of war, ii. 92,

Pierce, Capt. and 50 men killed, 304.

Pelham, Herbert, assistant, 144. Commissioner, 145. In England, 163.

Pemaquid, a fort there, ii. 68. Taken 92. Possefied by Dunbar, ii. 379.

Penn, Elder, death and character, 269.

Penobfcot rifled, 29. Taken, 46. By Cromwell, 183. Reftored, 258. Taken by the Dutch, 311. By Sir William Phips, 397.

Pequods kill Stone, 45. Protect the murderers of the English, 58. Urge the Naragansets to war, 59. The tribe descroyed, 76 to 81.

Peters, Hugh, one of the first planters, 9. Arrival, 41. Agent, and his tragical end, 98. Opposes collection for the Indians, 165.

Philip, King, or Indian Sachem, fubjects himfelf and nation, 279.
282. Rashly begins a war, 284. In imminent danger, 291.
Killed 206.

Phips, Sir William, birth, &c. 396. Takes Port Royal, 397.
Ill fuccefs at Quebec, 399 to 401. Sollicitsa 2d expedition.403.
Governor, 413. Arrives, 415. Public entry, ii. 12. Encourages profecution of witches, 23. Awarrant from his lady, 61.
Quarrels with collector and captain of a man of war, 75.
Ordered to England, 78. His death, 85.

Phips, Constantine, agent, ii. 85. Drew the bill for reverfing. Leisler's attainder, 86. Removed from agency, 186.

Phips, Spencer, lieutenant governor, ii. 81.

Piscataqua submit to Massachusets, 101. A summary of settlements, 102.

Plaisted, Col. his fon taken prifoner the day he was married, ii. 200. Planters, first, whether churchmen, 417. Became separatis, 418. Platform, sum of it, 431.

Popham, Sir John, a promoter of colonies, 2. His brother prelident of Sagadahoc colony, 2.

Porter, John, fentenced to die for disobedience to parents, 239. Portroyal taken by Phips, 397. Attempted, ii. 165. 171.

Taken, 182.

Portsmouth, N. Hampshire, their generous donation to Harvard college, 268.

Prince of Orange, news of his landing in England, 372. His declaration called a treasonable libel, 373.

Prince of Wales, his birth celebrated, 372,

Printing first set up, 257.

Prodigies reported, 126.127,

Providence

INDEX.

Providence, ifland, colony, 94 to 97.

Province of Maffachusets bay bounds, il. 7.

Puritan minifters in England did not approve of feparation. 8: Come over in Charles the fecond's reign, 225.

Pym, John, defigned to New-England, 42. Intimate with the first planters, ii. 2.

Pynchon, William, alliftant; 17. Settles at Roxbury, 22. Springfield, 98.

0.

OUAKERS perfecuted, 196 to 205. 320. Ouinnypiack, afterwards New-haven, 63. Quittamug, John, a very old Indian, ii, 305. Quo warranto against the charter, 338, 340.

R.

RAINSFORD, Brother to Lord chief juffice, a ruling elder, 265. Ralle, father, ii, 241, 262. His character, 263. Killed, 309. Randolph, Edward, arrives, 311. Made 8 voyages in 9 years, 329. Appointed collector, 330. Quarrels with Dudley, 357. Eoasts that he is as arbitrary as the great Turk, 369. Voted a capital offender, ii, 5.

Ratcliffe, Mr. the first episcopal minister, 355.

Read, John, his character, ii, 376.

Regiltry of deeds, 453.

Representatives first chosen, 27.

Revell, John, affiltant, 17.

Revolution in New-England before any certain news from England, 373. Circumstantial account of it, 374 to 377. Perfons concerned afraid of the confequence, 380.

Rhode-Island fettled by refugees from Massachusets, 72, 77? Refuied to be admitted into union with the other colonies, 124. Surrender their charter, 339. Re-affume it, 407. Line fettled, ii, 400.

Robinson, John, minister, ii, 454. Andrew, his exploit, ii, 2954. Robinson, William, a quaker, executed, 200.

Rochellers apply for leave to fettle in New-England, 224

Rogers, John, eollege prefident, 174.

Rolliter, Edward, allillant, 17. Rolwell, Sir Henry, patentee, 8.

Rowley settled, 89.

Rowfe, William, tried and fined, ii. 152.

Ruling elders, 126.

Ruffell, hon. George, at Bolton, 332.

Russell, Richard, an assistant, 189.

Ruffell, James, an affistant, ii. 14.

SAGADAHOC fettled, 2. Saint Christophers, contribution for relief, 257. Saint Francois fettled by eastern Indians, ii. 142. Saltonstall, Sir Richard, patentee, 9, 15. Settles at Watertown, returns to England, 24. Saltonstall, Richard, affistant, 61. Makes a vow, 94. Gives Whaley and Goffe fifty pounds, 217. Saltonstall, Nathaniel, 351. ii. 14. Salifbury fettled, 89. Salary fixed, controversy, ii. 333. Salem, court removed there, ii. 350. Sanderfon, Anthony, agent, ii. 292. Sanford, Major, takes Sir E. Andros and fends him to Bollon, 392. Saffacus, Pequod fachem, 80. Savage, Thomas, banished, 72. Commands forces, 288. Say and Seale, Lord, intended to New-England, 42. Urges removal to the Bahamas, 94. Kind letter to the colony, 220. Saybrooke fort, 47. Burnt, 155. Scott, Patience, a quaker child, 199. Schuyler, Col. friendly, ii. 142. 163. 172. Sewall, Samuel, 359. ii. 61, 291. Sedgewick, Major, commiffioner from Cromwell; 183. Takes St. John's, Penobscot, &c. id. Sharp, Samuel, alfiltant, 15. Sharp, Thomas, 17. Shawmutt, 21. Sheaffe, Sampson, his letter about Canada expedition, ii. 198. Shepard, Thomas, arrives, 41. Dies, 151. Ships, number of in 1665, 244. Short, Capt. imprisoned, &c. 77. Shrimpton, Col. writ of intrusion, 369. Shirley, William, fucceeds Belcher, ii. 399. Forms an expedition against Louisburgh, 405. Retires to the castle, 439. House of representatives resolve to stand by him, 433. Returns to town, 434. Shute, Samuei, governor, ii. 215. Arrives, 217. Controverfy with house of representatives, 231. Negatives the speaker, 233. Diffolves the court, 260. Leaves the province fuddenly, 288. Exhibits articles against the house; 299: Succeeded by governor Burnet, 325. Sickneis the first winter, 19. Skelton, Samuel, first minister of Salem, 10. Small-pox among the Indians, 34. The English, ii. 273. Smith, Ralph, separatist, 10. Soil, opinions about it, 479 to 486. Somers, Sir John, for the colony, 294. Southcoif. Southcott, Thomas, a patentee, 8. Speaker, dispute about him, ii. 149. Springfield called Agawam, 98. Burnt by the Indians, 295. Stevenion, Marmaduke, a quaker, hanged, 200. Stillingfleet, Dr. his remark, 228. Stone, Mr. arrives, 34. At Hartford, 99. Stone, Capt. killed by Indians, 45. Storm, remarkable, 53. Stoughton, Ifrael, affistant, 61. Commands against Pequods, 76. His death, 144. Stoughton, William, agent, 312. Profecutes witches, ii. 23. Commander in chief, 81, 121. Death, 125. Hischaracter, 127. Stuyvefant, Dutch governor, 158, 159. Suffolk, county, 117. Sunderland, lord, would not admit a houfe of reprefentatives, 367. Subjection civil, notions of it, 251. Sudbury fettled, 89. Symonds, Samuel, affistant, 117. Deputy governor, 270. Synod, 67, 68, 69, 225, 324. T.

TAILER, William, lieut. governor, ii. 200. 368. Dies, 381. Temple, Sir Thomas, begs the lives of condemned quakers, 200.

Recommended by N. Fiennes, 206.

Temple, Capt. Robert, commander of forces eastward, ii. 297. Telt, New-England, 431.

Thurloe fends orders to proclaim Richard Cromwell, 209. Tilton, Peter, a zealous deputy, 331.

Titles to lands queffioned, 359.

Town, a fortified one projected, 23.

Trade, flate of it in 1639, 91. Flourishing, 189. In 1670, 269, In 1750, ii. 441.

Trees, referved by charter. ii. 253.

V.

VANE, Henry, arrives, 41. Governor, 53. Supported by Mr. Cotton, 53. Diffembles, 54. Peculiar tenets, 57. Winthrop's interest too strong for him, 61. Shews his refentment, 62. Returns to England, 63. Character, 64 to 67.

Vassall, William, assistant, 17. Further account of him, 145. Veils worn by Salem women, 430.

Vetch, Samuel, tried, ii. 154. Colonel of forces against Canada, 176. Governor of Nova-Scotia, 184.

Uncas, Mohegin fachem, 136, 143.

Underhill, John, captain, 76. An enthusiast, 77. Chofen governor of Exeter and Dover, 107.

Union of the colonies, 124 to 126.

VOL. II.

Nn

WADSWORTH,

537

W.

WADSWORTH, Benjamin, college prefident, ii. 175. Wadfworth, Capt. killed and his company, 305. Walker, Sir Hovenden's, expedition, ii. 190. Walley, John, commands land forces against Canada, 401. Journal, 554. Ward, Nath. fimple cobler of Agawam, 120. Warwick, Earl of, 7. Warwick, Countels of, benefactor, 18. Warren, Commodore, ii. 414. His testimony, 422. Watts, Sarah, claims 26th part of Maffachusets colony, ii. 225. Washburn, John, secretary, 10. Weld, Thomas, agent, 98. Difmissed, 149. Wells, action there, 67. Wequash, a christian Indian, but betrays his countrymen, 77. Weft, fecretary under Andros, 358. West, vice admiral, 6. Westbrook, Colonel, ii. 294. 302. Weston's plantation, 5. Broke up and he cast away, &c. 6. Whaley the regicide, fo called, 213. Wharton, Lord, friend to New-England, 389. Wheat first blassed, 229. Wheeler, Sir Francis's expedition, ii. 71. Wheelwright, John, antihomian, 55. Banified, 70. At Hampton and Salifbury, 74. At Exeter, 106. Whetcomb Simon, a patentee, 8. White, counfellor, his opinion, 13. White, John, encourages planters, 8. White, Peregrine, first born child, his death, ii. 148. White hills first explored, 114. Whiting, Mr. a minister, killed, ii. 105. Wiggins, Capt. affiltant, 160. Wilks, Francis, agent, ii. 353. Willard, Jofiah, fecretary, ii. 222. Willard, Samuel, vice prefident of the college, 79. Willard, Simon, commander of forces, 186. Willett, Thomas, referree between the English and Dutch, 159. Willoughby, Francis, affiftant, 160. Deputy governor, 258. Death, 269. Williams, Roger, makes diffurbance at Salem, 37. Banifhed and removes to Providence, 38. Sheiters Gorton, 117. Gives notice of plots among the Indians, 139. Williams, John, minister of Deerfield, his captivity, 138. William and Mary, their accession most joyful news to New-England, 387.

Willon,

Wilfon, John, minister, 22. His zeal, 61. Death and character, 258.

Willon, Deborah, a quaker, whipped, 204.

Winflow, Edward, principal of New-Plimouth planters, 5. Agent, 149. His death, 187.

Winflow, Jolias, feizes Indian princes, 276. Governor of Plimouth, 286. General in Naraganset fight, 299.

Winflow, Capt. Jofias, killed by Indians, ii. 307.

Winthrop, John, first engages, 12. Elected governor, 14. Account of his family, 14. Travels on foot through the woods, 21. Is called to account and honorably acquitted, 40. Engaged with Mr. Vane and the opinionist, 55 to 75. Governor, 61. Very popular, 62. Overrules at the fynod, 68. Great concern at his apprehended danger, 129. Called to answer, 147. Death and character, 151.

Winthrop, John, commiffioned by Lord Say and Seal, 47.

Winthrop Wait, agent, ii. 129. Death' 223.

Wife, minister of lpswich, imprisoned, 366.

Wifwall, Mr. agent for Plimouth, 405.

Witches executed, ii. 53. 58. 59.

Women at Oyster-river gallant, ii. 163.

Woodward, Samuel, fecretary, 212. Religns, 223. Writs of intrulion, 369.

Y.

YORK county, 177. Government there, 260. Town defiroyed, 405.

Young, Sir John, Patentee, 8.

